Police shoot man with assault rifle near Occupy protest
New video shows Houston police shooting 21-year-old Joshua Twohig near where Occupy protesters were gathered

By PoliceOne Staff, November 29, 2011

Recently-released video captured the shooting of a man wielding an assault rifle near a Houston Occupy protest in a downtown park last week.

21-year-old Joshua Anthony Twohig fired off several shots inside Tranquility Park on November 21. After several attempts to get Twohig to drop his rifle, police fired on him, hitting him several times. Twohig was taken to the hospital and treated for non life-threatening injuries.

According to CNN, bicycle officers A. Cantos and H. Lam were on patrol when they heard gunshots and saw Twohig standing on a bridge near the park's fountains and pond holding a weapon. As they approached, he fired his weapon into the pond and then gestured as though he was intending to commit suicide, screaming "Shoot me, shoot me".

Twohig is charged with aggravated assault against a public servant.

Video shows Houston police shooting armed man

CNN, November 29, 2011

Video has surfaced of Houston police officers shooting an armed man in a downtown park.

Police said 21-year-old Joshua Anthony Twohig was armed with a rifle and fired several shots inside Tranquility Park near an area where Occupy Houston protesters were gathered on November 21.

Houston police said they shot Twohig after attempts were made to have him drop his weapon. He suffered several gunshot wounds and was transported to a hospital with nonlife-threatening injuries. Twohig is charged with aggravated assault against a public servant.

Bicycle officers A. Cantos and H. Lam said they were on patrol when they heard gunshots and saw Twohig standing on a bridge near the park's fountains and pond holding a weapon. When the officers approached the scene and told Twohig to drop his rifle, they said he fired his weapon into the pond and then gestured as if he was intending to commit suicide. Police said Twohig then screamed "shoot me, shoot me" toward the officers.

At about this point, police said a witness began recording video of the incident, which CNN obtained from a Houston TV station.

The video shows Twohig dressed in a suit holding a gun to his head. Officers are heard on the video shouting commands to Twohig before they shot him.

CNN affiliate KTRK reports it spoke with Twohig's family after the incident. They did not want to comment about the shooting and told KTRK not to contact them again. KTRK said the name of an attorney for Twohig has not been released at this point.

"We don't know his motives - that being said, he was not a member of the Occupy movement that we know of," Occupy Houston protester Dustin Phipps told KTRK.

"I'm glad that the gentleman did not point his gun at all these innocent people here," witness David Loeser told KTRK.

Occupy DC remains active in and around McPherson Square and Freedom Plaza. The group has planned an event called “Occupy the Courts” for 20 January. Protest activity is expected to be peaceful.

Increased pedestrian traffic through Washington Union Station can be expected as protesters utilize Metro to participate in the event. Amtrak ridership may also increase as protesters, especially along the Northeast Corridor, travel to attend the events.

EMERGING ISSUES IN THE OCCUPY MOVEMENT

December 2, 2011

This bulletin is a joint product of the Major Cities Intelligence Commanders Group (MCC ICG Sub-Committee) and the Southern Nevada Counterterrorism Center (SNCTC). Please send information regarding your jurisdiction every Monday to A3179S@lvmpd.com, K4294F@lvmpd.com and M13296G@lvmpd.com. All information contained will be treated as open source information. Please provide citations if applicable.

Tactics and Strategies

Las Vegas – Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department

- 21 arrests involved in one incident. Arrestees were predetermined by the Occupy group. There have been no other arrests or incidents to date.
- The Las Vegas Occupy has been granted a 90-day permit extension at their current site that expires February 20, 2012.
- “Mic checks” over Black Friday weekend, were conducted at three local malls. A “mic check” is when one person shouts out a message that is repeated by a crowd. <http://www.lvrj.com/news/occupy-las-vegas-protesters-direct-message-at-mall-crowds-134509688.html> Video of “mic check” located: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fxxEtc1UWIE>

Denver – Denver Police Department

- For the first time the Denver movement has incorporated children into their marches as a themed event. Past marches have been taken to the street and blocked traffic, but this one stayed on the sidewalks around a park and used crosswalks when crossing streets.
- Black Friday – Woodland Park, CO a bomb threat caused the local Walmart to evacuate customers while store was searched for several hours, effectively shutting down the business. http://www.kdvr.com/news/sns-ap-co-walmartbombthreat.0.765935.story?track=rss&utm_source=twitterfeed&utm_medium=twitter&utm_campaign=Feed%3A+around-colorado+%28KDVR+-+Around+Colorado%29

Minneapolis – Minneapolis Police Department

- Efforts to disrupt shopping may have had limited effect. Overall retail sales were up in 2011 as compared to 2010.
- The cold weather may be driving participants indoors. There is also some effort to move the protest into vacant/foreclosed homes.

Phoenix – Phoenix Police Department

- There have been approximately 91 arrests since the beginning of the movement.
- Phoenix PD has established an excellent rapport with the Occupy movement through a Community Response Squad. There are plain clothes detectives that act as liaisons with various community groups to include the Occupy protesters. They do not take any enforcement action; they merely communicate and inform the protesters of the law and how we can work together.
- There has been reporting that the Occupy Phoenix movement may be moving to nearby Tempe, AZ or to a private residence and that Occupy protesters from colder climates will be relocating to Arizona. As of yet that has not happened.

EMERGING ISSUES IN THE OCCUPY MOVEMENT

December 2, 2011

Nationwide Trends

- The use of “mic checks” has been a new trend as a way to send out a message. However, the messages have been loud and disruptive. Demonstrators have been conducting “mic checks” indoors due to weather conditions and at locations such as malls where many people are shopping for the holiday season. President Obama was “mic checked” during his speech in Manchester, New Hampshire. http://www.cbsnews.com/8301-503544_162-57329652-503544/mic-check-occupy-protesters-interrupt-obama/

Upcoming Events

Nationwide

- January 20th – “Occupy the Courts” a one-day march at Federal courthouses nationwide during normal business hours to protest the expansion of corporate personhood rights. Locations for this protest will include the United States Supreme Court in Washington D.C.

Las Vegas

- Month of December – “Occupy December” on the Las Vegas Strip. Protesters are planning to protest for a fairer gaming tax rate. Every afternoon, there would be a presence by occupiers with a specific message the group is trying to convey. This event is scheduled to occur every afternoon during the month of December. <http://occupylv.org/topics/occupy-strip>
- December 2nd (11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.)– The occupylasvegas.org website is reporting they will conduct a “mic check” at the University of Nevada Las Vegas (UNLV) Board of Regents meeting. <http://occupylasvegas.org/?event=mic-check-college-administrators>

Denver

- December 3rd (11:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.) - A counterdemonstration to Occupy Wall Street is scheduled on the steps of the state Capitol-just east of where Occupy Denver has been hanging out. <http://blogs.denverpost.com/thespot/2011/11/28/liberty-activists-to-hold-ows-counterdemonstration-in-denver/47944/>
- December 6th – Focus is on foreclosed properties, but at this time there are no announced plans on how they will do this.
- December 10th – 17th “Alternative Day of Action on Human Rights” - “We would like to propose the week starting on the 10th of December (10/12 – 17/12) as a time for alternative forms of protest which will be found after a debate between all of us. The idea is to participate in proposing new forms of action with a creative spirit: we can organize public forums and workshops, flash-mobs, we can promote the movement in local schools and neighborhoods or get in contact with humanitarian organizations working with the same goals.

Milwaukee – Milwaukee Police Department

- December 1st (3:00 p.m.) – “Protest Bush Tax Cuts for Ultra Rick 1% R.I.P. Super Committee” located at Federal Courthouse, 517 East Wisconsin Ave.

EMERGING ISSUES IN THE OCCUPY MOVEMENT

December 2, 2011

St. Louis – St. Louis Metropolitan Police Department

- December 6th – National Day for Foreclosures. There are currently no concrete plans; however, they plan on targeting Bank of America for a protest.
- Month of December – “Twelve Days of Occupy/Occupy the Holiday.” The events are not twelve days in a row, but they are planning direct action protests on twelve different days during the month. They state their goal is to “increase visibility around relevant targets during the holiday season.” Their targets include Laclede Gas, Peabody Coal, Bank of America, and Mayor’s Office.

EMERGING ISSUES IN THE OCCUPY MOVEMENT

December 2, 2011

This bulletin is a joint product of the Major Cities Intelligence Commanders Group (MCC ICG Sub-Committee) and the Southern Nevada Counterterrorism Center (SNCTC). Please send information regarding your jurisdiction every Monday to A3179S@lvmpd.com, K4294F@lvmpd.com and M13296G@lvmpd.com. All information contained will be treated as open source information. Please provide citations if applicable.

Tactics and Strategies

Las Vegas – Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department

- 21 arrests involved in one incident. Arrestees were predetermined by the Occupy group. There have been no other arrests or incidents to date.
- The Las Vegas Occupy has been granted a 90-day permit extension at their current site that expires February 20, 2012.
- “Mic checks” over Black Friday weekend, were conducted at three local malls. A “mic check” is when one person shouts out a message that is repeated by a crowd. <http://www.lvrj.com/news/occupy-las-vegas-protesters-direct-message-at-mall-crowds-134509688.html> Video of “mic check” located: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fxxEtc1UWIE>

Denver – Denver Police Department

- For the first time the Denver movement has incorporated children into their marches as a themed event. Past marches have been taken to the street and blocked traffic, but this one stayed on the sidewalks around a park and used crosswalks when crossing streets.
- Black Friday – Woodland Park, CO a bomb threat caused the local Walmart to evacuate customers while store was searched for several hours, effectively shutting down the business. http://www.kdvr.com/news/sns-ap-co-walmartbombthreat.0.765935.story?track=rss&utm_source=twitterfeed&utm_medium=twitter&utm_campaign=Feed%3A+around-colorado+%28KDVR+-+Around+Colorado%29

- Efforts to disrupt shopping may have had limited effect. Overall retail sales were up in 2011 as compared to 2010.
- The cold weather may be driving participants indoors. There is also some effort to move the protest into vacant/foreclosed homes.

Phoenix – Phoenix Police Department

- There have been approximately 91 arrests since the beginning of the movement.
- Phoenix PD has established an excellent rapport with the Occupy movement through a Community Response Squad. There are plain clothes detectives that act as liaisons with various community groups to include the Occupy protesters. They do not take any enforcement action; they merely communicate and inform the protesters of the law and how we can work together.
- There has been reporting that the Occupy Phoenix movement may be moving to nearby Tempe, AZ or to a private residence and that Occupy protesters from colder climates will be relocating to Arizona. As of yet that has not happened.

EMERGING ISSUES IN THE OCCUPY MOVEMENT

December 2, 2011

Nationwide Trends

- The use of “mic checks” has been a new trend as a way to send out a message. However, the messages have been loud and disruptive. Demonstrators have been conducting “mic checks” indoors due to weather conditions and at locations such as malls where many people are shopping for the holiday season. President Obama was “mic checked” during his speech in Manchester, New Hampshire. http://www.cbsnews.com/8301-503544_162-57329652-503544/mic-check-occupy-protesters-interrupt-obama/

Upcoming Events

Nationwide

- January 20th – “Occupy the Courts” a one-day march at Federal courthouses nationwide during normal business hours to protest the expansion of corporate personhood rights. Locations for this protest will include the United States Supreme Court in Washington D.C.

Please send information regarding your jurisdiction every Monday to A3179S@lvmpd.com, K4294F@lvmpd.com and M13296G@lvmpd.com. All information contained will be treated as open source information. Tactics and Strategies

Buffalo – Buffalo Police Department

- Police shut down a second Occupy Buffalo encampment that was reported to be created by a splinter group. The second downtown location was near Lafayette square. The site was selected because it is near a military recruiting office and offices of major bank corporations. One person was arrested. <http://www.buffalonews.com/city/communities/buffalo/article683684.ece>

Denver – Denver Police Department

- The Earth Liberation Front (ELF) sponsored a march entitled “The Elf Revolt,” in which “Elves” joined forces with individuals dressed as Santa Claus, associated with www.santacon.info. The Elves and Santa’s marched to an upscale mall in Denver and dispersed. At one point they took over a restroom and were escorted out. One arrest was made. According to their press office, “Elves” is a collective name for autonomous individuals who covert cells who use economic sabotage and guerilla warfare to stop the exploitation and destruction of the environment. <http://colorado.indymedia.org/node/8385>

Houston – Houston Police Department

- A judge ruled that no probable cause existed to detain Occupy Houston protestors on felony charges of using a criminal instrument. This ruling was made based on the event that occurred on December 12th, in which members of Occupy Houston rallied at the Port of Houston as part of a national day of action by the Occupy Wall Street movement. Seven demonstrators were arrested and charged with using “criminal instrument,” a felony, because they linked their arms together with PVC pipe. <http://blog.chron.com/newswatch/2011/12/occupy-houston-protesters-call-felony-indictments-fear-and-intimidation-tactics/>

Las Vegas – Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department

- Occupy protestors lined the sidewalk in front Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department headquarters. Their website stated that “This action is to take notice of the police brutality that happens to citizens not just here in Las Vegas, but the nation as a whole.” The event concluded without incident. <http://www.mynews3.com/content/news/story/Occupy-Vegas-NAACP-official-protest-Metros-recent/HEQFAwkJlkOAJciSUHWqJA.csp>
- Occupy protestors demonstrated at Nevada Public Utilities Commission to “Protest their continual approval of rate hikes for Nevada Energy.” The event concluded without incident. <http://www.lasvegassun.com/videos/2011/nov/09/5961/>

Long Beach – Long Beach Police Department

- Occupy protestors attempted to disrupt Port of LA and Port of Long Beach activities by blocking the flow of traffic into and out of the Port. The group, consisting of 250-350 protestors, joined forces and met near the Queen Mary and proceeded to march to the SSA Marine Terminal. The terminal was selected because of its ties to Goldman Sachs Bank. 2 arrests were made, one for resisting arrest and one for failure to disperse. <http://latimesblogs.latimes.com/lanow/2011/12/occupy-protesters-cleared-port-of-long-beach.html>

New York – NYPD Shield

- An advertisement calling for a violent action was posted on the internet blog Unelected.org. The blog stated “We will unite to form a black bloc of epic proportions on Wall Street. We will proceed through Manhattan in a manner benefitting the 1%.” The outcome of the event is unknown at this time. <http://www.unelected.org/>

EMERGING ISSUES IN THE OCCUPY MOVEMENT

December 22, 2011

Oakland– Oakland Police Department

- A resolution directing city leaders “to use whatever lawful tools we have” to keep protestors from shutting down the port was rejected due to the City Council only having 4 of the 6 votes needed to pass. Tactics and Strategies

Buffalo – Buffalo Police Department

- Police shut down a second Occupy Buffalo encampment that was reported to be created by a splinter group. The second downtown location was near Lafayette square. The site was selected because it is near a military recruiting office and offices of major bank corporations. One person was arrested. <http://www.buffalonews.com/city/communities/buffalo/article683684.ece>

Denver – Denver Police Department

- The Earth Liberation Front (ELF) sponsored a march entitled “The Elf Revolt,” in which “Elves” joined forces with individuals dressed as Santa Claus, associated with www.santacon.info. The Elves and Santa’s marched to an upscale mall in Denver and dispersed. At one point they took over a restroom and were escorted out. One arrest was made. According to their press office, “Elves” is a collective name for autonomous individuals who covert cells who use economic sabotage and guerilla warfare to stop the exploitation and destruction of the environment. <http://colorado.indymedia.org/node/8385>

Houston – Houston Police Department

- A judge ruled that no probable cause existed to detain Occupy Houston protestors on felony charges of using a criminal instrument. This ruling was made based on the event that occurred on December 12th, in which members of Occupy Houston rallied at the Port of Houston as part of a national day of action by the Occupy Wall Street movement. Seven demonstrators were arrested and charged with using “criminal instrument,” a felony, because they linked their arms together with PVC pipe. <http://blog.chron.com/newswatch/2011/12/occupy-houston-protesters-call-felony-indictments-fear-and-intimidation-tactics/>

Las Vegas – Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department

- Occupy protestors lined the sidewalk in front Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department headquarters. Their website stated that “This action is to take notice of the police brutality that happens to citizens not just here in Las Vegas, but the nation as a whole.” The event concluded without incident. <http://www.mynews3.com/content/news/story/Occupy-Vegas-NAACP-official-protest-Metros-recent/HEQFAwkJkOAJciSUHWqJA.csp>

Long Beach – Long Beach Police Department

- Occupy protestors attempted to disrupt Port of LA and Port of Long Beach activities by blocking the flow of traffic into and out of the Port. The group, consisting of 250-350 protestors, joined forces and met near the Queen Mary and proceeded to march to the SSA Marine Terminal. The terminal was selected because of its ties to Goldman Sachs Bank. 2 arrests were made, one for resisting arrest and one for failure to disperse. <http://latimesblogs.latimes.com/lanow/2011/12/occupy-protesters-cleared-port-of-long-beach.html>

New York – NYPD Shield

- An advertisement calling for a violent action was posted on the internet blog Unelected.org. The blog stated “We will unite to form a black bloc of epic proportions on Wall Street. We will proceed through Manhattan in a manner benefitting the 1%.” The outcome of the event is unknown at this time. <http://www.unelected.org/>

Tactics and Strategies

Boston – Boston Regional Intelligence Center

- Occupy Boston demonstrators protested outside of the Federal Reserve with several demonstrators dressed in “black boc” attire and proceeded to taunt Boston Police Department Mobile Operations Unit personnel. No arrests were made and the demonstration concluded without incident.
- The Denver Black Cross Anarchists, Operation Cop Watch and Street Medics have pulled their support for the Occupy Denver movement. They posted, “As of December 4th, our collective has decided to no longer support Occupy Denver. This means we will not be providing our legal line for Occupy actions; fundraising for the movement; encouraging our members, friends and allies to get involved; as well as serve roles such as CopWatch and Medics. This is in solidarity and coordination with other ally formations such as West Denver CopWatch and the Colorado Street Medics.” While tensions between the anarchists and Occupy movement participants have been observed, this is the first official notice of the break between the groups.
<http://denverabc.wordpress.com/2011/12/09/denver-abc-statement-on-occupy-denver/>

Los Angeles – Los Angeles Police Department

- Undercover police officers infiltrated Occupy LA’s tent city last month. Police stated that there were reports of individuals advocating violence against police and in that vein, it was necessary to investigate. LAPD stated it was not aimed at spying or monitoring those engaged with First Amendment activities.

New Orleans – New Orleans Police Department

- A 7-day temporary restraining order was granted to Occupy New Orleans by a federal judge, allowing it to reoccupy a downtown park for the next week. An attorney working on behalf of the protesters said that no other Occupy group in the nationwide protests has been granted a judicial permission to reoccupy.

EMERGING ISSUES IN THE OCCUPY MOVEMENT

San Francisco - San Francisco Police Department

- An article was posted online describing the emergence of “Pop Up Occupations.” Pop Ups are mobile and small in nature that allow demonstrators to be present in high traffic areas where it wouldn’t typically be possible to have a presence aside of a few members. The Pop Ups change spaces every few days to various protest sites and consist of a tiny kitchen, mobile library, information table, first aid kits, blankets, and sleeping bags. It serves as an education site to assist in educating the public at large on the abuses of the various banks and corporations in the community. <http://scottrossi.tumblr.com/post/13586976835/whack-a-mole-revolution-a-guide-to-pop-up-occupations>

Nationwide Trends

- Occupy Wall Street’s latest effort to attract immigrants is a march for immigrant workers this weekend in New York City. The rally is to raise awareness on immigrant issues and to draw immigrants to a social movement that has largely focused on corporate greed. It takes place on International Migrants Day. The march is being carefully planned in an attempt to prevent the mass arrests that have occurred at other large Occupy rallies across the country.
- Occupy protesters faced a growing criticism over their attempt to shut down the ports of America’s west coast, with unions condemning the action left hundreds of its members unable to work. Although terminals in Longview, Oakland, and Portland were shut down, plans to shut down the entire west coast failed after other protests saw relatively small turnouts. <http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2011/dec/13/occupy-activists-failed-port-shutdown?newsfeed=true>
- There is a possibility of national migration to other Occupy encampments due to the eviction and/or dismantling of current Occupy sites.
- The use of “mic checks” has been a new trend as a way to send out a message. However, the messages have been loud and disruptive. Demonstrators have been conducting “mic checks” indoors due to weather conditions and at locations such as malls where many people are shopping for the holiday season. Republican presidential candidate Newt Gingrich was interrupted within seconds of taking the stage at the University of Iowa to argue for the centrality of brain research to his domestic policy. <http://www.theatlantic.com/politics/archive/2011/12/occupy-gingrich-newt-gets-heckled-by-protesters-at-brains-talk/250023/>

One officer was struck in the left eye with an unknown object. The officer was treated at the scene and taken to a local hospital as a precaution. The second officer was cut on his left thumb when an unknown person hurled a star-shaped glass object at the officer. In a separate incident, a police spokesman said protestors threw a liquid - possibly vinegar - in the faces of four officers during a confrontation. <http://www.nydailynews.com/new-york/mayor-bloomberg-declares-victory-occupy-wall-street-thousands-swarm-manhattan-all-day-rallies-article-1.979111>

Boston – Boston Regional Intelligence Center

- Occupy Boston demonstrators protested outside of the Federal Reserve with several demonstrators dressed in “black boc” attire and proceeded to taunt Boston Police Department Mobile Operations Unit personnel. No arrests were made and the demonstration concluded without incident.

Denver – Denver Police Department

- The Denver Black Cross Anarchists, Operation Cop Watch and Street Medics have pulled their support for the Occupy Denver movement. They posted, “As of December 4th, our collective has decided to no longer support Occupy Denver. This means we will not be providing our legal line for Occupy actions; fundraising for the movement; encouraging our members, friends and allies to get involved; as well as serve roles such as CopWatch and Medics. This is in solidarity and coordination with other ally formations such as West Denver CopWatch and the Colorado Street Medics.” While tensions between the anarchists and Occupy movement participants have been observed, this is the first official notice of the break between the groups.
<http://denverabc.wordpress.com/2011/12/09/denver-abc-statement-on-occupy-denver/>

Los Angeles – Los Angeles Police Department

- Undercover police officers infiltrated Occupy LA’s tent city last month. Police stated that there were reports of individuals advocating violence against police and in that vein, it was necessary to investigate. LAPD stated it was not aimed at spying or monitoring those engaged with First Amendment activities.
<http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2011/dec/11/undercover-police-spied-occupy-la>

New Orleans – New Orleans Police Department

- A 7-day temporary restraining order was granted to Occupy New Orleans by a federal judge, allowing it to reoccupy a downtown park for the next week. An attorney working on behalf of the protesters said that no other Occupy group in the nationwide protests has been granted a judicial permission to reoccupy.
<http://www.courthousenews.com/2011/12/08/42060.htm>

EMERGING ISSUES IN THE OCCUPY MOVEMENT

December 8, 2011

This bulletin is a joint product of the Major Cities Intelligence Commanders Group (MCC ICG Sub-Committee) and the Southern Nevada Counterterrorism Center (SNCTC). Please send information regarding your jurisdiction every Monday to A3179S@lvmpd.com, K4294F@lvmpd.com and M13296G@lvmpd.com. All information contained will be treated as open source information. Tactics and Strategies

Las Vegas – Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department

- Activists staged sit-ins in the offices of two Nevada lawmakers among selected others in Congress to discuss various issues such as unemployment, mortgage crisis, and economic equality. <http://www.lvrj.com/news/-occupy-protesters-stage-sit-ins-at-heller-heck-offices-135142793.html>

Long Beach – Long Beach Police Department

- Occupy Long Beach has been attempting to have a city ordinance amended in order to allow a free speech zone in the park 24/7. Currently the park closing is at 10pm and all protesters must vacate. Fifteen people have been arrested and charged with being in the park past closing time or violating the anti-camping ordinance. <http://latimesblogs.latimes.com/lanow/2011/12/occupy-long-beach-faces-park-ordinance-hurdles.html>

Phoenix – Phoenix Police Department

- At least six Occupy protesters were arrested after a rowdy protest outside West Kierland Resort. Police officers used pepper spray twice to stop aggressive groups. <http://www.fox11az.com/news/local/Protesting-conservative-summit-134864523.html>

New Orleans – New Orleans Police Department

- Police officers marched into an encampment of protesters and homeless people in a local park, forcing dozens of occupants and removing tents in a peaceful eviction. New Orleans Mayor Mitch Landrieu stated, "You can see from the way this was conducted it was very different from what happened around the country." He was referring to recent violent clashes between police and protesters in other cities. <http://www.foxnews.com/us/2011/12/06/police-clear-out-occupy-new-orleans-camp/>

San Francisco – San Francisco Police Department

- Police officers arrested 70 people and took down about 100 tents for illegally lodging in the plaza and failure to disperse. <http://www.usatoday.com/news/nation/story/2011-12-07/occupy-san-francisco/51692592/1>

Nationwide Trends

- There is a possibility of national migration to other Occupy encampments due to the eviction and/or dismantling of current Occupy sites.
- The use of "mic checks" has been a new trend as a way to send out a message. However, the messages have been loud and disruptive. Demonstrators have been conducting "mic checks" indoors due to weather conditions and at locations such as malls where many people are shopping for the holiday season. President Obama was "mic checked" during his speech in Manchester, New Hampshire. http://www.cbsnews.com/8301-503544_162-57329652-503544/mic-check-occupy-protesters-interrupt-obama/

Las Vegas – Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department

- 21 arrests involved in one incident. Arrestees were predetermined by the Occupy group. There have been no other arrests or incidents to date.
- The Las Vegas Occupy has been granted a 90-day permit extension at their current site that expires February 20, 2012.
- “Mic checks” over Black Friday weekend, were conducted at three local malls. A “mic check” is when one person shouts out a message that is repeated by a crowd. <http://www.lvrj.com/news/occupy-las-vegas-protesters-direct-message-at-mall-crowds-134509688.html> Video of “mic check” located: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fxxEtc1UWIE>

Denver – Denver Police Department

- For the first time the Denver movement has incorporated children into their marches as a themed event. Past marches have been taken to the street and blocked traffic, but this one stayed on the sidewalks around a park and used crosswalks when crossing streets.
- Black Friday – Woodland Park, CO a bomb threat caused the local Walmart to evacuate customers while store was searched for several hours, effectively shutting down the business. <http://www.kdvr.com/news/sns-ap-co-colorado+%28KDVR+-+Around+Colorado%29>

- Efforts to disrupt shopping may have had limited effect. Overall retail sales were up in 2011 as compared to 2010.
- The cold weather may be driving participants indoors. There is also some effort to move the protest into vacant/foreclosed homes.

Phoenix – Phoenix Police Department

- There have been approximately 91 arrests since the beginning of the movement.
- Phoenix PD has established an excellent rapport with the Occupy movement through a Community Response Squad. There are plain clothes detectives that act as liaisons with various community groups to include the Occupy protesters. They do not take any enforcement action; they merely communicate and inform the protesters of the law and how we can work together.
- There has been reporting that the Occupy Phoenix movement may be moving to nearby Tempe, AZ or to a private residence and that Occupy protesters from colder climates will be relocating to Arizona. As of yet that has not happened.

- December 6th – Focus is on foreclosed properties, but at this time there are no announced plans on how they will do this.
- December 10th – 17th “Alternative Day of Action on Human Rights” - “We would like to propose the week starting on the 10th of December (10/12 – 17/12) as a time for alternative forms of protest which will be found after a debate between all of us. The idea is to participate in proposing new forms of action with a creative spirit: we can organize public forums and workshops, flash-mobs, we can promote the movement in local schools and neighborhoods or get in contact with humanitarian organizations working with the same goals.

Milwaukee – Milwaukee Police Department

- December 1st (3:00 p.m.) – “Protest Bush Tax Cuts for Ultra Rick 1% R.I.P. Super Committee” located at Federal Courthouse, 517 East Wisconsin Ave.

They state their goal is to “increase visibility around relevant targets during the holiday season.” Their targets include Laclede Gas, Peabody Coal, Bank of America, and Mayor’s Office.

First at the Financial Enforcement Unit of Paris and then, in 1994, at the Criminal Investigation Dpt of Paris, Homicide & Counter Terrorism Bureau. I'm graduated from the FBINA 245 th session. At last, I was leading an investigation team in the Counter Terrorism Unit of Paris.

Regarding the events planned for tomorrow October 15th all around the world, our attention is focused on Washington DC protests and demonstrations. We are especially interested to follow several organizations based on "occupy wall street" in NYC. France is also targeted by this kind of demonstration and many Police units are following the evolution of these groups.

I made some Internet searches and my attention was focused on the "stop the machine" movement and "OccupyDC" group who settled in Freedom Plaza and Mc Pherson Square.

It could be very interesting for us to be aware of the evolution of this groups in an other way than the media reports.

I will really appreciate, if you could give me a contact in your Intelligence Division who could explain me their history and claims.

In a other way, and to compare our both Law Enforcement operatives process, I will be very pleased if you allow me to read your arrests statistics and actions linked to these protests.

Thanks in advance for your answer.

Hope see you soon

Kimberlee,

Below is information on CSPD interaction with the Occupy Wall Street Group from Colorado Springs. We haven't reached the 500,000 population threshold, but we are around 422,000 in 2012.

If you have any additional questions, please feel free to contact Acting Commander Pat Rigdon (rigdonja@ci.colospgs.co.us), who has been dealing with the group since they set up "camp".

Have a great weekend!

Anna,

Here is what I have:

1. Colorado Springs currently has one camp in one area. The Occupy group has obtained a revocable permit to keep pop-up style tents in the public right-of-way. The group is not in the park itself, but on the sidewalk surrounding the park.

2. CSPD has made 10 arrests. Only two were required to be booked based on the nature of the offense. The others were served and released.
3. There have been no modifications of City Ordinance, only the issuance of the permit. The permit is valid for 30 days at which time the group can apply for renewal.
4. We have had close liaison with the group using our Homeless Outreach Team as a primary contact point. We have also "ramped up" preparation and planning on two occasions when there was rumor of civil disobedience by the group. Otherwise we respond to calls in a normal fashion.

Let me know if you need anything else.

Subject: [IALEP-L] Occupy Wall Street Information Requested

Good afternoon fellow IALEPers:

We have been tasked with collecting information from law enforcement agencies on Occupy Wall Street camps across the country. If you work for a large agency (city population greater than 500,000) would you please answer the following questions:

2. How is your agency responding to the demonstrators (e.g. citing and releasing, booking, etc)?
3. Has your city modified or changed its ordinance for staying on city property (e.g. parks) after hours as a result of this "occupation"? If so, how? Please be specific.
4. Has your agency made any other special enforcement or modifications to the day-to-day way of policing as a result of this "occupation"? If so, how? Please be specific.

Any and all information is greatly appreciated. Please respond to Ms. Katherine Foley directly at katherine.foley@tucsonaz.gov

Thank you for your time in responding.

1. Anyone having an Occupy Wallstreet type of problem in their city can keep intel tabs on what's going on when and where by some simple Google search tips I use for gathering intel in our area.

If you set up a computer and someone to monitor it, they simply type in "site:twitter.com occupy "city here"" and they will get the feeds of people posting about the occupy movement in that city. Same goes for Facebook. Use "site:facebook.com occupy "city here"" and all of the facebook postings will appear. A very handy intel gathering tool. Introduction

The New Jersey Juvenile Justice Commission (JJJ) understands that gangs and gang related activities impact every community in our State. The JJC works with schools, community organizations and other law enforcement agencies to combat juvenile street gangs and help young people succeed.

The JJC has responded with a comprehensive program that addresses youth gangs at all levels. With funding from the NJ Department of Education, the JJC has developed a cutting-edge education curriculum, entitled Phoenix, that corresponds with the NJ Core Curriculum Standards.

This course can be tailored for youth in secure and residential programs, as well as county-operated detention centers and community-based programs. The workbook-based lessons provide structure and support, and clearly identify the progress of participants. The most important goal of the curriculum is developing self-efficacy skills, thereby allowing juveniles to understand how to react to risky situations, and to think through their actions and responses to avoid future gang involvement.

To expand its reach, the JJC is forming partnerships with communities to train others in the Phoenix curriculum. The JJC is also coordinating with the county offices of probation, as well as the police departments, to build a “safety net” of resources for youth in the community.

Experienced JJC staff are available to conduct workshops. One-day training sessions can be adapted to meet an audience’s specific needs and information level. It can also be expanded to provide more in depth training.

For more information, please contact a member of the

JJC’s Gang Management Unit:

Gang members communicate in many different ways. Speech is the most obvious; however, gang members also make use of nonverbal methods of exchanging thoughts. Graffiti, hand signs, colors, and tattoos are indicators of gang affiliation.

Gang members have their own language, which contains phrases, hand signs, tattoos, markings and graffiti. These often overlap. As a parent, you may not recognize them right away. The items listed as Identifiers in this booklet include types of clothing young people might wear, tattoos and other markings. The items listed as Phrases are expressions young people might say to each other or write on their school notebooks. As a parent, you should familiarize yourself with them, so that you will be alert to them.

Street gangs are targeting young people at an earlier and earlier age. It is critical that you be able to recognize the signs of gang involvement. This booklet is designed to help parents, teachers, and community members spot gang activity in their families, schools and communities. The pages that follow provide you with vivid descriptions that you can use to identify gang activity. If you spot any of these signs, there are professionals available to help you.

There are approximately 2,300 gang members under the age of 15 in New Jersey. Children as young as second and third grade have known gang affiliations. In fact, 46 percent of gang-related incidents occur on school property.

Why do kids join gangs?

Each case is individual, but some reasons include:

- Security, protection and a sense of belonging
- Lack of family, community, or youth support system (too much unsupervised time)
- Sense of status or respect
- Living in a gang infested community or having family members in a gang
- Low self-esteem
- Financial opportunities (i.e. profits from drug distribution and other illegal activities)
- Peer pressure
- Thrill seeking
- Media glorifying violence

Deciphering A Tic-Tac-Toe Code

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

The Tic-Tac-Toe cipher is used by gangs with different affiliations, history, beliefs and ethnicity.

The “Tic-Tac-Toe” code uses geometric designs, usually a “number sign” or “pound sign” also known as an “Octothorpe”, and an “X” shape in combination with a “dot” to create symbols to represent letters of the alphabet. The figures shown in the next slide depict a basic form of this type of code which was initially created by Freemason’s.

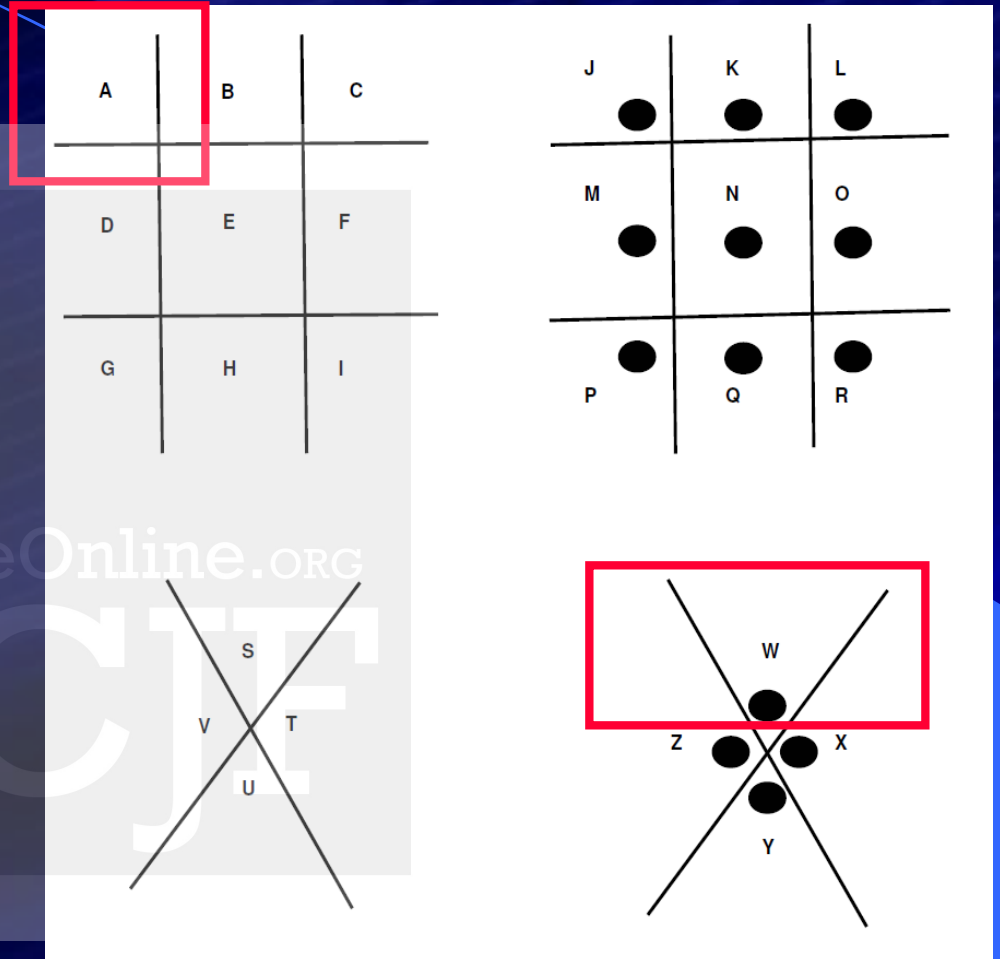

Letters of the alphabet are placed in the open portions of these symbols and then the letters are assigned that shape. This type of code is very flexible because the users can place any letter in any symbol opening. Because of this flexibility and ease of use, a number of gangs use this type of code (or one of the many variations) to send secret messages. This code system has been in use for many decades and continues to attract new users. The challenge here is to determine which shape represents what letter of the alphabet and to determine what variation of the “Tic-Tac-Toe” code is being used.

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

The shape represents the letter!

In this example, the “backwards ‘L’” shape with no “dot” located in the upper left hand portion of the illustration would represent the letter “A”. The “V” shape with a dot located in the lower right hand portion of the illustration would represent the letter “W”.

The shape represents the letter!

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

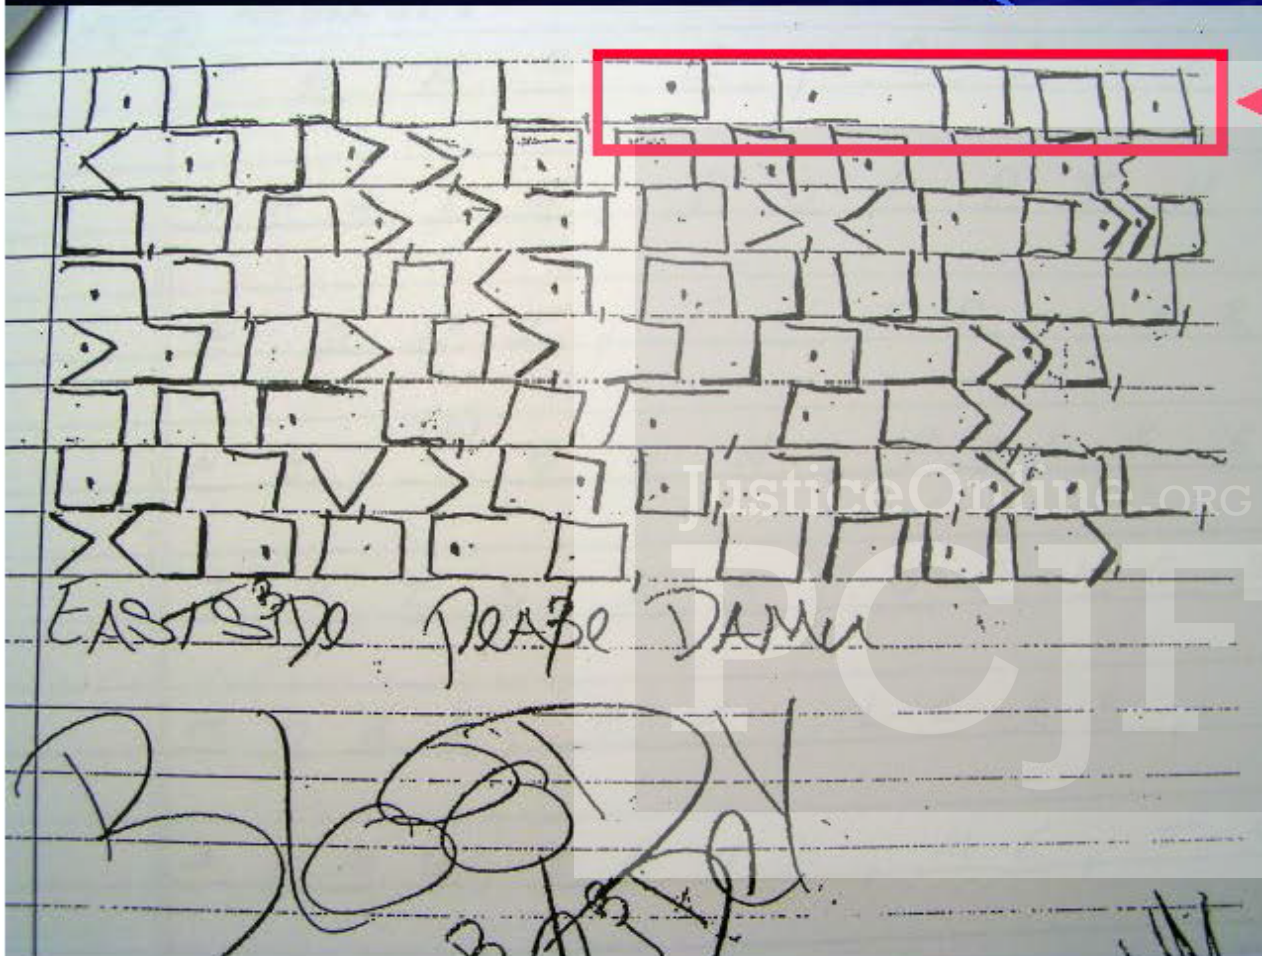

Here is a tic-tac-toe code used by the Bloods Gang.

See how the shapes come from the “pound sign” or “X”?

← BLOOD

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

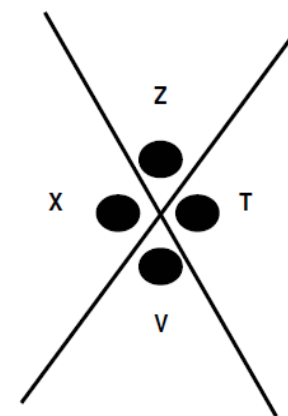

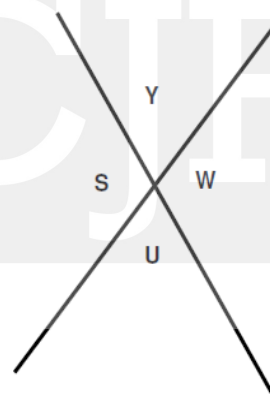

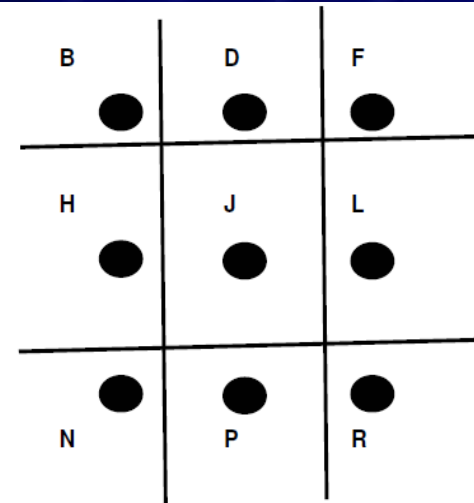

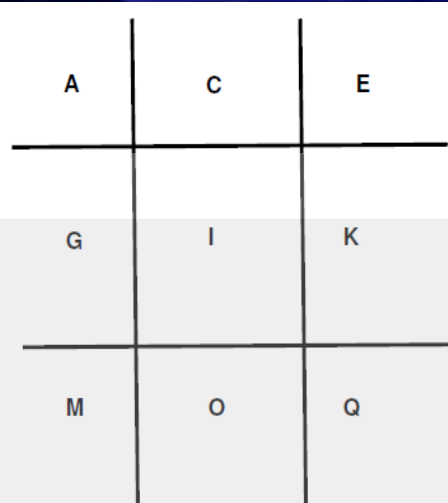

← POPPIN?

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

Here is the symbol template to decipher this Bloods gang document.

A partial translation of this document is shown in the next slide. Note the use of the words “BLOOD” and “POPPIN”.

Also note that the writer is asking for another code: “Swahili Codes”.

Modern day gangs are using this type of code for the same reason it has been used for decades. This code system is flexible, secure, easy to learn and easy to use. It is used by gangs with different affiliations, history, beliefs and ethnicity.

Because of this wide use, law enforcement officers, whether federal, state or local with different types of departments such as police, corrections or probation, should be familiar with the symbols used in the Tic-Tac-Toe cipher.

A Legal Guide to Dispelling the Myths of Use of Force

JusticeOnline.org

PCJF

The purpose of this guide is to dispel many of the commonly held misconceptions about use of force. Each of the commonly held misconceptions is dispelled by established case law. It is not intended to constitute legal advice, but rather to serve as a guide to researching case law relevant to particular aspects concerning use of force. (March 2009)

Myth: The officer must use the minimal amount of force necessary to affect their lawful law enforcement objectives.

Reality: The officer may use that force which is objectively reasonable based upon the totality of circumstances.

In Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 109 S. Ct. 1865, the U.S. Supreme Court established the legal standard for use of force by law enforcement officers. Regardless of jurisdiction, the standard of “objective reasonableness” applies to all law enforcement officers. Law enforcement officers have a constitutional right to use force. In Graham, the court stated:

our Fourth Amendment jurisprudence has long recognized that the right to make an arrest or investigatory stop necessarily carries with it the right to use some degree of physical coercion or threat thereof to effect it. Because the test of reasonableness under the Fourth Amendment is not capable of precise definition or mechanical application, however, its proper application requires careful attention to the facts and circumstances of each particular case, including the severity of the crime at issue, whether the suspect poses an immediate threat to the safety of the officers or others, and whether he is actively resisting arrest or attempting to evade arrest by flight. The “reasonableness” of a particular use of force must be judged from the perspective of a reasonable officer on the scene, rather than with the 20/20 vision of hindsight. The calculus of reasonableness must embody allowance for the fact that police officers are often forced to make split-second judgments – in circumstances that are tense, uncertain, and rapidly evolving – about the amount of force that is necessary in a particular situation. . . .The “reasonableness” inquiry in an excessive force case is an objective one: the question is whether the officers’ actions are “objectively reasonable” in light of the facts and circumstances confronting them, without regard to their underlying intent or motivation.

Myth: Force may only be used to affect a custodial arrest.

Reality: Reasonable force may be used to affect ANY lawful seizure.

Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 396 (1989)

“Our Fourth Amendment jurisprudence has long recognized that the right to make an arrest or investigatory stop necessarily carries with it the right to use some degree of physical coercion or threat thereof to effect it.”

Gallegos v. City of Colorado Springs, 114 F.3d 1024 (10th Cir. 1997)

Two officers attempted to stop a man to inquire about reports of a prowler and other disturbances in the area. When the officers first approached the man, they detected a strong odor of alcohol and observed that he appeared to be distraught and upset. The suspect ignored the officers’ questions and continued to walk down the sidewalk. On three separate occasions, one of the officers grabbed the suspect’s arm in an effort to stop him, and each time, the suspect jerked free and continued to walk away.

When one of the officers grabbed the suspect by the shoulder, the suspect clenched his fists, turned to face the officers, and dropped into a crouch “similar to a wrestler’s position.” In response to the suspect’s actions, one officer applied an arm bar maneuver to the suspect’s right arm, while the second officer grabbed his left arm and initiated a take-down action.

The suspect later filed a lawsuit against the police officers and the department under 42 U.S.C. Section 1983, alleging violation of his Fourth Amendment rights. The suspect claimed that the officers stopped him without reasonable suspicion and used excessive force in the process. The Tenth Circuit ruled that the officers did not violate the suspect’s Fourth Amendment rights because the initial stop of the suspect was an investigative detention supported by a reasonable suspicion that the suspect was involved in criminal activity. Moreover, the court found the level of force used by the officers was reasonable in light of the suspect’s “strange and aggressive conduct.”

Myth: An officer must use the “least intrusive” or “best” option when using force.

Reality: The officer must use a reasonable force option.

Brown v. United States, 256 U.S. 335, 343 (1921) In addition to the guidance provided by Graham, the Supreme Court has long held that an officer need not consider the use of other options when facing a deadly threat. In Brown v. United States the Supreme Court stated, “[d]etached reflection cannot be demanded in the presence of an uplifted knife. Therefore in this Court, at least, it is not a condition of immunity that one in that situation should pause to consider whether a reasonable man might not think it possible to fly with safety or to disable his assailant rather than kill him.”

Plakas v. Drinski, 19 F.3d 1143 (7th Cir. 1994)

In Plakas v. Drinski, a police officer shot and killed a handcuffed subject who attacked the officer with a fireplace poker. In a lawsuit against the police officer and the county, the plaintiff did not dispute that at the moment the officer fired the fatal shot, the suspect was attacking the officer with the poker. Nor was it disputed that shortly before attacking the officer, the subject pointed the poker at the officer and said, "Either you're going to die here, or I'm going to die here."

The primary argument was that the officer could have and should have used alternative methods short of deadly force to resolve the situation. The plaintiff suggested, for example, that one of the officers on the scene had a canister of CS gas on his belt and that there was a K-9 unit in the vicinity that could have been called to the scene to subdue the subject. The U.S. district court granted summary judgment for the police. The appellate court affirmed with the following explanation:

There is no precedent in this Circuit (or any other) which says that the Constitution requires law enforcement officers to use all feasible alternatives to avoid a situation where deadly force can justifiably be used.

There are, however, cases which support the assertion that where deadly force is otherwise justified under the Constitution, there is no constitutional duty to use non-deadly alternatives first.

The court noted that a decision by an officer under these circumstances must be made after the briefest reflection:

As [the suspect] moved toward [the officer], was he supposed to think of an attack dog, of...CS gas, of how fast he could run backwards? Our answer is, and has been, no, because there is too little time for the officer to do so and too much opportunity to second-guess that officer.

Elliott v. Leavitt, 99 F.3d 640 (4th Cir. 1996)

On June 18, 1995, police officer Jason Leavitt stopped motorist Archie Elliott. Elliott smelled of alcohol, and he admitted that he had been drinking excessively. Suspect Elliott failed several sobriety tests and was having trouble walking. Officer Leavitt called for backup, handcuffed suspect Elliott, and advised him that he was under arrest for driving while intoxicated. Officer Leavitt briefly searched Elliott, finding no weapon or other contraband.

Officer Wayne Cheney soon joined Officer Leavitt on the scene. Officer Cheney assisted Officer Leavitt in placing the suspect in the front passenger seat of Officer Leavitt's police car with the seatbelt fastened, the door closed, and the window rolled up. The officers were talking by the passenger side of the car when Officer Leavitt noticed a movement and looked to find the suspect with his finger on the trigger of a small handgun pointed at the officers. Officer Cheney also saw the gun. The suspect was very thin; he had released the seat belt and twisted his arms to the right side of his body to position the weapon. Officer Leavitt yelled, "Gun!" and ordered the suspect to drop it. After he did not respond, Officers Leavitt and Cheney commenced firing, killing the suspect. Twenty-two rounds were fired and Officer Cheney then retrieved the gun, which had remained clasped in the suspect's hand.

Appellees (in this case Elliott's estate) argued that Elliott did not pose a real threat to the officers, noting that his hands were handcuffed behind his back, that he was placed in the front passenger seat with the seatbelt fastened and the window up, and that the officers were outside the car at the time of the shooting. Appellees contended, and the district court agreed, that the officers might have responded differently, such as moving away from the car.

However, the appellate court found:

[t]his suggestion that the officers might have responded differently is exactly the type of judicial second look that the case law prohibits. Furthermore, even if Elliott's specific intent were relevant, it is not clear what other evidence of intent the district court would require -Elliott was pointing his gun at the officers with his finger on the trigger and ignored the order to drop his weapon. Given the officers' proximity to the car, it is also unclear that they could have moved away from the car quickly enough to avoid being shot.

The critical point, however, is precisely that Elliott was "threatening," threatening the lives of Leavitt and Cheney. The Fourth Amendment does not require police officers to wait until a suspect shoots to confirm that a serious threat of harm exists. The court's comment that the officers could have moved away from the car is, unfortunately, a suggestion more reflective of the "peace of a judge's chambers" than of a dangerous and threatening situation on the street.

Defendant police officers responded to a shots fired call. Witnesses directed them to the apartment where the shooter was. The defendants banged and kicked the door, ordering the shooter to open it. The shooter fumbled with the door latch, opened the door, and pointed a gun at the defendants, one of whom shot at the shooter, missing him. The other officer, thinking that the shooter had fired, shot four times at him, one of which dealt the fatal blow.

Plaintiff widow brought an action under 42 U.S.C.S. §1983, alleging that the defendants used greater force than necessary in the situation. The district court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment. On appeal, the court affirmed, holding that defendants did not need to avail themselves of the least intrusive means of responding to an exigent situation; they needed only act within a range of reasonable conduct.

The court held:

Requiring officers to find and choose the least intrusive alternative would require them to exercise superhuman judgment. In the heat of battle with lives potentially in the balance, an officer would not be able to rely on training and common sense to decide what would best accomplish his mission. Instead, he would need to ascertain the least intrusive alternative an inherently subjective determination and choose that option and that option only. Imposing such a requirement would inevitably induce tentativeness by officers, and thus deter police from protecting the public and themselves. It would also entangle the courts in endless second-guessing of police decisions made under stress and subject to the exigencies of the moment.

Officers thus need not avail themselves of the least intrusive means of responding to an exigent situation; they need only act within that range of conduct we identify as reasonable. The officers here clearly did: It's hardly unreasonable for officers to take arms, knock on the door of an apartment and identify themselves as police when an armed man who, they are told, recently fired shots and is acting "crazy" lurks inside.

Id. at 915 (footnote omitted).

Myth: A suspect must cause harm to an officer before an officer can use force.

Wardlaw v. Pickett, 1 F.3d 1297 (D.C. Cir. 1993)

Pickett (a U.S. Marshal) was removing an individual from a courthouse. Mr. Wardlaw (a friend of the individual being removed) ran up to Pickett yelling at him to leave his friend alone. As Wardlaw closed on Pickett, and before actually assaulting him, "Pickett turned and punched the approaching Wardlaw once in the jaw and two or three times in the chest."

In finding Pickett's actions reasonable, the court noted:

when Wardlaw rushed down the stairs toward them, Pickett. . . [was] in a vulnerable position, caught in a stairwell and moving an uncooperative individual. Wardlaw admits that he shouted at the deputies as he approached them, thus, again reasonably, raising a fear that he was about to attack. Furthermore, as Wardlaw acknowledges, Pickett hit him no more than three or four times -- all in rapid succession. Once Wardlaw sat down on the stairs, and it became apparent that he was not going to attack, Pickett did not hit him. . . . We believe that no reasonable jury could find that Pickett's use of force was so excessive that no reasonable officer could have believed it to be lawful.

Montoute v. Carr, 114 F.3d 181 (11th Cir. 1997)

In Montoute, a police officer was chasing a subject armed with a sawed-off shotgun. The officer eventually shot the subject in the back after verbal commands to stop went unheeded. The court noted that:

although the subject never turned to face the pursuing officer and never actually pointed the sawed-off shotgun at anyone, there was nothing to prevent him from doing either, or both, in a split second. At least where orders to drop the weapon have gone unheeded, an officer is not required to wait until an armed and dangerous felon has drawn a bead on the officer or others before using deadly force.

Id. at 185.

Myth: A subject must be armed to justify a reasonable use of deadly force.

Reality: The totality of circumstances known to the officer at the time force was used determines reasonableness in a deadly force situation.

Forrett v. Richardson, 112 F.3d 416 (9th Cir. 1997)

Brian Forrett committed a violent residential burglary. While in the residence, he encountered, subdued, and tied up three victims. He shot one of the victims in the neck at point blank range and shot at another using a .38 caliber revolver he found in the house. He then fled the scene in a truck owned by one of the residents, taking with him several firearms and 250 rounds of ammunition.

After the suspect left the house, one of the victims managed to untie himself and telephone the City of Riverside Police Department. The victim described suspect Forrett's appearance, the crimes, the truck, and the weapons to the officers who arrived at the house a few minutes later. These details were promptly conveyed by radio to numerous officers, including the defendants. The officers began a search for the suspect and found the truck within an hour. Neither the suspect nor the weapons were inside.

A few minutes later, defendant Officer Kenneth Raya saw the suspect walking in a nearby residential neighborhood. Because he matched the description of the burglar, Officer Raya confronted the suspect. The suspect fled into the residential area on foot. Officer Raya radioed for help and briefly chased the suspect. He stopped when the suspect ran out of view behind a house because he was worried that he was armed and might ambush him. Officer Raya waited for support, and when the other defendant officers, Officer Elliott, Officer Seymore and Officer Manning, arrived moments later, they renewed the chase.

Suspect Forrett eluded capture for almost an hour by running across yards and streets, and jumping fences. Officers confronted the suspect in a back yard and he attempted to flee over a fence. In all, approximately 24 rounds were fired, two of which struck the suspect. The police found no guns, either on the suspect or in the vicinity where he was captured. The court noted:

PDF
Contrary to Forrett's position, the suspect need not be armed or pose an immediate threat to the officers or others at the time of the shooting. The Supreme Court in Garner identified specific situations in which a fleeing felony suspect may be deemed to pose a threat of serious harm to the officer or others: "Where the officer has probable cause to believe that the suspect poses a threat of serious physical harm, either to the officer or to others, it is not constitutionally unreasonable to prevent escape by using deadly force. Thus, if the suspect threatens the officer with a weapon or there is probable cause to believe that he has committed a crime involving the infliction or threatened infliction of serious physical harm, deadly force may be used if necessary to prevent escape, and if, where feasible, some warning has been given."

Responding to a report of shots fired and two suspects fleeing on foot from the scene of an armed robbery in Pine Lawn, Missouri, Officer Hubbard approached the suspect as he was getting into his car. The suspect fit the description of one of the robbery suspects -- a black man wearing a blue and gold jacket -- and was in an area where, based on the direction of their flight, Officer Hubbard believed the suspects might be. The suspect initially appeared to surrender, but then turned to flee. Officer Hubbard attempted to grab him, but succeeded only in pulling off his jacket.

A foot chase ensued, ending when the suspect ran into the space between two buildings and climbed over a short fence. According to Officer Hubbard, the suspect got up from the ground, looked over his shoulder at Officer Hubbard, and moved his arms as though reaching for a weapon at waist level. The suspect's back remained turned toward Officer Hubbard and obscured his hands from his view. Officer Hubbard yelled, "stop," and when the suspect's arms continued to move, he fired a single shot into the suspect's back just below his right shoulder blade, killing him. No weapon was found on his body.

The plaintiffs argued that a jury could have concluded that the officer's use of deadly force was unreasonable because the officer should have realized that the waistband of the suspect's sweat pants may not have been strong enough to hold a gun. The court noted:

We disagree with the plaintiffs' contention that if, as Hubbard maintains, Thompson turned and looked at him while the two were in close proximity and moved as though reaching for a weapon, a jury could conclude that Hubbard's use of deadly force was objectively unreasonable because Hubbard should have considered the fact that the waistband of Thompson's sweat pants may not have been strong enough to hold a gun. An officer is not constitutionally required to wait until he sets eyes upon the weapon before employing deadly force to protect himself against a fleeing suspect who turns and moves as though to draw a gun.

Id. at 899, citing Ryder v. City of Topeka, 814 F.2d 1412, 1419 n.16 (10th Cir. 1987) (concluding that because a requirement that a suspect actually have a weapon would place police in a dangerous and unreasonable situation . . . whether a particular seizure is reasonable is dependent on the “totality of the circumstances, and not simply on whether the suspect was actually armed”).

Myth: Violating agency use of force policy, while complying with the Fourth Amendment, can still result in criminal or civil liability.

Reality: Agency policy violations alone cannot form the basis for criminal or civil liability.

On October 31, 1988, Officer Peter Schulcz of the Springdale police department saw a vehicle come speeding out of an apartment complex. The car ran a stop sign, and Officer Schulcz gave pursuit. Rather than pulling over, the vehicle tried to escape, and led Officer Schulcz on a wild chase at speeds in excess of ninety miles per hour. After briefly getting stuck off road, the vehicle leaped forward and swerved toward Officer Schulcz's car. Officer Schulcz pulled his car to the right to avoid a collision and tried to position himself in front of the vehicle, however it swerved again toward the police cruiser.

The pursuit continued into the next suburb, where another officer attempted to block the fleeing vehicle by placing her vehicle in the suspect's path. However, she had left room for him to maneuver around her, and he did so, driving past at high speed with Officer Schulcz still in pursuit. After fleeing Officer Schulcz for approximately 2.6 miles, the suspect pulled on to a dead-end residential street. At the end of the street, the suspect tried to turn his car around in a lawn. Officer Schulcz, attempting to prevent his escape, placed his cruiser as close to the suspect's as possible. Eventually, the cars came nose to nose. Officer Schulcz then got out of his car and moved around its rear, intending to remove the suspect from his car.

Suddenly, the vehicle backed up and then sped forward and crashed into Officer Schulcz's car. He backed up again and maneuvered around the cruiser, smashing into the fence and gate as he did so. As the vehicle passed, Officer Schulcz pulled his gun and fired one shot at it. The bullet entered the passenger side of the car, pierced the passenger seat, and then struck the suspect his right side, killing him. The entire incident, beginning with Officer Schulcz's first sighting of the suspect, lasted about four minutes.

Mr. Smith's wife filed suit, claiming Officer Schulcz used excessive force in apprehending her husband. The court found that the officer's use of deadly force was reasonable under the Fourth Amendment. Mrs. Smith, however, claimed that Officer Schulcz violated his agency's policy regarding the use of deadly force and therefore the force was unreasonable. The policy forbids officers to fire at moving vehicles, unless they are acting in self-defense. Further, it bans the firing of shots to apprehend someone suspected of a misdemeanor. The court held:

[T]he fact that Officer Schulcz's actions may have violated Springdale's policies regarding police use of force does not require a different result. Under §1983, the issue is whether Officer Schulcz violated the Constitution, not whether he should be disciplined by the local police force. A city can certainly choose to hold its officers to a higher standard than that required by the Constitution without being subjected to increased liability under §1983. To hold that cities with strict policies commit more constitutional violations than those with lax policies would be an unwarranted extension of the law, as well as a violation of common sense. Ms. Smith's position, if adopted, would encourage all governments to adopt the least restrictive policies possible. While not expressly saying so, the Seventh Circuit has already recognized that city policies do not determine constitutional law.

Myth: A subject's known mental defect precludes officers from using deadly force, or at minimum requires officers to try options other than deadly force.

Reality: No such prohibition exists. A subject's known mental defect is a factor the court will consider in determining whether an application of force was reasonable.

Pena v. Leombruni, 200 F.3d 1031 (7th Cir. 1999)

Leombruni, a deputy sheriff of Winnebago County, Illinois, responded to a dispatch that a man, later identified as the plaintiffs' decedent, Pena, was "acting crazy," shoplifting, and fighting with the shop's employees. Pena fled upon Leombruni's arrival, but later turned and (with his dog) confronted Leombruni, who pepper sprayed the two of them and told Pena that he was under arrest. Pena again fled, but then stopped and picked up a chunk of concrete and advanced toward Leombruni, who drew his pistol and told him to put the chunk down. Leombruni backpedaled, but shot and killed Pena when Pena was within five to ten feet of him. Pena's estate brought suit, alleging excessive force in light of Pena's "apparent irrationality." The court held:

The question was not. . . Pena's actual mental state. That was irrelevant to the reasonableness of Leombruni's action in shooting him -- as would be obvious had Leombruni been in danger of being seriously injured not by Pena but by Pena's dog. Very little mentation is required for deadly action. A rattlesnake is deadly but could not form the mental state required for conviction of murder. Whatever Pena's mental problems (apparently he was high on cocaine), they were not such as to prevent him from beating Leombruni's brains out with a chunk of concrete.

Leombruni was entitled to defend himself whether or not Pena, had he assaulted him, and been prosecuted for the offense, would have been acquitted on the ground of insanity.

Myth: Courts are generally “pro-law enforcement” and are unlikely to sustain claims of excessive force against the police.

Bush v. City of Tallahassee, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 74947

As Searcy Bush was walking in a residential area, Officer Renneth Beaupierre of the Tallahassee Police Department approached Plaintiff Bush and asked for his name. The Plaintiff asked Officer Beaupierre why he wanted to know. Officer Beaupierre responded that he just wanted to know. He then asked the Plaintiff what he was doing at the apartment complex. The Plaintiff said that he was visiting people. The Plaintiff asked Officer Beaupierre if he was a suspect and the officer said no. The Plaintiff asked Officer Beaupierre why he wanted to talk if he was not a suspect. Officer Beaupierre stated that he just wanted to talk. The Plaintiff told Officer Beaupierre that he did not want to talk, that he knew his rights, and that he was not required to talk because he was not a suspect. At some point, Officer Tyler Hall joined in the conversation. Officer Beaupierre walked toward the Plaintiff and told him to come over to talk to him.

The Plaintiff walked away from Officer Beaupierre and said he was not required to talk and that he did not want to talk. Officer Beaupierre directed the Plaintiff to put his hands behind his back. The Plaintiff raised his hands in the air like he was being arrested. With his hands in the air, he asked Officer Beaupierre if he was under arrest and he protested that he had done nothing. Officer Beaupierre explained to the Plaintiff that he was not being arrested, but that he was being detained. When the Plaintiff asked Officer Beaupierre for the reason, Officer Beaupierre told him to stop resisting arrest. The Plaintiff said he was not resisting, he was only asking a question.

Officers Beaupierre and Officer Hall then grabbed the Plaintiff and slammed him against a gate. Each officer held one of the Plaintiff's arms behind his back. After the Plaintiff hit the gate, the officers pulled him back, then lifted him and slammed his face into the concrete causing a head injury. When he was taken to the ground, Officer Beaupierre went to the ground also. The Plaintiff was on his side with one hand in front of him and one arm behind his back. Officer Beaupierre placed a handcuff on one of his arms. One officer had his knee on the Plaintiff's neck. The officers told the Plaintiff to put his hands behind his back, but he could not because Officer Beaupierre was on top of him. The Plaintiff was on his back spinning on the ground. Officer Beaupierre put his elbow at the Plaintiff's throat and spread his legs to brace himself. Officer Hall extended his baton and began striking the Plaintiff. He yelled at him to roll over and to turn on his stomach and to do it now. Officer Hall struck Bush with the baton at least 15 times. Mr. Bush was unable to roll over because Officer Beaupierre was on top of him, choking Mr. Bush with his elbow. There is no evidence the Plaintiff was struggling.

A crowd of 20 to 25 people gathered. They told the officers to stop hurting the Plaintiff. Within minutes Officer Matthew Copelin arrived. He ran from his car with his baton in hand and began striking the Plaintiff. Officer Copelin hit him 9 or 10 times. By this point, Officer Beaupierre had gotten off of him and rolled the Plaintiff over on his stomach, who used one hand to protect his legs, but he was hit on the wrist by a baton. Officer Michael Malafronte arrived soon thereafter. Officer Malafronte ran up to the Plaintiff and sprayed him with mace or pepper spray. Officer Malafronte then kicked Mr. Bush 3 or 4 times on the side or thigh. Mr. Bush was crying out in pain and moaning. He was crawling on his knees trying to wipe the pepper spray from his eyes. Meanwhile, Officer Copelin threatened the gathering crowd with arrest for obstruction of justice. Officer Gavin Larremore arrived next. He did not talk to the other officers. He ran to the Plaintiff and hit him with a Taser. After he was tased, the Plaintiff was laying on the ground on his stomach, praying, unable to move. Officer Larramore shot the Plaintiff with the Taser again. Four officers picked up Mr. Bush and threw him inside the cruiser.

As a result of the arrest, Mr. Bush had a large bump protruding from the middle of his forehead, an injury to his knee which causes him to limp and restricts him from running, an injury to his left wrist, and burns and sores on his back from the Taser.

The Court Held:

The United States Supreme Court in Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 109 S.Ct. 1865, 104 L. Ed. 2d 443 (1989), directed courts to consider several factors, "including the severity of the crime at issue, whether the suspect poses an immediate threat to the safety of the officers or others, and whether he is actively resisting arrest or attempting to evade arrest by flight." Graham 490 U.S. at 396. Applying this standard against the facts presented by Mr. Bush, the officers used excessive force. The crime of loitering and prowling is relatively minor. Mr. Bush did not pose an immediate threat to the safety of the officers. He was complying with the officer's instructions when he could. He was not resisting arrest. A reasonable jury could find for Mr. Bush on his battery claims. Accordingly, summary judgment as to these claims will be denied.

For the same reasons stated for Mr. Bush's battery claims, summary judgment should also be denied on the excessive force claims.

"[Q]ualified immunity is not appropriate when the Graham analysis yields an answer that is clear beyond all doubt." In this case, Mr. Bush has evidence to show that he was not resisting the officers. Nevertheless, he was choked, beaten with batons, maced, kicked, and tased. Plaintiff states that he was not struggling and did not pose a threat to the officers. Assuming Mr. Bush's facts are true, the force used against Mr. Bush was clearly excessive. The individual officers are not entitled to summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds.

Green v. N.J. State Police, 246 Fed. Appx. 158 (3rd Cir. 2007)

Late at night, on April 22, 2002, Green was driving home with his girlfriend when he was pulled over for speeding by New Jersey state troopers Robert Parry and Frederick Fife. The driver did not have a driver's license or any other identification, and provided a false name to the officers. Later tests revealed that his blood alcohol level was over the legal limit and that he had marijuana in his system.

After asking Plaintiff Green to get out of the car, the troopers continued speaking to him and asking questions. Meanwhile, troopers Salvatore Giuliano and Craig Brown arrived in a separate car. Eventually the Plaintiff was placed under arrest, handcuffed, searched and placed him in the back seat of the cruiser. When Trooper Parry entered the front of the car, Plaintiff Green began to complain that he had to use a bathroom immediately. Trooper Parry told him that he would have to wait until they got to the police station, and Plaintiff Green, growing increasingly agitated, continued to implore Trooper Parry to allow him to urinate. Plaintiff Green then began to curse and yell at Trooper Parry when he noticed that the other troopers had asked his girlfriend to step out the car he had been driving.

At some point, Plaintiff Green was able bring his handcuffs in front of his body. He told Trooper Parry that he was going to urinate in the car and unzipped his pants, and Trooper Parry then heard a banging sound on the plastic divider between the back and front seats. Trooper Parry immediately walked around the car and opened the rear door. According to Plaintiff Green, Trooper Parry violently grabbed his neck and throat, choking him. While struggling to pull him out, Trooper Parry commanded Green to get out of the car, but he refused. Soon after, Trooper Fife came over and twice sprayed the Plaintiff with either mace or pepper spray, which made it difficult for him to see or speak. Troopers Parry and Fife, and another trooper repeatedly commanded Plaintiff Green to exit the vehicle and tried to pull him out. He resisted by wedging his feet under the front seat and pushing himself away from the officers towards a partition that divided the back seat. As the struggle ensued, both Trooper Parry and Trooper Fife punched and kicked Plaintiff Green several times. Green has stated that he was punched in the face--suffering a swollen eye and a "busted" nose and mouth--and kicked in the ribs as well as other parts of his body. Plaintiff Green has also asserted that Fife twice hit him in the head with a flashlight, causing him to bleed from resulting lacerations.

Eventually, the officers were able to extract Plaintiff Green from the car. They threw him to the ground, and, according to Green, kned him in the back, and kicked him in the ribs and buttocks. The troopers then called for an ambulance, which took Plaintiff Green to the hospital for medical attention.

The Court held:

We agree with the District Court that, viewing the facts in the light most favorable to Green, a reasonable jury could conclude that the troopers' use of force was excessive under the circumstances. We do not mean to suggest that the troopers in fact acted unreasonably or that police officers are not permitted to use force when attempting to extract an arrestee from a police vehicle when that arrestee has refused to exit. Indeed, were we to accept the troopers' version of events in this case, we would likely agree with them that no constitutional violation occurred.

Green, however, has alleged three key facts that, if believed, could lead a reasonable jury to conclude that the officers used excessive force. First, Green has stated that Parry violently grabbed his throat before asking him to exit the vehicle. Second, Green has claimed that Fife twice hit him on the head with a flashlight, causing lacerations that required stitches. Finally, Green has maintained that after he was pulled from the car, he was thrown to the ground, kned, and kicked several times. These allegations, none of which are either established or definitively refuted by the videotapes, present issues of material fact that must be resolved by a jury.

Applying the Graham and Sharrar factors, we believe these actions, if proven, would constitute excessive force. Green was arrested for a nonviolent offense and was unarmed. Although Green was agitated and had brought his handcuffs forward, an action certainly justifying a physical response from the police, it would not have been reasonable for Parry to violently grab his neck without first using lesser force. Similarly, although the officers were justified in using force to extract Green once he refused to exit, it would not have been reasonable for Fife to strike him on the head twice with a flashlight. Finally, if he was restrained on the ground after being pulled from the car, it would not have been reasonable for the officers to continue kicking him.

Defeating the new "OP" Oxycontin

About a year ago, Perdue Pharma (the company that makes Oxycontin) changed their formula. There had been a public outcry from friends and family members of “pain patients” who abused Oxycontin. Many of us in Law Enforcement had seen this mini-epidemic up close with “pain management” clinics popping up everywhere and Pharmacies being burglarized at night. Abusers would use several methods to defeat the time release of the Oxycontin pill. Some of these methods were as simple as chewing the Oxycontin pills, and yet others were as “hardcore” as cutting them up, heating them, dissolving them into water, and injecting the oxycodone-water solution (oxycodone hydrochloride).

The “New” formula was supposed to make the time release impossible to get around, or at least enough of a hassle that an addict would give up trying. Well the “pain patients”, as they call themselves, have been blogging and sharing information with each other and have found new ways to defeat the Oxycontin “OP” pill time release. Det. Frost, Richmond Hill PD, has found some of these “New” pills that appeared to have been tampered with.

u have to put in the oven at 250 for maybe 10 to 20 min. they will break apart easily at this point into little pieces. then u put in ur spoon and fill up with water. then i used a burner on my gas stove to heat. adding water as pill breaks down. it works. all u end up with at the end is the binder new stuff they put in there. looks like cotton. the water taste like oxy and when injected def work s well. all that was left on spoon was new binders. def sucks to do compared to old ones but i did it. there def pain in the but and hopefully im gonna stop al together. it took the fun out of it. it takes 2 to 3 injections now to get the whole pill in the needle cause it doesnt just dissolve right up like the old ones.

Gerpy

I found that by cutting pill into 4 pieces then placing into Diet Pepsi in a small Micro safe juice glass .. Small 1/2 Inch of pop .. then bring soda to a boil (KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE POP , DON'T BOIL OVER) allow mixture to cool 5 minutes .. REPEAT 4 or 5 times . takes about 20 minuutes .. what you will observe it 4 equal size pieces of GEL and the ENTIRE dose mostly Dumped into COLA then add 2 " OF FRESH POP NO ICE.. AND DRINK I was both happy and sad to see that all ya need is heat and pop to make a PROPER AMERICAN COCTAIL ... It looks like Perdue has just changed the method of SERVING UP A DOSE :) This Method WORKS I have verified it and am HAPPY to know what the new method of DOSE extraction is for us PAIN patients that occasionally hurt ourself and need relief in minutes , not HOURS :) This has to be the reason the FDA would not allox Perdue to make claims of Tamper resistant :) It makes snorting and shooting HARD but simple ingestion of TOTAL dose is easy and 100 % effecient if you swallow the close to empty clear jell

Following the conversation with Det. Frost and reviewing the blogs, contact was made with the GBI Crime Lab. The GBI Crime Lab verified that these processes would work to obtain the oxycodone from the new Oxycontin "OP" pill. The process to obtain the ingestible oxycodone would be the easiest and there are several more processes to include a vinegar and Alka Seltzer method. The injectable method would call for the use of several syringes instead of just the one in the past.

Deciphering A Tic-Tac-Toe Code

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

The Tic-Tac-Toe cipher is used by gangs with different affiliations, history, beliefs and ethnicity.

The “Tic-Tac-Toe” code uses geometric designs, usually a “number sign” or “pound sign” also known as an “Octothorpe”, and an “X” shape in combination with a “dot” to create symbols to represent letters of the alphabet. The figures shown in the next slide depict a basic form of this type of code which was initially created by Freemason’s.

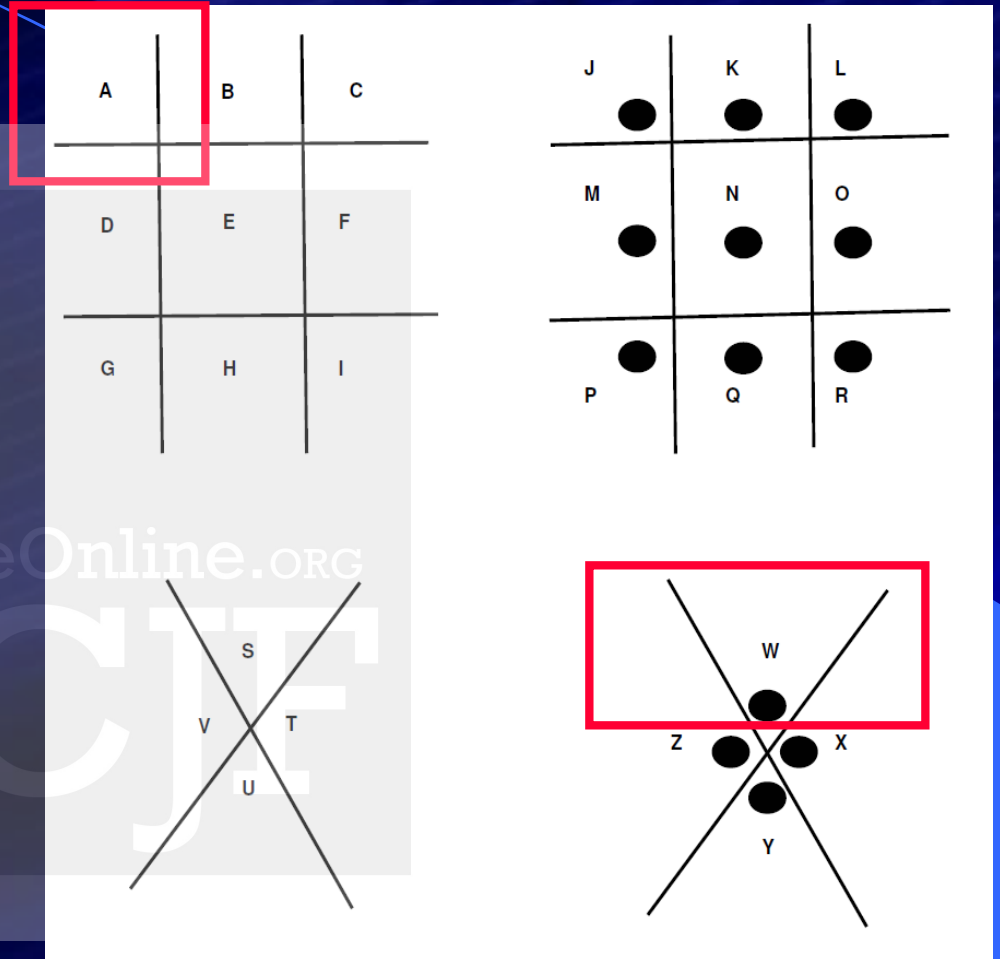

Letters of the alphabet are placed in the open portions of these symbols and then the letters are assigned that shape. This type of code is very flexible because the users can place any letter in any symbol opening. Because of this flexibility and ease of use, a number of gangs use this type of code (or one of the many variations) to send secret messages. This code system has been in use for many decades and continues to attract new users. The challenge here is to determine which shape represents what letter of the alphabet and to determine what variation of the “Tic-Tac-Toe” code is being used.

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

The shape represents the letter!

In this example, the “backwards ‘L’” shape with no “dot” located in the upper left hand portion of the illustration would represent the letter “A”. The “V” shape with a dot located in the lower right hand portion of the illustration would represent the letter “W”.

The shape represents the letter!

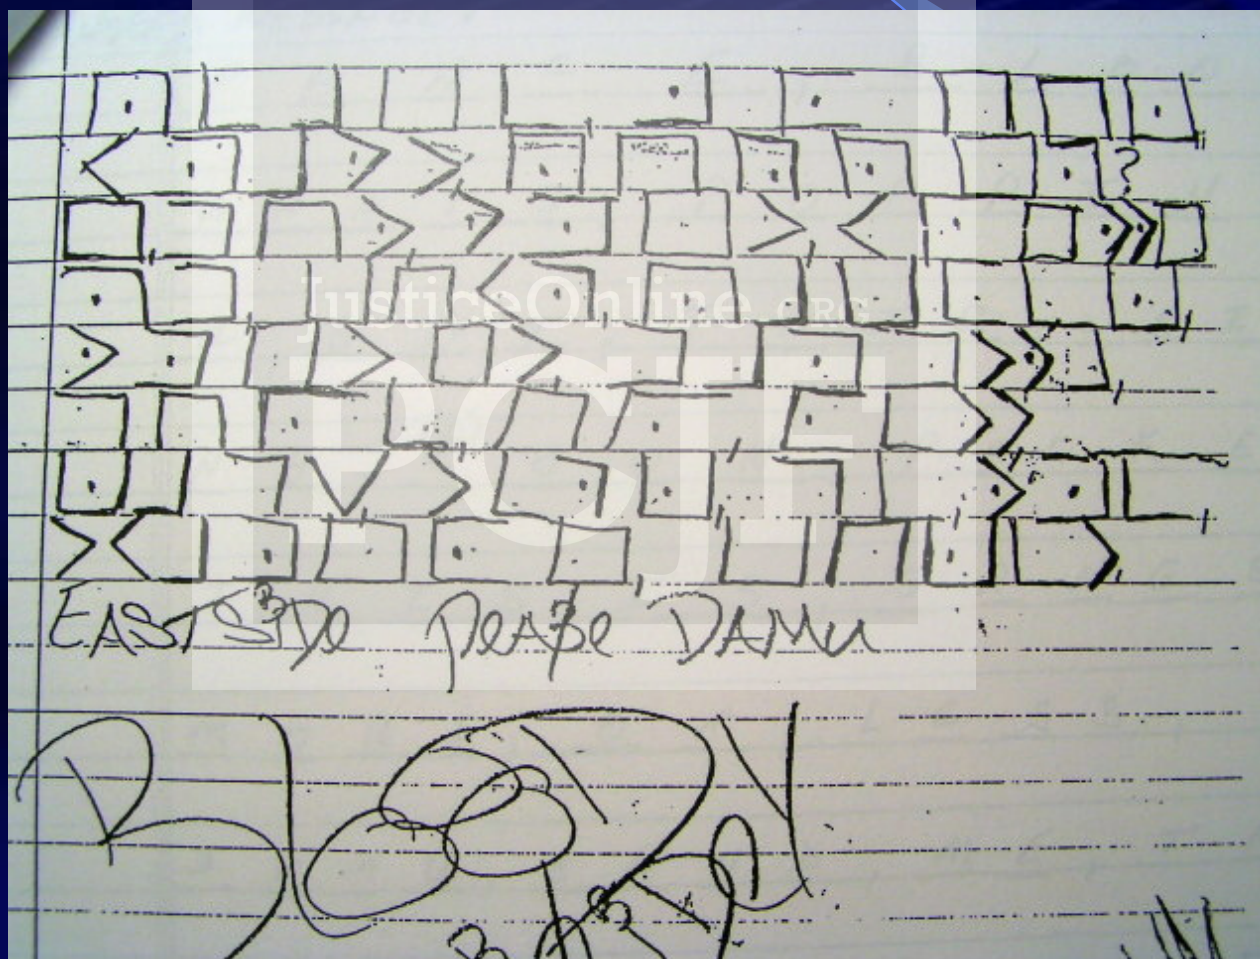

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

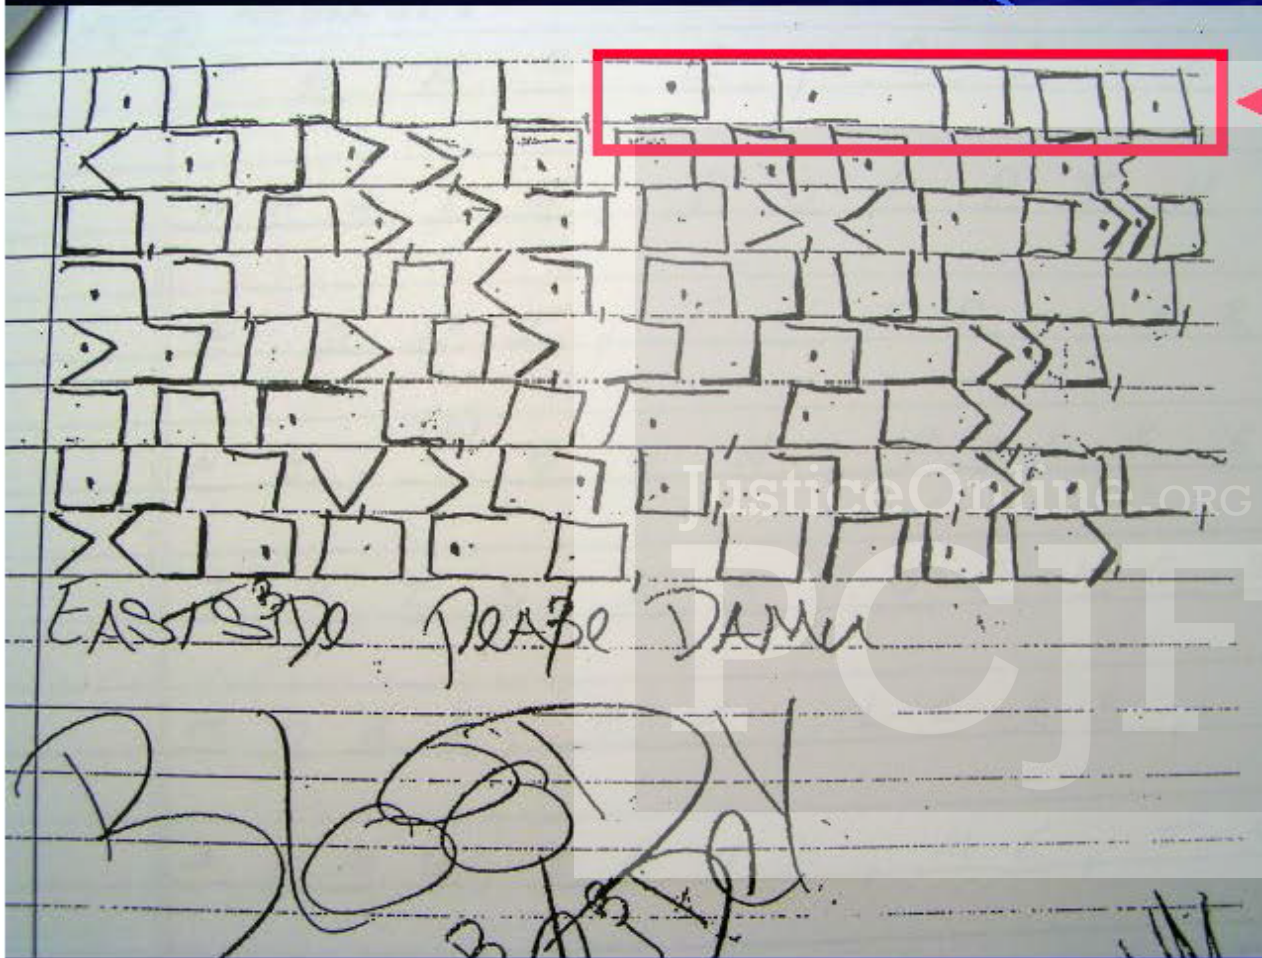

Here is a tic-tac-toe code used by the Bloods Gang.

See how the shapes come from the “pound sign” or “X”?

← BLOOD

March 2011

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

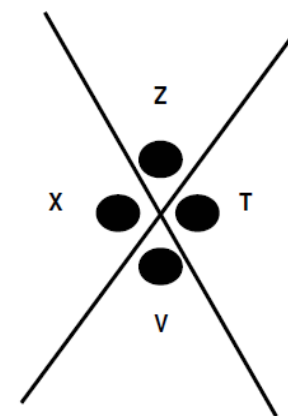

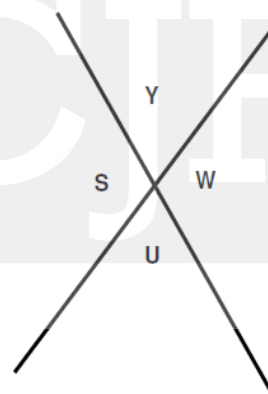

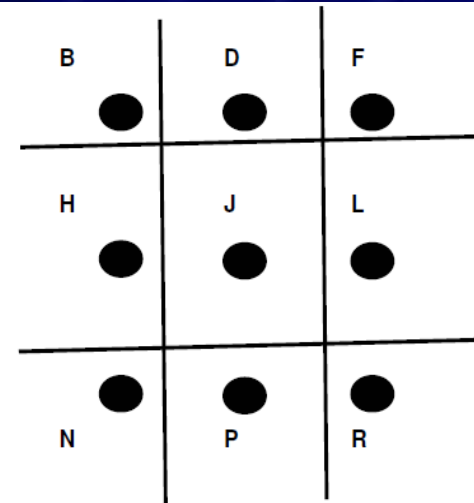

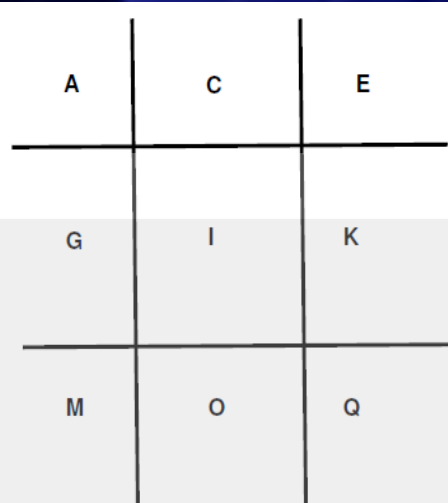

← POPPIN?

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

Here is the symbol template to decipher this Bloods gang document.

A partial translation of this document is shown in the next slide. Note the use of the words "BLOOD" and "POPPIN".

Also note that the writer is asking for another code: "Swahili Codes".

Let's examine another "real-life" document which further demonstrates how flexible and secure this code system can be.

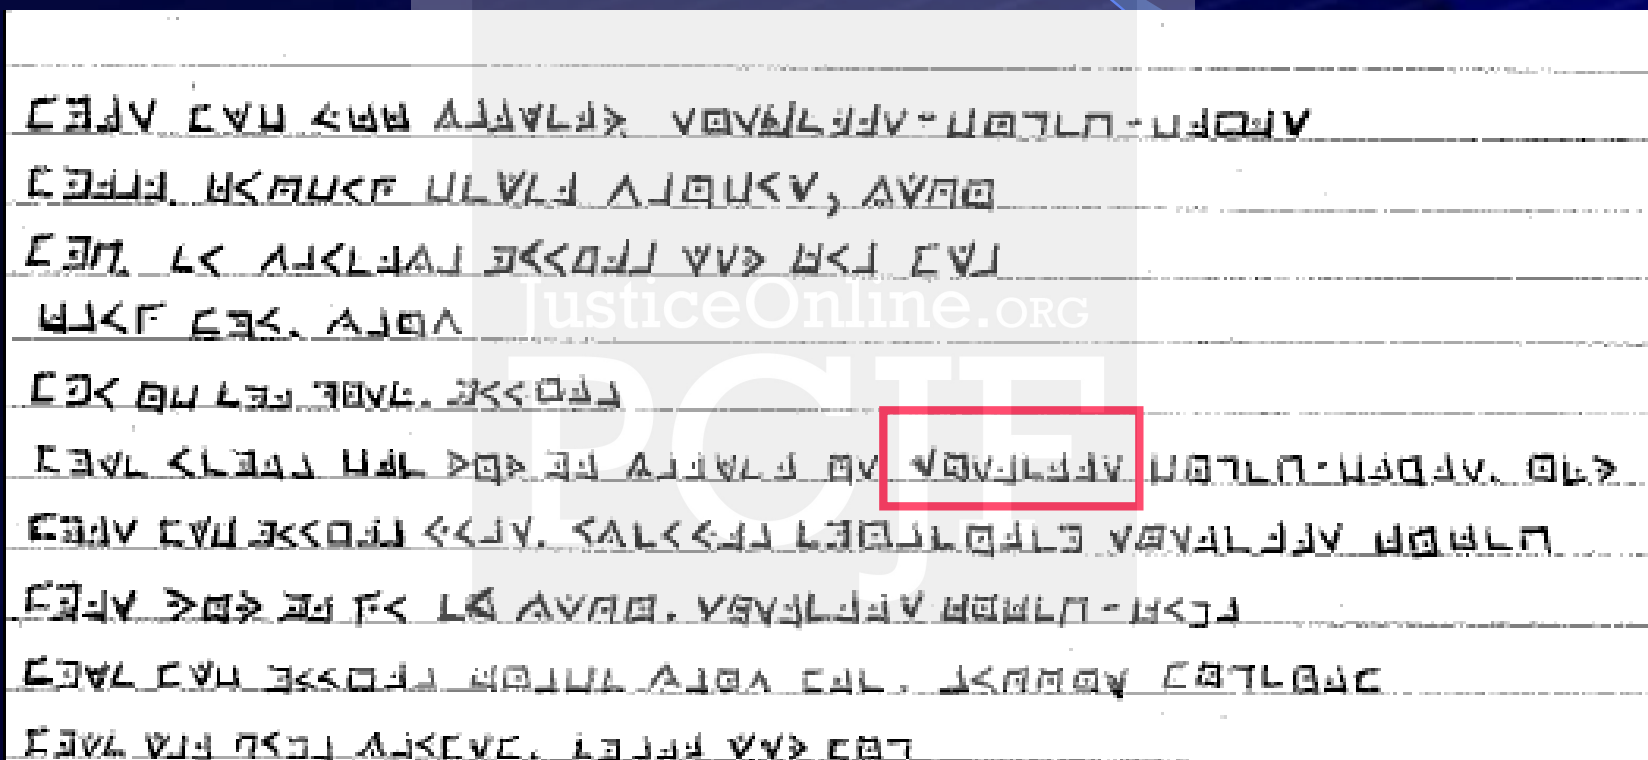

We will also find another symbol pattern that enables us to decipher the code.

I have indicated an interesting symbol pattern:

Here is a close-up of the symbol pattern.

Notice that the First, Third and Last symbols are identical as shown.

Notice also that the Fourth, Sixth and Seventh symbols are identical and the Sixth and Seventh symbols are used as a double-letter in this word as shown.

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

Tic-Tac-Toe codes are very flexible, and have many variations. Some variations use one “pound” sign and one “X”. Like this:

This next example uses three “pound” signs all with “dots” and no “X”. Note the symbols above the tic-tac-toe shape.

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

Modern day gangs are using this type of code for the same reason it has been used for decades. This code system is flexible, secure, easy to learn and easy to use. It is used by gangs with different affiliations, history, beliefs and ethnicity.

Because of this wide use, law enforcement officers, whether federal, state or local with different types of departments such as police, corrections or probation, should be familiar with the symbols used in the Tic-Tac-Toe cipher.

Introduction

The New Jersey Juvenile Justice Commission (JJJ) understands that gangs and gang related activities impact every community in our State. The JJC works with schools, community organizations and other law enforcement agencies to combat juvenile street gangs and help young people succeed.

The JJC has responded with a comprehensive program that addresses youth gangs at all levels. With funding from the NJ Department of Education, the JJC has developed a cutting-edge education curriculum, entitled Phoenix, that corresponds with the NJ Core Curriculum Standards.

This course can be tailored for youth in secure and residential programs, as well as county-operated detention centers and community-based programs. The workbook-based lessons provide structure and support, and clearly identify the progress of participants. The most important goal of the curriculum is developing self-efficacy skills, thereby allowing juveniles to understand how to react to risky situations, and to think through their actions and responses to avoid future gang involvement.

To expand its reach, the JJC is forming partnerships with communities to train others in the Phoenix curriculum. The JJC is also coordinating with the county offices of probation, as well as the police departments, to build a “safety net” of resources for youth in the community.

Experienced JJC staff are available to conduct workshops. One-day training sessions can be adapted to meet an audience’s specific needs and information level. It can also be expanded to provide more in depth training.

Gang members communicate in many different ways. Speech is the most obvious; however, gang members also make use of nonverbal methods of exchanging thoughts. Graffiti, hand signs, colors, and tattoos are indicators of gang affiliation.

Gang members have their own language, which contains phrases, hand signs, tattoos, markings and graffiti. These often overlap. As a parent, you may not recognize them right away. The items listed as Identifiers in this booklet include types of clothing young people might wear, tattoos and other markings. The items listed as Phrases are expressions young people might say to each other or write on their school notebooks. As a parent, you should familiarize yourself with them, so that you will be alert to them.

Street gangs are targeting young people at an earlier and earlier age. It is critical that you be able to recognize the signs of gang involvement. This booklet is designed to help parents, teachers, and community members spot gang activity in their families, schools and communities. The pages that follow provide you with vivid descriptions that you can use to identify gang activity. If you spot any of these signs, there are professionals available to help you.

There are approximately 2,300 gang members under the age of 15 in New Jersey. Children as young as second and third grade have known gang affiliations. In fact, 46 percent of gang-related incidents occur on school property.

Why do kids join gangs?

Each case is individual, but some reasons include:

- Security, protection and a sense of belonging
- Lack of family, community, or youth support system (too much unsupervised time)
- Sense of status or respect
- Living in a gang infested community or having family members in a gang
- Low self-esteem
- Financial opportunities (i.e. profits from drug distribution and other illegal activities)
- Peer pressure
- Thrill seeking
- Media glorifying violence

1. Anyone having an Occupy Wallstreet type of problem in their city can keep intel tabs on what's going on when and where by some simple Google search tips I use for gathering intel in our area.

If you set up a computer and someone to monitor it, they simply type in "site:twitter.com occupy "city here"" and they will get the feeds of people posting about the occupy movement in that city. Same goes for Facebook. Use "site:facebook.com occupy "city here"" and all of the facebook postings will appear. A very handy intel gathering tool. Defeating the new "OP" Oxycontin

About a year ago, Perdue Pharma (the company that makes Oxycontin) changed their formula. There had been a public outcry from friends and family members of “pain patients” who abused Oxycontin. Many of us in Law Enforcement had seen this mini-epidemic up close with “pain management” clinics popping up everywhere and Pharmacies being burglarized at night. Abusers would use several methods to defeat the time release of the Oxycontin pill. Some of these methods were as simple as chewing the Oxycontin pills, and yet others were as “hardcore” as cutting them up, heating them, dissolving them into water, and injecting the oxycodone-water solution (oxycodone hydrochloride).

The “New” formula was supposed to make the time release impossible to get around, or at least enough of a hassle that an addict would give up trying. Well the “pain patients”, as they call themselves, have been blogging and sharing information with each other and have found new ways to defeat the Oxycontin “OP” pill time release. Det. Frost, Richmond Hill PD, has found some of these “New” pills that appeared to have been tampered with.

Using an Internet Search Engine, Det. Frost discovered the following blog:
<http://www.topix.com/forum/drug/oxycontin/>

This blog contained communications between Oxycontin abusers across the U.S. and Canada where they discovered methods to defeat the Oxycontin "OP" time release. Below are some of the excerpts of the blog:

u have to put in the oven at 250 for maybe 10 to 20 min. they will break apart easily at this point into little pieces. then u put in ur spoon and fill up with water. then i used a burner on my gas stove to heat. adding water as pill breaks down. it works. all u end up with at the end is the binder new stuff they put in there. looks like cotton. the water taste like oxy and when injected def work s well. all that was left on spoon was new binders. def sucks to do compared to old ones but i did it. there def pain in the but and hopefully im gonna stop al together. it took the fun out of it. it takes 2 to 3 injections now to get the whole pill in the needle cause it doesnt just dissolve right up like the old ones.

Gerpy

I found that by cutting pill into 4 pieces then placing into Diet Pepsi in a small Micro safe juice glass .. Small 1/2 Inch of pop .. then bring soda to a boil (KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE POP , DON'T BOIL OVER) allow mixture to cool 5 minutes .. REPEAT 4 or 5 times . takes about 20 minuutes .. what you will observe it 4 equal size pieces of GEL and the ENTIRE dose mostly Dumped into COLA then add 2 " OF FRESH POP NO ICE.. AND DRINK I was both happy and sad to see that all ya need is heat and pop to make a PROPER AMERICAN COCTAIL ... It looks like Perdue has just changed the method of SERVING UP A DOSE :) This Method WORKS I have verified it and am HAPPY to know what the new method of DOSE extraction is for us PAIN patients that occasionally hurt ourself and need relief in minutes , not HOURS :) This has to be the reason the FDA would not allox Perdue to make claims of Tamper resistant :) It makes snorting and shooting HARD but simple ingestion of TOTAL dose is easy and 100 % effecient if you swallow the close to empty clear jell

Following the conversation with Det. Frost and reviewing the blogs, contact was made with the GBI Crime Lab. The GBI Crime Lab verified that these processes would work to obtain the oxycodone from the new Oxycontin "OP" pill. The process to obtain the ingestible oxycodone would be the easiest and there are several more processes to include a vinegar and Alka Seltzer method. The injectable method would call for the use of several syringes instead of just the one in the past.

Defeating the new "OP" Oxycontin

About a year ago, Perdue Pharma (the company that makes Oxycontin) changed their formula. There had been a public outcry from friends and family members of “pain patients” who abused Oxycontin. Many of us in Law Enforcement had seen this mini-epidemic up close with “pain management” clinics popping up everywhere and Pharmacies being burglarized at night. Abusers would use several methods to defeat the time release of the Oxycontin pill. Some of these methods were as simple as chewing the Oxycontin pills, and yet others were as “hardcore” as cutting them up, heating them, dissolving them into water, and injecting the oxycodone-water solution (oxycodone hydrochloride).

The “New” formula was supposed to make the time release impossible to get around, or at least enough of a hassle that an addict would give up trying. Well the “pain patients”, as they call themselves, have been blogging and sharing information with each other and have found new ways to defeat the Oxycontin “OP” pill time release. Det. Frost, Richmond Hill PD, has found some of these “New” pills that appeared to have been tampered with.

Using an Internet Search Engine, Det. Frost discovered the following blog:

This blog contained communications between Oxycontin abusers across the U.S. and Canada where they discovered methods to defeat the Oxycontin "OP" time release. Below are some of the excerpts of the blog:

u have to put in the oven at 250 for maybe 10 to 20 min. they will break apart easily at this point into little pieces. then u put in ur spoon and fill up with water. then i used a burner on my gas stove to heat. adding water as pill breaks down. it works. all u end up with at the end is the binder new stuff they put in there. looks like cotton. the water taste like oxy and when injected def work s well. all that was left on spoon was new binders. def sucks to do compared to old ones but i did it. there def pain in the but and hopefully im gonna stop al together. it took the fun out of it. it takes 2 to 3 injections now to get the whole pill in the needle cause it doesnt just dissolve right up like the old ones.

I found that by cutting pill into 4 pieces then placing into Diet Pepsi in a small Micro safe juice glass .. Small 1/2 Inch of pop .. then bring soda to a boil (KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE POP , DON'T BOIL OVER) allow mixture to cool 5 minutes .. REPEAT 4 or 5 times . takes about 20 minuutes .. what you will observe it 4 equal size pieces of GEL and the ENTIRE dose mostly Dumped into COLA then add 2 " OF FRESH POP NO ICE.. AND DRINK I was both happy and sad to see that all ya need is heat and pop to make a PROPER AMERICAN COCTAIL ... It looks like Perdue has just changed the method of SERVING UP A DOSE :) This Method WORKS I have verified it and am HAPPY to know what the new method of DOSE extraction is for us PAIN patients that occasionally hurt ourself and need relief in minutes , not HOURS :) This has to be the reason the FDA would not allox Perdue to make claims of Tamper resistant :) It makes snorting and shooting HARD but simple ingestion of TOTAL dose is easy and 100 % effecient if you swallow the close to empty clear jell

Following the conversation with Det. Frost and reviewing the blogs, contact was made with the GBI Crime Lab. The GBI Crime Lab verified that these processes would work to obtain the oxycodone from the new Oxycontin "OP" pill. The process to obtain the ingestible oxycodone would be the easiest and there are several more processes to include a vinegar and Alka Seltzer method. The injectable method would call for the use of several syringes instead of just the one in the past.

Introduction

The New Jersey Juvenile Justice Commission (JJC) understands that gangs and gang related activities impact every community in our State. The JJC works with schools, community organizations and other law enforcement agencies to combat juvenile street gangs and help young people succeed.

The JJC has responded with a comprehensive program that addresses youth gangs at all levels. With funding from the NJ Department of Education, the JJC has developed a cutting-edge education curriculum, entitled Phoenix, that corresponds with the NJ Core Curriculum Standards.

This course can be tailored for youth in secure and residential programs, as well as county-operated detention centers and community-based programs. The workbook-based lessons provide structure and support, and clearly identify the progress of participants. The most important goal of the curriculum is developing self-efficacy skills, thereby allowing juveniles to understand how to react to risky situations, and to think through their actions and responses to avoid future gang involvement.

To expand its reach, the JJC is forming partnerships with communities to train others in the Phoenix curriculum. The JJC is also coordinating with the county offices of probation, as well as the police departments, to build a “safety net” of resources for youth in the community.

Experienced JJC staff are available to conduct workshops. One-day training sessions can be adapted to meet an audience’s specific needs and information level. It can also be expanded to provide more in depth training.

For more information, please contact a member of the Gang members communicate in many different ways. Speech is the most obvious; however, gang members also make use of nonverbal methods of exchanging thoughts. Graffiti, hand signs, colors, and tattoos are indicators of gang affiliation.

Gang members have their own language, which contains phrases, hand signs, tattoos, markings and graffiti. These often overlap. As a parent, you may not recognize them right away. The items listed as Identifiers in this booklet include types of clothing young people might wear, tattoos and other markings. The items listed as Phrases are expressions young people might say to each other or write on their school notebooks. As a parent, you should familiarize yourself with them, so that you will be alert to them.

Street gangs are targeting young people at an earlier and earlier age. It is critical that you be able to recognize the signs of gang involvement. This booklet is designed to help parents, teachers, and community members spot gang activity in their families, schools and communities. The pages that follow provide you with vivid descriptions that you can use to identify gang activity. If you spot any of these signs, there are professionals available to help you.

There are approximately 2,300 gang members under the age of 15 in New Jersey. Children as young as second and third grade have known gang affiliations. In fact, 46 percent of gang-related incidents occur on school property.

Why do kids join gangs?

Each case is individual, but some reasons include:

- Security, protection and a sense of belonging
- Lack of family, community, or youth support system (too much unsupervised time)
- Sense of status or respect
- Living in a gang infested community or having family members in a gang
- Low self-esteem
- Financial opportunities (i.e. profits from drug distribution and other illegal activities)
- Peer pressure
- Thrill seeking
- Media glorifying violence

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

The Tic-Tac-Toe cipher is used by gangs with different affiliations, history, beliefs and ethnicity.

The “Tic-Tac-Toe” code uses geometric designs, usually a “number sign” or “pound sign” also known as an “Octothorpe”, and an “X” shape in combination with a “dot” to create symbols to represent letters of the alphabet. The figures shown in the next slide depict a basic form of this type of code which was initially created by Freemason’s.

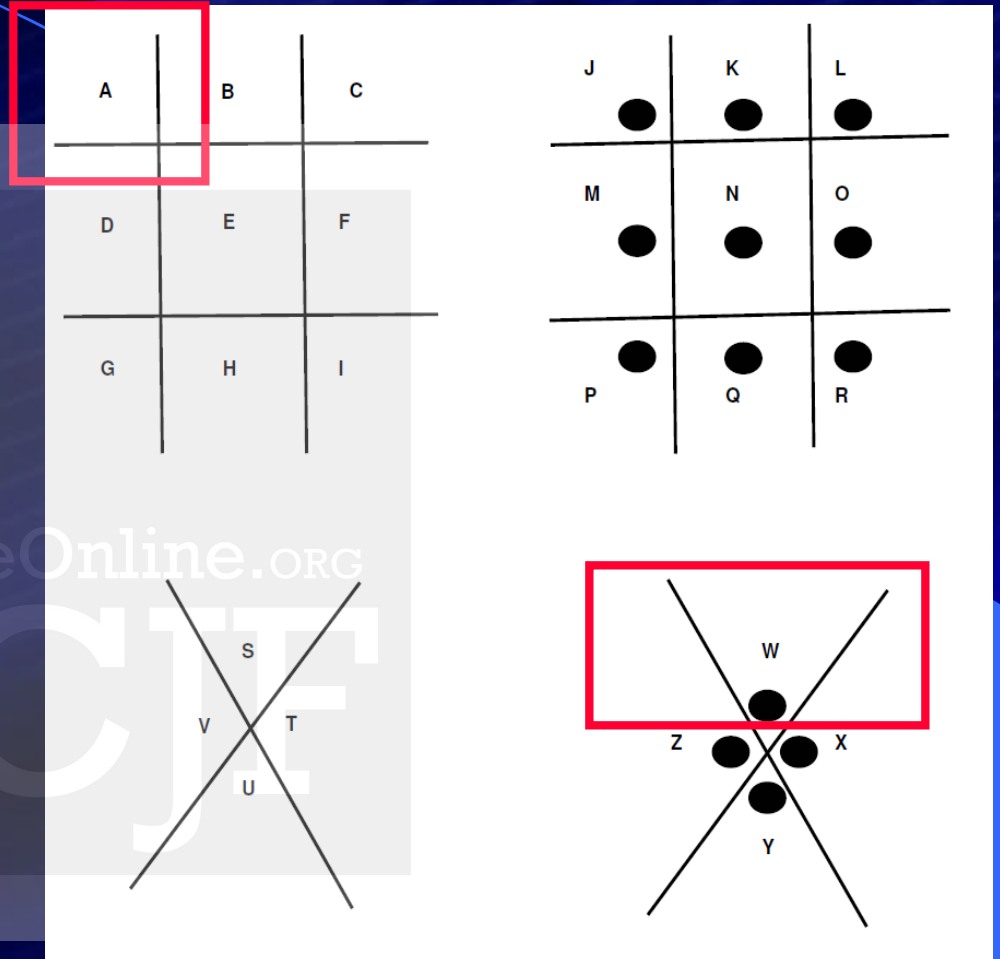

Letters of the alphabet are placed in the open portions of these symbols and then the letters are assigned that shape. This type of code is very flexible because the users can place any letter in any symbol opening. Because of this flexibility and ease of use, a number of gangs use this type of code (or one of the many variations) to send secret messages. This code system has been in use for many decades and continues to attract new users. The challenge here is to determine which shape represents what letter of the alphabet and to determine what variation of the “Tic-Tac-Toe” code is being used.

Tic-Tac-Toe Code

The shape represents the letter!

In this example, the “backwards ‘L’” shape with no “dot” located in the upper left hand portion of the illustration would represent the letter “A”. The “V” shape with a dot located in the lower right hand portion of the illustration would represent the letter “W”.

The shape represents the letter!

Here is a tic-tac-toe code used by the Bloods Gang.

See how the shapes come from the “pound sign” or “X”?

Modern day gangs are using this type of code for the same reason it has been used for decades. This code system is flexible, secure, easy to learn and easy to use. It is used by gangs with different affiliations, history, beliefs and ethnicity.

Because of this wide use, law enforcement officers, whether federal, state or local with different types of departments such as police, corrections or probation, should be familiar with the symbols used in the Tic-Tac-Toe cipher.

A Legal Guide to Dispelling the Myths of Use of Force

JusticeOnline.ORG

PCJF

The purpose of this guide is to dispel many of the commonly held misconceptions about use of force. Each of the commonly held misconceptions is dispelled by established case law. It is not intended to constitute legal advice, but rather to serve as a guide to researching case law relevant to particular aspects concerning use of force. (March 2009)

Myth: The officer must use the minimal amount of force necessary to affect their lawful law enforcement objectives.

Reality: The officer may use that force which is objectively reasonable based upon the totality of circumstances.

In Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 109 S. Ct. 1865, the U.S. Supreme Court established the legal standard for use of force by law enforcement officers. Regardless of jurisdiction, the standard of “objective reasonableness” applies to all law enforcement officers. Law enforcement officers have a constitutional right to use force. In Graham, the court stated:

our Fourth Amendment jurisprudence has long recognized that the right to make an arrest or investigatory stop necessarily carries with it the right to use some degree of physical coercion or threat thereof to effect it. Because the test of reasonableness under the Fourth Amendment is not capable of precise definition or mechanical application, however, its proper application requires careful attention to the facts and circumstances of each particular case, including the severity of the crime at issue, whether the suspect poses an immediate threat to the safety of the officers or others, and whether he is actively resisting arrest or attempting to evade arrest by flight. The “reasonableness” of a particular use of force must be judged from the perspective of a reasonable officer on the scene, rather than with the 20/20 vision of hindsight. The calculus of reasonableness must embody allowance for the fact that police officers are often forced to make split-second judgments – in circumstances that are tense, uncertain, and rapidly evolving – about the amount of force that is necessary in a particular situation. . . .The “reasonableness” inquiry in an excessive force case is an objective one: the question is whether the officers’ actions are “objectively reasonable” in light of the facts and circumstances confronting them, without regard to their underlying intent or motivation.

Myth: Force may only be used to affect a custodial arrest.

Reality: Reasonable force may be used to affect ANY lawful seizure.

Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 396 (1989)

“Our Fourth Amendment jurisprudence has long recognized that the right to make an arrest or investigatory stop necessarily carries with it the right to use some degree of physical coercion or threat thereof to effect it.”

Gallegos v. City of Colorado Springs, 114 F.3d 1024 (10th Cir. 1997)

Two officers attempted to stop a man to inquire about reports of a prowler and other disturbances in the area. When the officers first approached the man, they detected a strong odor of alcohol and observed that he appeared to be distraught and upset. The suspect ignored the officers’ questions and continued to walk down the sidewalk. On three separate occasions, one of the officers grabbed the suspect’s arm in an effort to stop him, and each time, the suspect jerked free and continued to walk away.

When one of the officers grabbed the suspect by the shoulder, the suspect clenched his fists, turned to face the officers, and dropped into a crouch “similar to a wrestler’s position.” In response to the suspect’s actions, one officer applied an arm bar maneuver to the suspect’s right arm, while the second officer grabbed his left arm and initiated a take-down action.

The suspect later filed a lawsuit against the police officers and the department under 42 U.S.C. Section 1983, alleging violation of his Fourth Amendment rights. The suspect claimed that the officers stopped him without reasonable suspicion and used excessive force in the process. The Tenth Circuit ruled that the officers did not violate the suspect’s Fourth Amendment rights because the initial stop of the suspect was an investigative detention supported by a reasonable suspicion that the suspect was involved in criminal activity. Moreover, the court found the level of force used by the officers was reasonable in light of the suspect’s “strange and aggressive conduct.”

Myth: An officer must use the “least intrusive” or “best” option when using force.

Reality: The officer must use a reasonable force option.

Brown v. United States, 256 U.S. 335, 343 (1921) In addition to the guidance provided by Graham, the Supreme Court has long held that an officer need not consider the use of other options when facing a deadly threat. In Brown v. United States the Supreme Court stated, “[d]etached reflection cannot be demanded in the presence of an uplifted knife. Therefore in this Court, at least, it is not a condition of immunity that one in that situation should pause to consider whether a reasonable man might not think it possible to fly with safety or to disable his assailant rather than kill him.”

Plakas v. Drinski, 19 F.3d 1143 (7th Cir. 1994)

In Plakas v. Drinski, a police officer shot and killed a handcuffed subject who attacked the officer with a fireplace poker. In a lawsuit against the police officer and the county, the plaintiff did not dispute that at the moment the officer fired the fatal shot, the suspect was attacking the officer with the poker. Nor was it disputed that shortly before attacking the officer, the subject pointed the poker at the officer and said, "Either you're going to die here, or I'm going to die here."

The primary argument was that the officer could have and should have used alternative methods short of deadly force to resolve the situation. The plaintiff suggested, for example, that one of the officers on the scene had a canister of CS gas on his belt and that there was a K-9 unit in the vicinity that could have been called to the scene to subdue the subject. The U.S. district court granted summary judgment for the police. The appellate court affirmed with the following explanation:

There is no precedent in this Circuit (or any other) which says that the Constitution requires law enforcement officers to use all feasible alternatives to avoid a situation where deadly force can justifiably be used.

There are, however, cases which support the assertion that where deadly force is otherwise justified under the Constitution, there is no constitutional duty to use non-deadly alternatives first.

The court noted that a decision by an officer under these circumstances must be made after the briefest reflection:

As [the suspect] moved toward [the officer], was he supposed to think of an attack dog, of...CS gas, of how fast he could run backwards? Our answer is, and has been, no, because there is too little time for the officer to do so and too much opportunity to second-guess that officer.

Id. at 1148-49.

Elliott v. Leavitt, 99 F.3d 640 (4th Cir. 1996)

On June 18, 1995, police officer Jason Leavitt stopped motorist Archie Elliott. Elliott smelled of alcohol, and he admitted that he had been drinking excessively. Suspect Elliott failed several sobriety tests and was having trouble walking. Officer Leavitt called for backup, handcuffed suspect Elliott, and advised him that he was under arrest for driving while intoxicated. Officer Leavitt briefly searched Elliott, finding no weapon or other contraband.

Officer Wayne Cheney soon joined Officer Leavitt on the scene. Officer Cheney assisted Officer Leavitt in placing the suspect in the front passenger seat of Officer Leavitt's police car with the seatbelt fastened, the door closed, and the window rolled up. The officers were talking by the passenger side of the car when Officer Leavitt noticed a movement and looked to find the suspect with his finger on the trigger of a small handgun pointed at the officers. Officer Cheney also saw the gun. The suspect was very thin; he had released the seat belt and twisted his arms to the right side of his body to position the weapon. Officer Leavitt yelled, "Gun!" and ordered the suspect to drop it. After he did not respond, Officers Leavitt and Cheney commenced firing, killing the suspect. Twenty-two rounds were fired and Officer Cheney then retrieved the gun, which had remained clasped in the suspect's hand.

Appellees (in this case Elliott's estate) argued that Elliott did not pose a real threat to the officers, noting that his hands were handcuffed behind his back, that he was placed in the front passenger seat with the seatbelt fastened and the window up, and that the officers were outside the car at the time of the shooting. Appellees contended, and the district court agreed, that the officers might have responded differently, such as moving away from the car.

However, the appellate court found:

[t]his suggestion that the officers might have responded differently is exactly the type of judicial second look that the case law prohibits. Furthermore, even if Elliott's specific intent were relevant, it is not clear what other evidence of intent the district court would require -Elliott was pointing his gun at the officers with his finger on the trigger and ignored the order to drop his weapon. Given the officers' proximity to the car, it is also unclear that they could have moved away from the car quickly enough to avoid being shot.

The critical point, however, is precisely that Elliott was "threatening," threatening the lives of Leavitt and Cheney. The Fourth Amendment does not require police officers to wait until a suspect shoots to confirm that a serious threat of harm exists. The court's comment that the officers could have moved away from the car is, unfortunately, a suggestion more reflective of the "peace of a judge's chambers" than of a dangerous and threatening situation on the street.

Id. at 643.

Scott v. Henrich, 39 F.3d 912 (9th Cir. 1994)

Defendant police officers responded to a shots fired call. Witnesses directed them to the apartment where the shooter was. The defendants banged and kicked the door, ordering the shooter to open it. The shooter fumbled with the door latch, opened the door, and pointed a gun at the defendants, one of whom shot at the shooter, missing him. The other officer, thinking that the shooter had fired, shot four times at him, one of which dealt the fatal blow.

Plaintiff widow brought an action under 42 U.S.C.S. §1983, alleging that the defendants used greater force than necessary in the situation. The district court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment. On appeal, the court affirmed, holding that defendants did not need to avail themselves of the least intrusive means of responding to an exigent situation; they needed only act within a range of reasonable conduct.

The court held:

Requiring officers to find and choose the least intrusive alternative would require them to exercise superhuman judgment. In the heat of battle with lives potentially in the balance, an officer would not be able to rely on training and common sense to decide what would best accomplish his mission. Instead, he would need to ascertain the least intrusive alternative an inherently subjective determination and choose that option and that option only. Imposing such a requirement would inevitably induce tentativeness by officers, and thus deter police from protecting the public and themselves. It would also entangle the courts in endless second-guessing of police decisions made under stress and subject to the exigencies of the moment.

Officers thus need not avail themselves of the least intrusive means of responding to an exigent situation; they need only act within that range of conduct we identify as reasonable. The officers here clearly did: It's hardly unreasonable for officers to take arms, knock on the door of an apartment and identify themselves as police when an armed man who, they are told, recently fired shots and is acting "crazy" lurks inside.

Id. at 915 (footnote omitted).

Myth: A suspect must cause harm to an officer before an officer can use force.

Wardlaw v. Pickett, 1 F.3d 1297 (D.C. Cir. 1993)

Pickett (a U.S. Marshal) was removing an individual from a courthouse. Mr. Wardlaw (a friend of the individual being removed) ran up to Pickett yelling at him to leave his friend alone. As Wardlaw closed on Pickett, and before actually assaulting him, "Pickett turned and punched the approaching Wardlaw once in the jaw and two or three times in the chest."

In finding Pickett's actions reasonable, the court noted:

when Wardlaw rushed down the stairs toward them, Pickett. . . [was] in a vulnerable position, caught in a stairwell and moving an uncooperative individual. Wardlaw admits that he shouted at the deputies as he approached them, thus, again reasonably, raising a fear that he was about to attack. Furthermore, as Wardlaw acknowledges, Pickett hit him no more than three or four times -- all in rapid succession. Once Wardlaw sat down on the stairs, and it became apparent that he was not going to attack, Pickett did not hit him. . . . We believe that no reasonable jury could find that Pickett's use of force was so excessive that no reasonable officer could have believed it to be lawful.

In Montoute, a police officer was chasing a subject armed with a sawed-off shotgun. The officer eventually shot the subject in the back after verbal commands to stop went unheeded. The court noted that:

although the subject never turned to face the pursuing officer and never actually pointed the sawed-off shotgun at anyone, there was nothing to prevent him from doing either, or both, in a split second. At least where orders to drop the weapon have gone unheeded, an officer is not required to wait until an armed and dangerous felon has drawn a bead on the officer or others before using deadly force.

Id. at 185.

Myth: A subject must be armed to justify a reasonable use of deadly force.

Reality: The totality of circumstances known to the officer at the time force was used determines reasonableness in a deadly force situation.

Forrett v. Richardson, 112 F.3d 416 (9th Cir. 1997)

Brian Forrett committed a violent residential burglary. While in the residence, he encountered, subdued, and tied up three victims. He shot one of the victims in the neck at point blank range and shot at another using a .38 caliber revolver he found in the house. He then fled the scene in a truck owned by one of the residents, taking with him several firearms and 250 rounds of ammunition.

After the suspect left the house, one of the victims managed to untie himself and telephone the City of Riverside Police Department. The victim described suspect Forrett's appearance, the crimes, the truck, and the weapons to the officers who arrived at the house a few minutes later. These details were promptly conveyed by radio to numerous officers, including the defendants. The officers began a search for the suspect and found the truck within an hour. Neither the suspect nor the weapons were inside.

A few minutes later, defendant Officer Kenneth Raya saw the suspect walking in a nearby residential neighborhood. Because he matched the description of the burglar, Officer Raya confronted the suspect. The suspect fled into the residential area on foot. Officer Raya radioed for help and briefly chased the suspect. He stopped when the suspect ran out of view behind a house because he was worried that he was armed and might ambush him. Officer Raya waited for support, and when the other defendant officers, Officer Elliott, Officer Seymore and Officer Manning, arrived moments later, they renewed the chase.

Suspect Forrett eluded capture for almost an hour by running across yards and streets, and jumping fences. Officers confronted the suspect in a back yard and he attempted to flee over a fence. In all, approximately 24 rounds were fired, two of which struck the suspect. The police found no guns, either on the suspect or in the vicinity where he was captured. The court noted:

PDF
Contrary to Forrett's position, the suspect need not be armed or pose an immediate threat to the officers or others at the time of the shooting. The Supreme Court in Garner identified specific situations in which a fleeing felony suspect may be deemed to pose a threat of serious harm to the officer or others: "Where the officer has probable cause to believe that the suspect poses a threat of serious physical harm, either to the officer or to others, it is not constitutionally unreasonable to prevent escape by using deadly force. Thus, if the suspect threatens the officer with a weapon or there is probable cause to believe that he has committed a crime involving the infliction or threatened infliction of serious physical harm, deadly force may be used if necessary to prevent escape, and if, where feasible, some warning has been given."

Id. at 420 (quoting Tennessee v. Garner, 471 U.S. 1, 3 (1985)).

Thompson v. Hubbard, 257 F.3d 896 (8th Cir. 2001)

Responding to a report of shots fired and two suspects fleeing on foot from the scene of an armed robbery in Pine Lawn, Missouri, Officer Hubbard approached the suspect as he was getting into his car. The suspect fit the description of one of the robbery suspects -- a black man wearing a blue and gold jacket -- and was in an area where, based on the direction of their flight, Officer Hubbard believed the suspects might be. The suspect initially appeared to surrender, but then turned to flee. Officer Hubbard attempted to grab him, but succeeded only in pulling off his jacket.

A foot chase ensued, ending when the suspect ran into the space between two buildings and climbed over a short fence. According to Officer Hubbard, the suspect got up from the ground, looked over his shoulder at Officer Hubbard, and moved his arms as though reaching for a weapon at waist level. The suspect's back remained turned toward Officer Hubbard and obscured his hands from his view. Officer Hubbard yelled, "stop," and when the suspect's arms continued to move, he fired a single shot into the suspect's back just below his right shoulder blade, killing him. No weapon was found on his body.

The plaintiffs argued that a jury could have concluded that the officer's use of deadly force was unreasonable because the officer should have realized that the waistband of the suspect's sweat pants may not have been strong enough to hold a gun. The court noted:

We disagree with the plaintiffs' contention that if, as Hubbard maintains, Thompson turned and looked at him while the two were in close proximity and moved as though reaching for a weapon, a jury could conclude that Hubbard's use of deadly force was objectively unreasonable because Hubbard should have considered the fact that the waistband of Thompson's sweat pants may not have been strong enough to hold a gun. An officer is not constitutionally required to wait until he sets eyes upon the weapon before employing deadly force to protect himself against a fleeing suspect who turns and moves as though to draw a gun.

Id. at 899, citing Ryder v. City of Topeka, 814 F.2d 1412, 1419 n.16 (10th Cir. 1987) (concluding that because a requirement that a suspect actually have a weapon would place police in a dangerous and unreasonable situation . . . whether a particular seizure is reasonable is dependent on the “totality of the circumstances, and not simply on whether the suspect was actually armed”).

Myth: Violating agency use of force policy, while complying with the Fourth Amendment, can still result in criminal or civil liability.

Reality: Agency policy violations alone cannot form the basis for criminal or civil liability.

On October 31, 1988, Officer Peter Schulcz of the Springdale police department saw a vehicle come speeding out of an apartment complex. The car ran a stop sign, and Officer Schulcz gave pursuit. Rather than pulling over, the vehicle tried to escape, and led Officer Schulcz on a wild chase at speeds in excess of ninety miles per hour. After briefly getting stuck off road, the vehicle leaped forward and swerved toward Officer Schulcz's car. Officer Schulcz pulled his car to the right to avoid a collision and tried to position himself in front of the vehicle, however it swerved again toward the police cruiser.

The pursuit continued into the next suburb, where another officer attempted to block the fleeing vehicle by placing her vehicle in the suspect's path. However, she had left room for him to maneuver around her, and he did so, driving past at high speed with Officer Schulcz still in pursuit. After fleeing Officer Schulcz for approximately 2.6 miles, the suspect pulled on to a dead-end residential street. At the end of the street, the suspect tried to turn his car around in a lawn. Officer Schulcz, attempting to prevent his escape, placed his cruiser as close to the suspect's as possible. Eventually, the cars came nose to nose. Officer Schulcz then got out of his car and moved around its rear, intending to remove the suspect from his car.

Suddenly, the vehicle backed up and then sped forward and crashed into Officer Schulcz's car. He backed up again and maneuvered around the cruiser, smashing into the fence and gate as he did so. As the vehicle passed, Officer Schulcz pulled his gun and fired one shot at it. The bullet entered the passenger side of the car, pierced the passenger seat, and then struck the suspect his right side, killing him. The entire incident, beginning with Officer Schulcz's first sighting of the suspect, lasted about four minutes.

Mr. Smith's wife filed suit, claiming Officer Schulcz used excessive force in apprehending her husband. The court found that the officer's use of deadly force was reasonable under the Fourth Amendment. Mrs. Smith, however, claimed that Officer Schulcz violated his agency's policy regarding the use of deadly force and therefore the force was unreasonable. The policy forbids officers to fire at moving vehicles, unless they are acting in self-defense. Further, it bans the firing of shots to apprehend someone suspected of a misdemeanor. The court held:

[T]he fact that Officer Schulcz's actions may have violated Springdale's policies regarding police use of force does not require a different result. Under §1983, the issue is whether Officer Schulcz violated the Constitution, not whether he should be disciplined by the local police force. A city can certainly choose to hold its officers to a higher standard than that required by the Constitution without being subjected to increased liability under §1983. To hold that cities with strict policies commit more constitutional violations than those with lax policies would be an unwarranted extension of the law, as well as a violation of common sense. Ms. Smith's position, if adopted, would encourage all governments to adopt the least restrictive policies possible. While not expressly saying so, the Seventh Circuit has already recognized that city policies do not determine constitutional law.

Id. at 347-48.

Myth: A subject's known mental defect precludes officers from using deadly force, or at minimum requires officers to try options other than deadly force.

Reality: No such prohibition exists. A subject's known mental defect is a factor the court will consider in determining whether an application of force was reasonable.

Pena v. Leombruni, 200 F.3d 1031 (7th Cir. 1999)

Leombruni, a deputy sheriff of Winnebago County, Illinois, responded to a dispatch that a man, later identified as the plaintiffs' decedent, Pena, was "acting crazy," shoplifting, and fighting with the shop's employees. Pena fled upon Leombruni's arrival, but later turned and (with his dog) confronted Leombruni, who pepper sprayed the two of them and told Pena that he was under arrest. Pena again fled, but then stopped and picked up a chunk of concrete and advanced toward Leombruni, who drew his pistol and told him to put the chunk down. Leombruni backpedaled, but shot and killed Pena when Pena was within five to ten feet of him. Pena's estate brought suit, alleging excessive force in light of Pena's "apparent irrationality." The court held:

The question was not. . . Pena's actual mental state. That was irrelevant to the reasonableness of Leombruni's action in shooting him -- as would be obvious had Leombruni been in danger of being seriously injured not by Pena but by Pena's dog. Very little mentation is required for deadly action. A rattlesnake is deadly but could not form the mental state required for conviction of murder. Whatever Pena's mental problems (apparently he was high on cocaine), they were not such as to prevent him from beating Leombruni's brains out with a chunk of concrete.

Leombruni was entitled to defend himself whether or not Pena, had he assaulted him, and been prosecuted for the offense, would have been acquitted on the ground of insanity.

Id. at 1034.

Myth: Courts are generally “pro-law enforcement” and are unlikely to sustain claims of excessive force against the police.

Bush v. City of Tallahassee, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 74947

As Searcy Bush was walking in a residential area, Officer Renneth Beaupierre of the Tallahassee Police Department approached Plaintiff Bush and asked for his name. The Plaintiff asked Officer Beaupierre why he wanted to know. Officer Beaupierre responded that he just wanted to know. He then asked the Plaintiff what he was doing at the apartment complex. The Plaintiff said that he was visiting people. The Plaintiff asked Officer Beaupierre if he was a suspect and the officer said no. The Plaintiff asked Officer Beaupierre why he wanted to talk if he was not a suspect. Officer Beaupierre stated that he just wanted to talk. The Plaintiff told Officer Beaupierre that he did not want to talk, that he knew his rights, and that he was not required to talk because he was not a suspect. At some point, Officer Tyler Hall joined in the conversation. Officer Beaupierre walked toward the Plaintiff and told him to come over to talk to him.

The Plaintiff walked away from Officer Beaupierre and said he was not required to talk and that he did not want to talk. Officer Beaupierre directed the Plaintiff to put his hands behind his back. The Plaintiff raised his hands in the air like he was being arrested. With his hands in the air, he asked Officer Beaupierre if he was under arrest and he protested that he had done nothing. Officer Beaupierre explained to the Plaintiff that he was not being arrested, but that he was being detained. When the Plaintiff asked Officer Beaupierre for the reason, Officer Beaupierre told him to stop resisting arrest. The Plaintiff said he was not resisting, he was only asking a question.

Officers Beaupierre and Officer Hall then grabbed the Plaintiff and slammed him against a gate. Each officer held one of the Plaintiff's arms behind his back. After the Plaintiff hit the gate, the officers pulled him back, then lifted him and slammed his face into the concrete causing a head injury. When he was taken to the ground, Officer Beaupierre went to the ground also. The Plaintiff was on his side with one hand in front of him and one arm behind his back. Officer Beaupierre placed a handcuff on one of his arms. One officer had his knee on the Plaintiff's neck. The officers told the Plaintiff to put his hands behind his back, but he could not because Officer Beaupierre was on top of him. The Plaintiff was on his back spinning on the ground. Officer Beaupierre put his elbow at the Plaintiff's throat and spread his legs to brace himself. Officer Hall extended his baton and began striking the Plaintiff. He yelled at him to roll over and to turn on his stomach and to do it now. Officer Hall struck Bush with the baton at least 15 times. Mr. Bush was unable to roll over because Officer Beaupierre was on top of him, choking Mr. Bush with his elbow. There is no evidence the Plaintiff was struggling.

A crowd of 20 to 25 people gathered. They told the officers to stop hurting the Plaintiff. Within minutes Officer Matthew Copelin arrived. He ran from his car with his baton in hand and began striking the Plaintiff. Officer Copelin hit him 9 or 10 times. By this point, Officer Beaupierre had gotten off of him and rolled the Plaintiff over on his stomach, who used one hand to protect his legs, but he was hit on the wrist by a baton. Officer Michael Malafronte arrived soon thereafter. Officer Malafronte ran up to the Plaintiff and sprayed him with mace or pepper spray. Officer Malafronte then kicked Mr. Bush 3 or 4 times on the side or thigh. Mr. Bush was crying out in pain and moaning. He was crawling on his knees trying to wipe the pepper spray from his eyes. Meanwhile, Officer Copelin threatened the gathering crowd with arrest for obstruction of justice. Officer Gavin Larremore arrived next. He did not talk to the other officers. He ran to the Plaintiff and hit him with a Taser. After he was tased, the Plaintiff was laying on the ground on his stomach, praying, unable to move. Officer Larramore shot the Plaintiff with the Taser again. Four officers picked up Mr. Bush and threw him inside the cruiser.

As a result of the arrest, Mr. Bush had a large bump protruding from the middle of his forehead, an injury to his kneewhich causes him to limp and restricts him from running, an injury to his left wrist, and burns and sores on his back from the Taser.

The Court Held:

The United States Supreme Court in Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 109 S.Ct. 1865, 104 L. Ed. 2d 443 (1989), directed courts to consider several factors, "including the severity of the crime at issue, whether the suspect poses an immediate threat to the safety of the officers or others, and whether he is actively resisting arrest or attempting to evade arrest by flight." Graham 490 U.S. at 396. Applying this standard against the facts presented by Mr. Bush, the officers used excessive force. The crime of loitering and prowling is relatively minor. Mr. Bush did not pose an immediate threat to the safety of the officers. He was complying with the officer's instructions when he could. He was not resisting arrest. A reasonable jury could find for Mr. Bush on his battery claims. Accordingly, summary judgment as to these claims will be denied.

For the same reasons stated for Mr. Bush's battery claims, summary judgment should also be denied on the excessive force claims.

"[Q]ualified immunity is not appropriate when the Graham analysis yields an answer that is clear beyond all doubt." In this case, Mr. Bush has evidence to show that he was not resisting the officers. Nevertheless, he was choked, beaten with batons, maced, kicked, and tased. Plaintiff states that he was not struggling and did not pose a threat to the officers. Assuming Mr. Bush's facts are true, the force used against Mr. Bush was clearly excessive. The individual officers are not entitled to summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds.

Green v. N.J. State Police, 246 Fed. Appx. 158 (3rd Cir. 2007)

Late at night, on April 22, 2002, Green was driving home with his girlfriend when he was pulled over for speeding by New Jersey state troopers Robert Parry and Frederick Fife. The driver did not have a driver's license or any other identification, and provided a false name to the officers. Later tests revealed that his blood alcohol level was over the legal limit and that he had marijuana in his system.

After asking Plaintiff Green to get out of the car, the troopers continued speaking to him and asking questions. Meanwhile, troopers Salvatore Giuliano and Craig Brown arrived in a separate car. Eventually the Plaintiff was placed under arrest, handcuffed, searched and placed him in the back seat of the cruiser. When Trooper Parry entered the front of the car, Plaintiff Green began to complain that he had to use a bathroom immediately. Trooper Parry told him that he would have to wait until they got to the police station, and Plaintiff Green, growing increasingly agitated, continued to implore Trooper Parry to allow him to urinate. Plaintiff Green then began to curse and yell at Trooper Parry when he noticed that the other troopers had asked his girlfriend to step out the car he had been driving.

At some point, Plaintiff Green was able bring his handcuffs in front of his body. He told Trooper Parry that he was going to urinate in the car and unzipped his pants, and Trooper Parry then heard a banging sound on the plastic divider between the back and front seats. Trooper Parry immediately walked around the car and opened the rear door. According to Plaintiff Green, Trooper Parry violently grabbed his neck and throat, choking him. While struggling to pull him out, Trooper Parry commanded Green to get out of the car, but he refused. Soon after, Trooper Fife came over and twice sprayed the Plaintiff with either mace or pepper spray, which made it difficult for him to see or speak. Troopers Parry and Fife, and another trooper repeatedly commanded Plaintiff Green to exit the vehicle and tried to pull him out. He resisted by wedging his feet under the front seat and pushing himself away from the officers towards a partition that divided the back seat. As the struggle ensued, both Trooper Parry and Trooper Fife punched and kicked Plaintiff Green several times. Green has stated that he was punched in the face--suffering a swollen eye and a "busted" nose and mouth--and kicked in the ribs as well as other parts of his body. Plaintiff Green has also asserted that Fife twice hit him in the head with a flashlight, causing him to bleed from resulting lacerations.

Eventually, the officers were able to extract Plaintiff Green from the car. They threw him to the ground, and, according to Green, kned him in the back, and kicked him in the ribs and buttocks. The troopers then called for an ambulance, which took Plaintiff Green to the hospital for medical attention.

The Court held:

We agree with the District Court that, viewing the facts in the light most favorable to Green, a reasonable jury could conclude that the troopers' use of force was excessive under the circumstances. We do not mean to suggest that the troopers in fact acted unreasonably or that police officers are not permitted to use force when attempting to extract an arrestee from a police vehicle when that arrestee has refused to exit. Indeed, were we to accept the troopers' version of events in this case, we would likely agree with them that no constitutional violation occurred.

Green, however, has alleged three key facts that, if believed, could lead a reasonable jury to conclude that the officers used excessive force. First, Green has stated that Parry violently grabbed his throat before asking him to exit the vehicle. Second, Green has claimed that Fife twice hit him on the head with a flashlight, causing lacerations that required stitches. Finally, Green has maintained that after he was pulled from the car, he was thrown to the ground, kned, and kicked several times. These allegations, none of which are either established or definitively refuted by the videotapes, present issues of material fact that must be resolved by a jury.

Applying the Graham and Sharrar factors, we believe these actions, if proven, would constitute excessive force. Green was arrested for a nonviolent offense and was unarmed. Although Green was agitated and had brought his handcuffs forward, an action certainly justifying a physical response from the police, it would not have been reasonable for Parry to violently grab his neck without first using lesser force. Similarly, although the officers were justified in using force to extract Green once he refused to exit, it would not have been reasonable for Fife to strike him on the head twice with a flashlight. Finally, if he was restrained on the ground after being pulled from the car, it would not have been reasonable for the officers to continue kicking him.

Occupy Wall Street Movement - Public Health/Fire Hazard Safety Concerns

Occupy protestors throughout the Central Florida region are continuing with mass gatherings by setting up camp locations in city parks to conduct local demonstrations of the Occupy movement. Nationwide, encampments have posed a public health/safety risk of disease outbreaks, illnesses and fire hazard concerns for law enforcement, first responders, and public health officials. In several cases throughout the United States, public health and fire safety issues have been addressed due to demonstrators camping together for consecutive days without access to basic facilities or utilities.

PUBLIC HEALTH CONCERNS

Los Angeles, CA - On November 30, 2011, Los Angeles protestors in the Occupy Wall Street movement were forced to discontinue their protest in front of City Hall due to public health concerns. Law enforcement had to wear protective biohazard suits (pictured right) as they cleared the 2 ½ - month-old tent city that was set up by protestors because of the numerous reports of illnesses. A total of 292 protestors were arrested for refusing to leave the contaminated area.

The demonstrators and their compatriots camped in rain and heat with old food, trash, feces, urine and hypodermic needles causing germs to rapidly spread throughout their immune systems. Cases of staph infections and lice were reported, causing officials to take action by shutting them down.

Atlanta, GA - The Fulton County Health Department reported 2 cases of tuberculosis where protestors from Occupy Atlanta were cohabiting with residents of a homeless shelter. There was concern of mass contamination since tuberculosis is contracted through the air.

Occupy Wall Street Movement - Public Health/Fire Hazard Safety Concerns

In addition to public health issues, fire hazards are an increasing concern as the Occupy encampment continues and temperatures begin to drop. Fire departments across the nation are attempting to educate protesters on the hazards associated with building wood-burning fire pits and propane heaters while using hay as insulation.

FIRE HAZARD CONCERNS

Philadelphia, PA – Fire officials and a Hazmat team removed a potentially dangerous propane tank from a wooden structure labeled as a “warming station” (pictured right) that was set up by protesters at the “Occupy Philadelphia” encampment. It contained a propane-fired heater that was continuously running inside to keep members warm.

Augusta, ME – On December 5, 2011, the State Fire Marshal’s Office (Maine) reported that an 8X12 tent set up for the encampment of “Occupy Augusta” was intentionally set on fire and destroyed while the members were protesting. Officials were concerned since the fire could have spread to the occupied tents, causing a mass casualty response.

Analyst Comments: According to social media outlets, the Occupy protesters throughout the Central Florida region plan to continue with demonstrations and mass gatherings. As these encampments at local parks are prolonged, public health officials and hospitals may potentially see an increase in cases of disease outbreaks and/or illnesses related to these events. Law enforcement and first responders should consider wearing protective suits when responding or evacuating a mass gathering/encampment location.

PUBLIC HEALTH CONCERNS

Los Angeles, CA - On November 30, 2011, Los Angeles protestors in the Occupy Wall Street movement were forced to discontinue their protest in front of City Hall due to public health concerns. Law enforcement had to wear protective biohazard suits (pictured right) as they cleared the 2 ½ - month-old tent city that was set up by protestors because of the numerous reports of illnesses. A total of 292 protestors were arrested for refusing to leave the contaminated area.

The demonstrators and their compatriots camped in rain and heat with old food, trash, feces, urine and hypodermic needles causing germs to rapidly spread throughout their immune systems. Cases of staph infections and lice were reported, causing officials to take action by shutting them down.

Atlanta, GA - The Fulton County Health Department reported 2 cases of tuberculosis where protestors from Occupy Atlanta were cohabiting with residents of a homeless shelter. There was concern of mass contamination since tuberculosis is contracted through the air.

Occupy Wall Street Movement - Public Health/Fire Hazard Safety Concerns

In addition to public health issues, fire hazards are an increasing concern as the Occupy encampment continues and temperatures begin to drop. Fire departments across the nation are attempting to educate protesters on the hazards associated with building wood-burning fire pits and propane heaters while using hay as insulation.

FIRE HAZARD CONCERNS

Philadelphia, PA – Fire officials and a Hazmat team removed a potentially dangerous propane tank from a wooden structure labeled as a “warming station” (pictured right) that was set up by protesters at the “Occupy Philadelphia” encampment. It contained a propane-fired heater that was continuously running inside to keep members warm.

Augusta, ME – On December 5, 2011, the State Fire Marshal’s Office (Maine) reported that an 8X12 tent set up for the encampment of “Occupy Augusta” was intentionally set on fire and destroyed while the members were protesting. Officials were concerned since the fire could have spread to the occupied tents, causing a mass casualty response.

Analyst Comments: According to social media outlets, the Occupy protesters throughout the Central Florida region plan to continue with demonstrations and mass gatherings. As these encampments at local parks are prolonged, public health officials and hospitals may potentially see an increase in cases of disease outbreaks and/or illnesses related to these events. Law enforcement and first responders should consider wearing protective suits when responding or evacuating a mass gathering/encampment location.

Occupy Phoenix to protest on light rail Thursday

Emily Gersema
Azcentral – Phx Beat blog
November 15, 2011

Protesters involved with the Phoenix version of the anti-Wall Street movement say they are planning to “occupy the light rail” on Thursday.

Speaking on behalf of Occupy Phoenix, Ezra Kaplan said protesters will board the light rail trains at 7 a.m. Thursday at three major stops: Sycamore/Main in Mesa; Washington/Central in downtown Phoenix; and Montebello/19th Avenue.

“The goal is to hit the rush-hour traffic (on the light rail),” Kaplan said. “Once the rush-hour traffic calms down, it (the protest) will probably taper off.”

Kaplan said the group also is planning a flash mob that would take place in the downtown business and entertainment areas around noon on Thursday.

The group also is planning a rally on Friday. Kaplan said it will likely begin in the afternoon.

A steady group of Occupy Phoenix protesters has met every day at Cesar Chavez Plaza in downtown Phoenix near City Hall, where police have been monitoring the group to ensure, among other things, that the protesters are obeying the city’s no-camping law. This law bars protesters from spending the night on the plaza.

Protesters have objected about the law to the Phoenix City Council, but the nine-member council has declined to offer the group a waiver. The protesters also asked for public port-a-potties. They have been using restrooms at nearby businesses and public buildings.

Last week, Phoenix police spokesman Sgt Trent Crump said that since the protest began in mid-October, 50 protesters have been arrested. Crump said some of the protesters were cited for violations of the no-camping law, as well as issues with public urination and defecation.

The protesters argue that the police and other city officials are unfairly portraying them as homeless people.

(U//FOUO) A group of approximately twenty-five (25) Occupy Wall Street (OWS) demonstrators is conducting a march from Liberty Square in New York City to McPherson Square in Washington, DC, they have dubbed "Occupy the Highway". The march started today around 12 P.M. in New York City. Currently, the group is planning to take a ferry service into Jersey City, New Jersey (Liberty Harbor/Marvin Blvd terminal) and head to Elizabeth for their first stop. Major travel routes throughout New Jersey include US 1 & 9, NJ 21, and NJ 27.

(U//FOUO) The main concern for law enforcement and private sector security officials during the march through New Jersey is the safety of the demonstrators and motorists on the travel route. Potential for traffic delays and accidents could occur given the densely populated areas where the demonstrators will be passing through.

Advisory

(U//FOUO) NJ Regional Operations Intelligence Center (NJ ROIC) Threat Analysis Program ~ AE201111-1375

(U//FOUO) A group of approximately twenty-five (25) Occupy Wall Street (OWS) demonstrators is conducting a march from Liberty Square in New York City to McPherson Square in Washington, DC, they have dubbed “Occupy the Highway”. The march started today around 12 P.M. in New York City. Currently, the group is planning to take a ferry service into Jersey City, New Jersey (Liberty Harbor/Marvin Blvd terminal) and head to Elizabeth for their first stop. Major travel routes throughout New Jersey include US 1 & 9, NJ 21, and NJ 27.¹

(U//FOUO) The itinerary for New Jersey includes:²

- 11/9/11: Liberty Square to Elizabeth, NJ
- 11/10/11: Elizabeth, NJ to New Brunswick, NJ
- 11/11/11: New Brunswick, NJ to Trenton, NJ
- 11/12/11: Trenton, NJ to Andalusia, PA

Potential Implications for New Jersey

(U//FOUO) The Occupy Wall Street movement throughout the United States, especially New Jersey, has been primarily peaceful and remains intent on doing so. The main concern for law enforcement and private sector security officials during the march through New Jersey is the safety of the demonstrators and motorists on the travel route. Potential for traffic delays and accidents could occur given the densely populated areas where the demonstrators will be passing through. Even though the initial size of the demonstration is relatively small it could increase as local supporters join, causing potential crowd control and traffic safety issues on major travel routes.

(U//FOUO) The NJ ROIC recognizes that Americans have constitutionally protected rights to assemble, speak, and petition. The NJ ROIC safeguards these rights, noting that violent extremists could disrupt legal activities, interfering with otherwise peaceful events.

Subject: Occupy Wall Street March to Washington D.C.: Potential Impacts in New Jersey

Transmittal sent on November 9, 2011 at 2:05 P.M.
#AE2011111-1375

(U//FOUO) A group of approximately twenty-five (25) Occupy Wall Street (OWS) demonstrators is conducting a march from Liberty Square in New York City to McPherson Square in Washington, DC, they have dubbed "Occupy the Highway". The march started today around 12 P.M. in New York City. Currently, the group is planning to take a ferry service into Jersey City, New Jersey (Liberty Harbor/Marvin Blvd terminal) and head to Elizabeth for their first stop. Major travel routes throughout New Jersey include US 1 & 9, NJ 21, and NJ 27.

(U//FOUO) The main concern for law enforcement and private sector security officials during the march through New Jersey is the safety of the demonstrators and motorists on the travel route. Potential for traffic delays and accidents could occur given the densely populated areas where the demonstrators will be passing through.

(U//FOUO) The NJ ROIC recognizes that Americans have constitutionally protected rights to assemble, speak, and petition. The NJ ROIC safeguards these rights, noting that violent extremists could disrupt legal activities, interfering with otherwise peaceful events.

(U//FOUO) A group of approximately twenty-five (25) Occupy Wall Street (OWS) demonstrators is conducting a march from Liberty Square in New York City to McPherson Square in Washington, DC, they have dubbed “Occupy the Highway”. The march started today around 12 P.M. in New York City. Currently, the group is planning to take a ferry service into Jersey City, New Jersey (Liberty Harbor/Marvin Blvd terminal) and head to Elizabeth for their first stop. Major travel routes throughout New Jersey include US 1 & 9, NJ 21, and NJ 27.¹

(U//FOUO) The itinerary for New Jersey includes:²

- 11/9/11: Liberty Square to Elizabeth, NJ
- 11/10/11: Elizabeth, NJ to New Brunswick, NJ
- 11/11/11: New Brunswick, NJ to Trenton, NJ
- 11/12/11: Trenton, NJ to Andalusia, PA

Potential Implications for New Jersey

(U//FOUO) The Occupy Wall Street movement throughout the United States, especially New Jersey, has been primarily peaceful and remains intent on doing so. The main concern for law enforcement and private sector security officials during the march through New Jersey is the safety of the demonstrators and motorists on the travel route. Potential for traffic delays and accidents could occur given the densely populated areas where the demonstrators will be passing through. Even though the initial size of the demonstration is relatively small it could increase as local supporters join, causing potential crowd control and traffic safety issues on major travel routes.

(U//FOUO) The NJ ROIC recognizes that Americans have constitutionally protected rights to assemble, speak, and petition. The NJ ROIC safeguards these rights, noting that violent extremists could disrupt legal activities, interfering with otherwise peaceful events.

The Pentagon is Offering Free Military Hardware To Every Police Department in the U.S.

Robert Johnson

JusticeOnline.org

The U.S. military has some of the most advanced killing equipment in the world that allows it to invade almost wherever it likes at will.

We produce so much military equipment that inventories of military robots, M-16 assault rifles, helicopters, armored vehicles, and grenade launchers eventually start to pile up and it turns out a lot of these weapons are going straight to American police forces to be used against U.S. citizens.

Benjamin Carlson at The Daily reports on a little known endeavor called the "1033 Program" that gave more than $500 million of military gear to U.S. police forces in 2011 alone. 1033 was passed by Congress in 1997 to help law-enforcement fight terrorism and drugs, but despite a 40-year low in violent crime, police are snapping up hardware like never before. While this year's staggering take topped the charts, next year's orders are up 400 percent over the same period. This upswing coincides with an increasingly military-like style of law enforcement most recently seen in the Occupy Wall Street crackdowns. Tim Lynch, director of the Cato Institute's project on criminal justice told

From The Daily:

Thanks to it, cops in Cobb County, Ga. — one of the wealthiest and most educated counties in the U.S. — now have an amphibious tank. The sheriff of Richland County, S.C., proudly acquired a machine-gun-equipped armored personnel carrier that he nicknamed “The Peacemaker.”

This comes on top of grants from the Department of Homeland Security that enable police departments to buy vehicles such as “BearCats” — 16,000-pound bulletproof trucks equipped with battering rams, gun ports, tear-gas dispensers and radiation detectors. To date, more than 500 of these tank-like vehicles have been sold by Lenco, its Massachusetts-based manufacturer, according to a report in the Orlando Sentinel.

“It’s kind of had a corrupting influence on the culture of policing in America,” Lynch says. “The dynamic is that you have some officer go to the chief and say, people in the next county have [military hardware], if we don’t take it some other city will. Then they acquire the equipment, they create a paramilitary unit, and everything seems fine. “But then one or two years pass. They say, look we’ve got this equipment, this training and we haven’t been using it. That’s where it starts to creep into routine policing.”

Lt Ferguson,

I'm attaching a status update on the Occupy Protest here in Colorado Springs. Our department (especially Code Enforcement, our Downtown Area Officers as well as the Command Staff of the Division that encompasses the Downtown area where the main protest activities occurred) worked collaboratively with the protestors. The City has a "no camping" ordinance which prohibits the erection of structures (tents, etc.) unless a permit is obtained. Protesters applied for the permit, which was granted for 30 days. The permit was not renewed and the protestors are mostly in compliance with the no camping, loitering, park hours rules (see attached memo).

The department has been complimented by citizens, city officials, and the protestors on the collaborative effort, thus avoiding clashes that have occurred in other cities.

Hope this helps a bit. If you would like more information I can put you in contact with either the Code Enforcement Supervisor or one of the other key players from our department that are involved with the Occupy Protesters here in Colorado Springs.

Best Regards,

CITY OF COLORADO SPRINGS

DATE: 12/05/2011
TO: Chief Pete Carey via Chain-of-Command
FROM: Lt. Pat Rigdon, Acting Commander-Gold Hill Division
SUBJECT: CSPD Response to Occupy Colorado Springs

The purpose of this memorandum is to document the efforts of the Colorado Springs Police Department to effectively handle the Occupy Colorado Springs protest group. The group currently operates at the corner of Bijou Street and Tejon Street. The memorandum will address the number of calls-for-service related to the protest groups, arrests, CSPD resources dedicated to the protests, overtime needed, and citizen and business complaints regarding the protesters.

Calls-for-Service

The Occupy Colorado Springs movement began with actual protests on the corner of Bijou Street and Tejon Street around October 1, 2011. Most calls-for-service (CFS) have been assigned to the address of Acacia Park, 115 E. Platte Avenue. From October 1, 2011 through October 31, 2011 the CSPD Communication Center received 84 CFS at Acacia Park. The prior month (September 1- September 30) the Communication Center received 49 CFS at Acacia Park. These numbers include all CFS whether related directly to Occupy Colorado Springs or not.

The revocable permit that Occupy Colorado Springs held was not renewed and the structures that the group had erected were removed on November 20, 2011. From October 1, 2011 to November 20, 2011 CSPD handled 28 calls-for-service that were directly related to the presence of protesters. The CFS included those generated by protesters and other citizens. Of the 28 CFS, 18 were complaints against the actual Occupy group that holds the permit. Several of these were prior to the issuance of the permit and were in regard to the tents on the sidewalk. 9 of the CFS were either called in by the Occupy group or other citizens regarding counter-protesters causing a disturbance. One CFS was the November 20, 2011 call generated by CSPD to address the non-renewal of the permit.

Since the structures were dismantled, CSPD has handled only one CFS directly related to the protest group. This call was officer initiated in response to Occupy CS setting up tables in the right-of-way. The total number of CFS in Acacia Park related to the protest or not, from November 21, 2011 through December 5, 2011 is 11 CFS.

Arrests

CITY OF COLORADO SPRINGS

To date, the number of arrests has been few. There have been a total of 7 individuals arrested. One of these individuals, Tim Semple, has been arrested 4 times. The arrests have been for the following offenses:

Park Hours-2
Camping in the Park- 2
Trespassing-1
Interference with a Public Official-2
Alcohol Offenses-1
Misdemeanor Menacing-1
Code Violation-1

It should be noted that the individuals that had the permit for Occupy Colorado Springs have not been arrested. The misdemeanor menacing charge was against an individual who had threatened the protesters.

CSPD Resources

Most of the calls-for-service regarding the Occupy group have been handled consistent with normal CSPD protocol. There were three significant CSPD responses that required overtime: a planned march by Occupy Colorado Springs on October 15, 2011, the Veteran's Day Parade on November 5, 2011, and the dismantling of the Occupy structures on November 20, 2011. All three of these incidents were in response to anticipated problems, not a reaction to any violent behaviors exhibited by the protest group. However, these responses did generate significant overtime for CSPD. In order to properly staff these events, CSPD used the Tactical Enforcement Unit, VNI personnel, the Crowd Control Team, the Homeless Outreach Team (HOT), and the City Marshals. The response for the October 15th march cost $3841.80 in overtime. The November 5th parade response cost $6207.58 in overtime. The November 20th event cost $5537.97. In addition, there has been other overtime incurred by VNI, HOT, and Code Enforcement personnel totaling $2045.22. The total overtime related to Occupy Colorado Springs is $17,632.57. This number does not include any on-duty resources used or the time of exempt employees.

Citizen/Business Complaints

So far, 2 complaints from downtown business owners have been received through either the Mayor's Office or the Chief's Office. These two complaints (received from Zerbe Jewelers and Ellie K Boutique) have been general in nature and the concerns centered on shoppers being hesitant to be downtown due to the protesters. In addition, Councilman Bernie Herpin has expressed his concern with the presence of the protest group. The only other written complaint that has been received was from the El Paso County Tea Party regarding what they perceive as inequitable treatment of their group compared to the Occupy group. Specifically, the cost and handling of the permit process was at issue.

The two daytime officers that are assigned to the downtown area have done some informal inquiries to business owners regarding their feelings toward the Occupy group. The officers contacted 17 business owners/managers in the area of Acacia Park. Of these 17 businesses, 10 of them felt that the Occupy group was detrimental to their business. The other 7 businesses did not express negative or positive feelings about the group. A complete list of businesses and responses is available.

There were concerns in regard to the general appearance of the protest site. The cleanliness/tidiness of the site has varied. On November 2, 2011, Sgt. Mark Stevens took several photographs showing some disarray. These photographs are attached. The Homeless Outreach Team did contact the group the following day and the site was cleaned up. However, the conditions continued to be a concern. After a wind storm the group reinforced the existing structures with wood. Several YouTube videos provide an accurate description of the site. There were normally several unattended signs and other items lying around.

When CSPD and Code Enforcement were dismantling the site on November 20, 2011, I noted several mice scurrying from underneath the wooden pallets. Code Enforcement Officers noted the distinct smell of urine inside of the structures. During the dismantling of the structures, several of the protesters also complained that we were removing their "homes" and the only shelter that they had. I would note that the permit was not issued so the protesters could live or camp in the structures.

Other Agencies Response

I did contact Chief Lou Velez of the Pueblo Police Department. He indicated that the Occupy Pueblo group has been conducting demonstrations at a very small park in downtown Pueblo. The group has applied for and been granted some permits to exclusively occupy the park and have tents on weekends. Otherwise, the group only is in the park protesting during park hours (7am-10pm) and does not have structures, tents, or tables set up. The group in Pueblo swells to between 10-15 protesters on weekends.

Ft. Collins recently moved the Occupy Ft. Collins group to a park out of the immediate downtown area. This was by order of their mayor. According to news reports, the group does not have tents or food tables set up.

Dear M. Burke,

I'm using this request to introduce myself. I'm Commander Arnaud BALESTE, new replacement of Jean Philippe RITZ. I become the new deputy of M. Romuald MULLER. I'm just arrived in the French Embassy last Monday.

I'm [REDACTED] years old, [REDACTED] [REDACTED] in France.

My background was made around Investigations Dpt. I start in the Force 21 years ago. First at the Financial Enforcement Unit of Paris and then, in 1994, at the Criminal Investigation Dpt of Paris, Homicide & Counter Terrorism Bureau.

I'm graduated from the FBINA 245 th session. At last, I was leading an investigation team in the Counter Terrorism Unit of Paris.

I hope see you soon and continue the excellent collaboration started with my previous colleagues.

Regarding the events planned for tomorrow October 15th all around the world, our attention is focused on Washington DC protests and demonstrations. We are especially interested to follow several organizations based on "occupy wall street" in NYC. France is also targeted by this kind of demonstration and many Police units are following the evolution of these groups.

I made some Internet searches and my attention was focused on the "stop the machine" movement and "OccupyDC" group who settled in Freedom Plaza and Mc Pherson Square.

It could be very interesting for us to be aware of the evolution of this groups in an other way than the media reports.

I will really appreciate, if you could give me a contact in your Intelligence Division who could explain me their history and claims.

In a other way, and to compare our both Law Enforcement operatives process, I will be very pleased if you allow me to read your arrests statistics and actions linked to these protests.

Thanks in advance for your answer.

Hope see you soon

Best Regards

Dear M. Burcke,

Thank you for these precisions. As you guess, we follow the evolution of all the "occupy" movement all around the country by our different liaison officier. It's a global survey done by all our foreign fileds to summerize what is going on abroad regarding the events planned in France.

I'm sorry to disturb you with this questions but I've to send a feed back to my headquarters and it is helpfull for me to have an official vision of the Law Enforcement response, especially in the Capital city

Thank you for the information. Can we stay in touch after the protest to precise the numbers and cause of arrests ?

Thank in advance.

Have a great day

Arnaud, the groups continue to maintain residence in McPherson Square and on Freedom Plaza. US Park Police made 38 arrests this weekend, when demonstrators refused to remove an illegal structure. This week, we have an employees union in town and there will be marches throughout the week and 3 days of events on the national mall. We don't anticipate civil disobedience or expect to arrest any demonstrators at this point. Let me know if you need additional information.

Also, Ill be leaving at 11:00, but can get anything you would send on my B-Berry. If it needs to be posted to HIS I will have access to a computer at various times, but there may be a lag time from the time you send it to me until I can post it.

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

For those of you who will be travelling in and around Georgetown on Thursday particularly those who will be attending the Friends and Sponsors Dinner please see this posted alert that we received this afternoon.

Action: Get on the Bridge!

Join in a Labor-Community-Occupy Day of Action and March on the Key Bridge in Georgetown in protest of the deterioration of our public infrastructure and public services.

* Protest will follow a teach-in on the challenges facing public education.

A bit from SEIU about why we march:

"A report by the non-profit organization, Transportation for America, found that the Key Bridge was one of 215 bridges in the Washington, DC metro area that need substantial repairs or even replacement.

But obstructionists in Congress refuse to create jobs by investing in public workers and infrastructure and refuse to make the richest 1% pay a little more in taxes.

Enough is enough.

Investing in our schools, in public employees, and in repairing bridges that millions of cars drive across each year will not only reduce unemployment, it will make our children, communities, and our country stronger.

Please join us on the Key Bridge at 4 pm on Thursday, November 17 to let Congress know that they cannot ignore the 99% who have been hurt the most by this economy any longer."

The 99% will be there. Occupy Wall St. Occupy K St. Occupy everywhere!

When Thu Nov 17 4pm 7pm Eastern Time

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

For those of you who will be travelling in and around Georgetown on Thursday particularly those who will be attending the Friends and Sponsors Dinner please see this posted alert that we received this afternoon.

Action: Get on the Bridge!

Join in a Labor-Community-Occupy Day of Action and March on the Key Bridge in Georgetown in protest of the deterioration of our public infrastructure and public services.

* Protest will follow a teach-in on the challenges facing public education.

A bit from SEIU about why we march:

"A report by the non-profit organization, Transportation for America, found that the Key Bridge was one of 215 bridges in the Washington, DC metro area that need substantial repairs or even replacement.

But obstructionists in Congress refuse to create jobs by investing in public workers and infrastructure and refuse to make the richest 1% pay a little more

Investing in our schools, in public employees, and in repairing bridges that millions of cars drive across each year will not only reduce unemployment, it will make our children, communities, and our country stronger.

Please join us on the Key Bridge at 4 pm on Thursday, November 17 to let Congress know that they cannot ignore the 99% who have been hurt the most by this economy any longer."

The 99% will be there. Occupy Wall St. Occupy K St. Occupy everywhere!

United States Science Advisory Board for Biosecurity Bans Full H5N1 Study Results

The United States National Science Advisory Board for Biosecurity rendered a decision on December 20th, requesting that the results from Drs. Fouchier's and Kawaoka's controversial studies on H5N1 with ferrets not be published.¹⁻⁴ This is the first instance where the National Science Advisory Board censored the findings of two scientific publications due to the pandemic implications and its potential as a bioterror threat.^{1,2} Both scientists have been working on interspecies transmission studies with influenza.⁴ Fouchier's research was to be first released at a flu meeting in September with results that concerned the Science Advisory Board for Biosecurity Board and the scientific community.^{1,5} Dr. Kawaoka's research produced similar results.⁵ Both scientists have agreed to publish limited results from their studies.¹

H5N1 is a bird flu strain associated with poultry and has recently been linked to live poultry markets.^{3,6} Approximately 600 cases have been reported and more than half of these cases resulted in death.³ Most of the reported cases were from Asia with persons being in close proximity with birds.^{1,7}

The purpose of the Fouchier study was to determine if H5N1 has the means to become pandemic. Fouchier purposely induced three mutations in H5N1 to confer bird flu to mammals.⁷ He and his research team transfected the modified H5N1 strain to ferrets which killed them and used this deadly virus to pass to new healthy ferrets.^{5,7} Fouchier passed the strain 10 times. On the tenth passage, the virus was airborne killing the ferrets in a nearby cage.^{5,7} The genetically altered strain that killed the ferrets in a nearby had mutations on two different genes with a total of five mutations between the two genes.⁷ From these results, Fouchier et al concluded at least five mutations were needed to make the virus airborne.⁷ The two genes identified shared the same mutations. Ferrets were used in these studies because their body system responds to flu like the human system.⁶ According to Fouchier, studies have shown that ferret associated flu strains have been transferred to humans.⁵

Fouchier has provided a roadmap to an aerosolized pathogenic strain of H5N1. The concerns of the National Science Advisory Board are that the mutations on the genes that cause virulence have been identified and that viral strain is now aerosolized. There's a potential that nefarious persons could modify the virologists' results to generate an aerosolized strain that's highly pathogenic in humans if fully published. Additionally, the transmission of the modified H5N1 strain being transmitted by fomites.⁸

A proactive approach would be to use the current data and develop vaccines and antiviral drugs since the mutations on the two genes are known.

Abrin Toxin Fashion Bracelets

Background

Fashion bracelets made from the Jequirity Pea, a toxic relative of the castor bean are being recalled by 36 retailers in the United Kingdom.¹ The castor bean plant also known as Ricinus communis source of the ricin toxin. The abrin toxin is acquired from the seeds of the Abrus precatorius plant is also known as Jequirity Pea or the Rosary Pea and is more lethal than the ricin toxin.¹⁻³

The lethal dose of abrin is 75 times smaller than ricin: the LD₅₀ for abrin is 0.04 µg/kg as compared to the LD₅₀ for ricin being 3 µg/kg.^{1,3} Like ricin, the abrin toxin is a protein phototoxin that disrupts protein synthesis which eventually leads to cell death.^{1,2} The Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) lists abrin and ricin as select toxins in the National Select Agent Registry.²

The CDC reports that abrin is a robust select toxin that can withstand extreme temperatures such as very hot or very cold environments.²

Public Health Impact

Based on their lethality, the abrin bracelets are potential all-around health hazards. The general public is unaware that these fashion bracelets are toxic and their level of toxicity. There are no restrictions on ordering the bracelets in large or small quantities which may appeal to nefarious persons with unfavorable intentions; such as inflicting harm to others or harm to themselves such as persons wanting to commit suicide.⁴

On a larger scale the bracelets may appeal to home grown extremists or radicalized groups due their inconspicuous appearance (easy to smuggle), transportability, and lethality. They can easily pass through customs without authorities knowing their true purpose.

Additionally, information on abrin and its methodology is via the internet. To date, there is no antidote for an abrin toxin exposure only supportive care.

Symptoms from an abrin toxin exposure occur within an 8 hour period and include but not limited to respiratory and gastrological health constraints.^{1,2}

Routes of Exposure

- Ingestion
- Inhalation
- Cutaneous

Groups of Interest

- Radicalized groups or home grown extremists

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

For those of you who will be travelling in and around Georgetown on Thursday particularly those who will be attending the Friends and Sponsors Dinner please see this posted alert that we received this afternoon.

Action: Get on the Bridge!

Join in a Labor-Community-Occupy Day of Action and March on the Key Bridge in Georgetown in protest of the deterioration of our public infrastructure and public services.

* Protest will follow a teach-in on the challenges facing public education.

A bit from SEIU about why we march:

"A report by the non-profit organization, Transportation for America, found that the Key Bridge was one of 215 bridges in the Washington, DC metro area that need substantial repairs or even replacement. But obstructionists in Congress refuse to create jobs by investing in public workers and infrastructure and refuse to make the richest 1% pay a little more in taxes.

millions of cars drive across each year will not only reduce unemployment, it will make our children, communities, and our country stronger.

Please join us on the Key Bridge at 4 pm on Thursday, November 17 to let Congress know that they cannot ignore the 99% who have been hurt the most by this economy any longer."

The 99% will be there. Occupy Wall St. Occupy K St.
Occupy everywhere!

Also, Ill be leaving at 11:00, but can get anything you would send on my B-Berry. If it needs to be posted to HIS I will have access to a computer at various times, but there may be a lag time from the time you send it to me until I can post it.

Bob,

I'll draft an awareness bulletin and send it to you for the HIS. Hospitals may experience medical surge and I'll capture that in the bulletin. There's talk about college students joining the protest. I'll send something out to you shortly.

Jason & Kellie,

Have you guys heard anything about the event Jim Ott (from Georgetown Hospital) sent to me? Do we have any information about this that we need to pass on to the hospitals? Our concern is that this is a choke point into/out of DC, and Georgetown Hospital is very close to the incident.

Ill scrounge the internet and see if I can find out anything on this end.

Thanks,
Bob

Save the US Postal Service

Fight Back Against Union-Busting, Layoffs, and Service Cuts!

Gather at Occupy DC (McPherson Square - 15th and K St. NW)

(529 14th St. NW - Metro Center)

Join in the call against Donahoe's anti-union agenda and call on Congress to reverse its onerous law that is bleeding postal workers and the public dry in a crusade to stamp out unions and the public postal service.

On November 21, Postmaster General Patrick Donahoe will be speaking at the National Press Club. He won't be talking about how the Postal Service made a net profit of more than $600 million sorting and delivering the mail the past four years. He won't be talking about the fact that the Postal Service isn't even funded by taxpayers and that its revenue is earned from the sale of its products and services. And he won't be talking about the fact that financial problems facing the Postal Service stem from a 2006 congressional mandate that the Postal Service pre-fund future retiree health benefits for the next 75 years and do so within a decade - a burden no other public agency or private firm faces. The Postal Service is actually paying, out of its operating budget, for the future retiree benefits of people who haven't even been born yet.

No, instead Donahoe will be talking about why the Postal Service needs to cut over 100,000 jobs and close down hundreds of post offices nationwide in order to save money. He'll be justifying the union-busting attacks on labor contracts and service cuts that will affect postal workers and literally everyone in the country! While we face a jobs crisis, Donahoe and members of Congress are advancing the agenda of the one percent. They are hell-bent on cutting good jobs at a time of record unemployment in a bid to privatize the Postal Service and put tens of thousands of workers - many of whom are African American - out of work. This cannot happen in the age of Occupy. Donahoe cannot be allowed to attack workers without being confronted and challenged by the 99 percent.

Hi Scott,

We have no applications on this for Jan 17. Understand there have been a number of posters circulating regarding an event on the 17. I heard we will be standing up some CDU platoons. I attached the above poster that one of our folks got from MPD a couple weeks ago.

Have you all received any information for the 17th of Jan?

Date:

Saturday, January 21, 2012 - 10:30am

DC

Locations, Times, and Themes: The group will rally at McPherson square at 10:30am. At 11:00, the group will leave to march to the Bank of America mortgage lending branch at 17th and Penn NW and have a rally where messaging will focus on the foreclosure crisis. Specifically, discussions will cover, among other things, the illegal nature of many foreclosures and BoA's continued abuse, a message which will be directly connected to BoA's disproportionate influence and the abuse that it empowers. The group will then march to the big branch on Penn by the White House and have our big corporate personhood rally.

Scott,

Plans for this event have changed - I called the spokesperson Mario because of the time difference on your application 1730-1900 for their march but per conversation I had with Mario yesterday they would conduct their march at 2100 hrs.

Mario said - the group is planning CD all through the day; he was advised by the organizations not to apply for any March permits, he said "they have marched before without permits and don't want to set a precedent" Advised him he will need to notify you all and put in writing with us; but that if they intend on still marching, they would be in violation with both

McPherson Square participants are expected to attend the W/F event and are the ones who would be marching back there so they can use their tents and stay

Mario said there will be a march at some time and there will be CD, but said he cant say any more because the organizations would be upset with him

That's where we stand at this time

Hi Scott,

We have no applications on this for Jan 17. Understand there have been a number of posters circulating regarding an event on the 17. I heard we will be standing up some CDU platoons. I attached the above poster that one of our folks got from MPD a couple weeks ago.

Have you all received any information for the 17th of Jan?

The Occupy movement has been ongoing since October 6, 2011; there have been at least two demonstrations daily since its inception. The prior demonstrations have been peaceful, consisting of mostly marches and rallies. However, the aggressive nature of Friday's demonstration has prompted the Police Department to adjust tactics to prevent and mitigate future demonstrations relative to this group.

On November 4, 2011, the Metropolitan Police Department responded to the Washington Convention Center for demonstrations occurring around the location. The Special Operations Division and several Civil Disturbance Units responded to the location. The officers were confronted with a large demonstration, 300 to 400 protestors where demonstrating on the front steps and in front of the Convention Center. Many patrons attending events at the Center were reluctant to walk through the chanting crowd. The Metropolitan Police Department in conjunction with Convention Center staff assisted patrons leaving the event.

Command officials responded to the scene and directed strategies and deployments to bring the situation under control. The command official's utilized tactics relative to their training as it pertains to addressing first amendment demonstrations. At no time did the command officials consult or receive direction from the Executive Office of the Mayor relative to this event. Upon arriving at the Convention Center Assistant Chief Greene and Commander Sund met with Convention Center Directors and the head of security.

The 911 call system is managed by the Office of Unified Communications, a separate agency from the Metropolitan Police Department. However, there were ten dispatched calls for service relative to the demonstration and MPD responded to all assignments.

During the demonstration two individuals were leaving the Convention Center and fell down the front steps which were crowded with demonstrators. Officers Timothy Dummant and Lonny Bruce responded and assisted the subjects immediately. They helped both citizens to there feet and called for medical assistance. DC Fire EMS responded, one individual denied medical assistance and one was treated. This was not a dispatched call for service, the officers were present noticed the commotion and assisted immediately.

Scott,

Plans for this event have changed - I called the spokesperson Mario because of the time difference on your application 1730-1900 for their march but per conversation I had with Mario yesterday they would conduct their march at 2100 hrs.

Mario said - the group is planning CD all through the day; he was advised by the organizations not to apply for any March permits, he said "they have marched before without permits and don't want to set a precedent" Advised him he will need to notify you all and put in writing with us; but that if they intend on still marching, they would be in violation with both

McPherson Square participants are expected to attend the W/F event and are the ones who would be marching back there so they can use their tents and stay

Mario said there will be a march at some time and there will be CD, but said he cant say any more because the organizations would be upset with him

That's where we stand at this time

In addition, the group "Northwest Panthers" spokesperson Christina Robinson has canceled their application for December 31, 2011 on our grounds verbally and in writing as of December 12, 2011. Ms Robinson said they are planning to refile sometime in March 2012.

Fyi; USCP received info last week that intelligence regarding today's action was recovered subsequent to an arrest by DC Protective Services Police. We were provided a cpy of the intelligence and it was reviewed by our analysts. The findings concluded that the recovered media was pictures from the US Park arrest event in Nov when the group built the structure. No actionable intelligence was obtained from the source as previously indicated.

Either of you aware of any specs on SOTUA w the Occupy group other than what we know @ Jan 17 and what's on their social medias. During a Chief's conference call it was mentioned as a concern for SOTUA; I'm guessing it was a general observation based on potential.

Current newsletter with future direction:

Dear Friend,

Occupy Washington, DC is pleased to announce the expansion of our efforts.

When we called for the occupation of Freedom Plaza in early June, we said this occupation would be "the beginning." We saw the occupation of Freedom Plaza as a tactic, much like a lunch counter sit-in or Freedom Ride during the civil rights movement. The Occupation was designed to educate and mobilize people for a much bigger and longer effort to end a government dominated by money and militarism and shift power to the American people. A few weeks before we began to occupy Freedom Plaza, Occupy Wall Street erupted, and other occupations soon followed. Occupation of public space was an idea whose historical time had come.

More than 1,200 Occupy camps sprang up quickly across the nation and the world. The first months of this new movement profoundly shook the foundation of the 1% – almost instantly creating a new form of political power. This TIME “Person of the Year” protest movement, truly grown from the grass roots, handed the 99% some REAL political capital for the first time in decades and installed the Occupy Movement as a force to be reckoned with.

Shifting power to the American people requires much more than an occupation. The Occupy Movement needs to build on four strong components – (1) non-violent protest and civil resistance, (2) non-participation in the existing corporate finance-dominated economy, (3) the development of concrete plans and policies to transform the corporate economy into a people's economy and (4) ending government dominated by money by shifting political power to the American people. Occupy Washington, DC says: no oligarchy, no plutocracy we want participatory democracy. As we transitioned to winter we had many discussions on Freedom Plaza and among the web-community of Occupy Washington, DC. We surveyed everyone on the Plaza to understand what their interests were. These ideas and insights determined our next steps, described here:

1. Continue to hold Freedom Plaza. We have achieved a great deal through the occupation of Freedom Plaza. We've shown how persons from different backgrounds, economic circumstances, races and political interests can live and work together; and form a community. The encampment on Pennsylvania Ave. between the Congress and the Treasury/White House allowed us to reach thousands of people. Our signs, newspaper – the Occupied Washington Post – and conversations with many Americans have spread the Occupy message.

We've carried out multiple protest actions in Congress, as well as at banks, the Chamber of Commerce and other locations. We've held our own occupied super committee hearing and published a report to fix the economy, the “99%'s Deficit Proposal.” This winter the number of people at the encampment will shrink but it will be available to expand as needed for actions like Witness Against Torture from January 11 to 20, the Occupy The Dream's plans for the Federal Reserve on January 16, MLK Day, Occupy Congress scheduled for January 17 and Occupy the Courts protest against the Citizen's United decision on January 20. Freedom Plaza will continue to be a flagship for the American people to see that the occupy movement continues.

2. The Peace House and Organizing National Resistance. Approximately a dozen occupiers will move into the Peace House to work on organizing NOW DC (the National Occupation of Washington, DC) that begins on March 30. They will organize to bring occupiers from throughout the country to the nation's capitol to show the breadth and depth of the Occupy Movement. Peace House occupiers will work with occupations and others from across the country to build NOW DC. The creators of the Peace House, William Thomas and his wife Ellen Thomas, maintained and supported a 24 hour a day, 365 days a year 30 year protest of nuclear war on the north side of the White House. The disarmament vigil, founded on June 3, 1981, is courageously maintained by Concepcion Picciotto who joined Thomas a month after it began. Picciotto will continue to use the Peace House when she takes breaks with Freedom Plaza occupiers filling in to continue the vigil. Volunteers at the Peace House will also work on local outreach and education in the greater DC community.

3. Mt. Rainer House and Organizing Occupy the Economy and Occupy Media. Another dozen occupiers will move into the Mt. Rainer House. This house will focus on building democratic economic structures as alternatives to the corporate-economy. This year is the United Nation's International Year of Co-operatives and we will focus on creating worker-owned co-operatives that grow a co-operative sub-economy. Business plans will be developed, start-up capital sought and initial projects will be run out of the Mt. Rainer House. We will open the development of democratized economic structures to our web community as well. Already being examined are a political messaging business involving bumper stickers, signs, buttons and tee shirts, a food service providing occu-pie food and a housing redevelopment business. These co-operatives will provide funding to the occupiers working on them and revenues for the Occupy Movement. In addition, the Mt. Rainer House will be developing an Occupy Television Show and other media projects for public access, cable and web-outlets.

Both houses will be run as collectives that we intend to develop into useful models for other Occupies around the country to emulate. Occupy Washington, DC will be building on years of experience with collectives, co-operatives and intentional communities to create Occupy Homes like these that are productive and build the movement.

The fourth leg of our Occupy Washington, DC community is our web-based community. Some web-occupiers have joined the encampment at Freedom Plaza, others have supported it financially, others have organized to bring people to Washington, DC and still others have provided ideas for how we should shape our future. We appreciate everything that each of you do.

With all of these new activities we are not leaving the old behind. The non-violent civil resistance actions we have done against the 1% political and economic elites will continue and escalate. We will also continue to provide educational forums on a range of issues, invite noted speakers to Occupy Washington, DC, organize protest actions in Congress and to expose the monied interests that dominate the government. We are working on curricula for outreach to youth from elementary school through college so they can practice the principles of participatory democracy and learn the General Assembly process.

The occupations are building a foundation for the long-term independent movement needed to transform a greed-based government dominated by concentrated wealth into a participatory democracy – a government of, by, and for the American people – one that puts human necessities before the profits of financial power brokers. This enormous transformation will be achieved if we continue to stand in solidarity with persistence and uncompromising confidence that the people can, and will, rule free themselves from the mis-rule of the corporatists.

To help spread the word, please forward this email to your friends. You will be able to visit the website for the National Occupation of Washington, DC soon - look for NOWDC.org. You can start making plans to join us starting March 30th now.

And your donations are always needed to keep the effort going. Thank you.

In peace and solidarity

Subject: First contact & request Arnaud Baleste, new French deputy police attaché

Dear M. Burke,

I'm using this request to introduce myself. I'm Commander Arnaud BALESTE, new replacement of Jean Philippe RITZ. I become the new deputy of M. Romuald MULLER. I'm just arrived in the French Embassy last Monday.

I'm 44 years old, divorced, two kids in France.

My background was made around Investigations Dpt. I start in the Force 21 years ago. First at the Financial Enforcement Unit of Paris and then, in 1994, at the Criminal Investigation Dpt of Paris, Homicide & Counter Terrorism Bureau.

I'm graduated from the FBINA 245 th session. At last, I was leading an investigation team in the Counter Terrorism Unit of Paris.

I hope see you soon and continue the excellent collaboration started with my previous colleagues.

Regarding the events planned for tomorrow October 15th all around the world, our attention is focused on Washington DC protests and demonstrations. We are especially interested to follow several organizations based on "occupy wall street" in NYC. France is also targeted by this kind of demonstration and many Police units are following the evolution of these groups.

I made some Internet searches and my attention was focused on the "stop the machine" movement and "OccupyDC" group who settled in Freedom Plaza and Mc Pherson Square.

It could be very interesting for us to be aware of the evolution of this groups in an other way than the media reports.

I will really appreciate, if you could give me a contact in your Intelligence Division who could explain me their history and claims.

In a other way, and to compare our both Law Enforcement operatives process, I will be very pleased if you allow me to read your arrests statistics and actions linked to these protests.

Thanks in advance for your answer.

Hope see you soon

Good Morning Leeann,

I am answering a couple of questions regarding the occupy DC movement. One of the questions has to do with costs. The question is below. I know we have a TACIS code for overtime costs, but how would you recommend going about collecting our overall costs. I have a couple of ideas but thought I would check with you first. I will call you in a few.

To date, how much has your city government spent responding to Occupy-related events? This question is required

From: Tom Cochran, CEO and Executive Director

Yesterday Conference leaders held a conference call to share information on the impact the Occupy Movement is having on cities and on how cities are responding to it. The mayors felt that it would be helpful to gather information from a broader group of cities on the city government costs associated with Occupy-related events, issues which are arising, and strategies which are being employed.

We ask that you provide responses to our three brief questions as quickly as possible. Please have the appropriate person on your staff go to <http://www.usmayors.org/occupymovement> and answer these questions. We ask that cities respond as soon as possible and by close of business Tuesday, October 18. At that time we will do our first compilation of the data received.

You will be able to submit additional data after Tuesday, however, and we encourage you to do so that we can maintain and provide timely information on the impact of the Occupy Movement on cities.

As always, thanks for your help. If you have any questions, please contact the Conference's Director of Public Safety, Laura DeKoven Waxman, at lwaxman@usmayors.org or (202) 861-6754.

To remove this e-mail address from this list, please go to <http://usmayors.org/contactme> and change your city's contact information accordingly.

To date, how much has your city government spent responding to Occupy-related events?

Since the beginning of the Occupy DC Movement on October 6, 2011 the approximate cost of MPD services required to respond to the demonstrators located in Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square Park is approximately $311,843.20.

2. Please identify any major issues relating to Occupy-related events in your city. (This might include impact on public safety, local businesses, traffic, public transportation, permitting, availability of public spaces, public health, etc.)

Since the beginning of the Occupy DC movement on October 6, 2011 the primary issues related with this event are as follows:

- Required manpower to monitor the group and respond to impromptu and unorganized/non-permitted marches.
- Need to pull additional MPD resources from their regular patrol assignments to assist with the handling of the marches.
- Attempts by the group to disrupt traffic, often during rush hour through the use of impromptu marches and blocking of intersections
- Complaints from local businesses and business organizations regarding trash and debris being left around their encampments, and the impact on the local business of demonstrators using their businesses' facilities for a variety of purposes to include bathing.
- Concern for the sanitary conditions of the areas being occupied.

3. Please describe any strategies or tactics your city is employing in responding to Occupy-related events, including an assessment of their effectiveness if possible.

- MPD is currently taking a very cooperative approach to dealing with this group. The worldwide "Occupy" movement is looking for a city to bring attention to its cause and become the focal point of the movement. This would be accomplished, as we have seen in New York, through clashes with local law enforcement and would most likely result with far greater numbers coming to occupy that jurisdiction.

Yesterday Conference leaders held a conference call to share information on the impact the Occupy Movement is having on cities and on how cities are responding to it. The mayors felt that it would be helpful to gather information from a broader group of cities on the city government costs associated with Occupy-related events, issues which are arising, and strategies which are being employed.

We ask that you provide responses to our three brief questions as quickly as possible. Please have the appropriate person on your staff go to <http://www.usmayors.org/occupymovement> and answer these questions.

We ask that cities respond as soon as possible and by close of business Tuesday, October 18. At that time we will do our first compilation of the data received.

You will be able to submit additional data after Tuesday, however, and we encourage you to do so that we can maintain and provide timely information on the impact of the Occupy Movement on cities.

As always, thanks for your help. If you have any questions, please contact the Conference's Director of Public Safety, Laura DeKoven Waxman, at lwaxman@usmayors.org or (202) 861-6754.

To remove this e-mail address from this list, please go to <http://usmayors.org/contactme> and change your city's contact information accordingly.

To date, how much has your city government spent responding to Occupy-related events?

Since the beginning of the Occupy DC Movement on October 6, 2011 the approximate cost of MPD services required to respond to the demonstrators located in Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square Park is approximately $311,843.20.

2. Please identify any major issues relating to Occupy-related events in your city. (This might include impact on public safety, local businesses, traffic, public transportation, permitting, availability of public spaces, public health, etc.)

Since the beginning of the Occupy DC movement on October 6, 2011 the primary issues related with this event are as follows:

- Required manpower to monitor the group and respond to impromptu and unorganized/non-permitted marches.
- Need to pull additional MPD resources from their regular patrol assignments to assist with the handling of the marches.
- Attempts by the group to disrupt traffic, often during rush hour through the use of impromptu marches and blocking of intersections
- Complaints from local businesses and business organizations regarding trash and debris being left around their encampments, and the impact on the local business of demonstrators using their businesses' facilities for a variety of purposes to include bathing.
- Concern for the sanitary conditions of the areas being occupied.

3. Please describe any strategies or tactics your city is employing in responding to Occupy-related events, including an assessment of their effectiveness if possible.

- MPD is currently taking a very cooperative approach to dealing with this group. The worldwide "Occupy" movement is looking for a city to bring attention to its cause and become the focal point of the movement. This would be accomplished, as we have seen in New York, through clashes with local law enforcement and would most likely result with far greater numbers coming to occupy that jurisdiction.

Statement from Chief Lanier regarding Occupy DC

(Washington, DC) While the Occupy DC movement has been here since October 6, 2011 and the Metropolitan Police Department supports an individual's right to assemble, we do not condone nor will we tolerate violence or aggression. Prior demonstrations had been peaceful. However, the aggressive nature of Friday's demonstration prompted the Metropolitan Police Department to adjust tactics as needed to ensure safety.

MPD will continue to protect life (residents, visitors, protestors --everyone) and property as warranted. The administration will do what's necessary to maintain order in the city and to ensure that everyone is safe.

Five people that we are aware of were injured. That is no longer a peaceful protest. Demonstrators have become increasingly confrontational and violent toward uninvolved bystanders and motorists. Demonstrators have also jeopardized the safety of their own children by using them in blockades. The following videos highlight such actions by demonstrators:

Statement from Chief Lanier regarding Occupy DC

(Washington, DC) While the Occupy DC movement has been here since October 6, 2011 and the Metropolitan Police Department supports an individual's right to assemble, we do not condone nor will we tolerate violence or aggression. Prior demonstrations had been peaceful. However, the aggressive nature of Friday's demonstration prompted the Metropolitan Police Department to adjust tactics as needed to ensure safety.

MPD will continue to protect life (residents, visitors, protestors --everyone) and property as warranted. The administration will do what's necessary to maintain order in the city and to ensure that everyone is safe.

Five people that we are aware of were injured. That is no longer a peaceful protest. Demonstrators have become increasingly confrontational and violent toward uninvolved bystanders and motorists. Demonstrators have also jeopardized the safety of their own children by using them in blockades. The following videos highlight such actions by demonstrators:

Occupy Movement MCCA City Status

MCCA President Chuck Ramsey asked to see if we could get a sense of the impact of the “Occupy Movement” in major cities. This topic will be on the “Roundtable Agenda” in Chicago on October 22, 2011 for discussion. We have received a significant number of responses from MCCA members in response to an October 11, 2011 email request – thanks for responding so quickly. Many of the responses to sent with a “reply to all” so you have seen those as they have been sent. We have compiled all the responses in one place for your information.¹ We are sending it to you through email and will have copies at the Chicago meeting. There are a number of cities that have not yet responded to the email that have been included based on news reports of “Occupy” activity – they are all identified in italics along with the source of the information. This is a link to a map on the Wall Street occupy website that <http://occupywallst.org/attendees/> that shows participants around the world.

It seems that for the most part the demonstrators have cooperated with police in an effort to have peaceful events. The numbers involved at any given time vary widely based on the event but just as groups are being formed in some cities others are seeing a decline in participation.

Police in a number of cities have invested considerable resources in managing the protests at a time when budgets have little room to accommodate these demands. There is concern that the movement will continue for some time to come placing additional burden on budgets.

Darrel

Atlanta

In Atlanta, protesters were warned by the police on Tuesday that if, at 11 p.m., they were still in Woodruff Park, a small oasis in the heart of downtown, they would be arrested. Anyone who does not want to be arrested can simply leave the park, the police said. But protesters said they were told the same thing on Monday. Instead, dozens of police officers showed up but made no arrests. (Italics New York Times 10/12/2011)

¹ The responses have as I received them except for minor editing for clarity on a few. In a couple of cases the responses were too long to include in their entirety so they were edited down somewhat.

Austin

Demonstrations started October 6 on the City Hall Plaza, with crowds ranging from 50 in the middle of the night to 1500 in the afternoon and early evening. We have not had to make any arrests to date related to the protests and attempts to incite aggressive/violent action by the small number of black block anarchists have been soundly rejected by the majority of the protesters. The weather has been good here so we anticipate having to deal with the City Hall site and related marches for the foreseeable future.

Baltimore

The Occupy Baltimore protest started on October 4th 2011 and has continued through this day. The group currently has no timeline for ending the protest. The base of operations is located at McKeldin Square - a park next to Baltimore's Inner Harbor. There were between 150 and 200 protestors during the first night's events - which included a march against the construction of a new youth detention center. The protests now average 15-20 people at a time with some increases during group meetings or special events- all held at McKeldin Square. Most of the activity includes waving signs at passing cars. The protestors have been peaceful and the Baltimore Police Department has been working to ensure minimum confrontation with protesters. There have been no arrests at this time.

Boston

In Boston early Tuesday morning, about 100 protesters were arrested when the group expanded from its previous area in the center of Dewey Square in the financial district to a nearby part of the Rose Kennedy Greenway, part of the necklace of open park space through downtown. (Italics New York Times – 10/12/2011)

Calgary

There have been approximately 30 people involved in Occupy Calgary and they have only been protesting since October 8th. So far no problems and no arrests.

Canada

Canadian organizers are revving up their plans for the Occupy Wall Street-conceived global action day, the most adventurous idea yet for a movement that some experts say has the potential to trigger a major shift in the economic thinking of governments and big corporations.

The number of Occupy Canada cities for Saturday's rallies has grown to at least 15, while the international total is now more than 1,500. At least 20 cities also have Facebook pages dedicated solely to the movement.

As of Thursday noon ET, Occupy Canada's Facebook page garnered more than 12,000 "likes" and more than 17,700 people were "talking about this." Offshoot Occupy@ cities include Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, several other cities in B.C., Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie, Edmonton, Calgary, Saint John, Moncton and St. John's.(CBC 10/13/2011)

Charlotte

A group formed on October 8. Approximately 500 marched and staged a protest in front of Bank of America. We currently have 30 occupying the lawn area in front of Old City Hall. Their intent is to occupy until the end of the year. No arrest or disorderly issues at this point. They continue to meet with us up front to seek approval or guidance on what will and will not be allowed.

Chicago

In Chicago, protesters from Occupy Chicago joined forces on Tuesday with members of Action Now, a group concerned with vacant lots in the city's South and West Side neighborhoods. The combined groups piled at least a dozen garbage bags on the sidewalk in front of the Bank of America building in the Chicago Loop, along with couches and other trash that they said had been pulled from a foreclosed property. Five women, ranging in age from 56 to 80, were arrested there after they went inside the bank lobby and scattered trash. (Italics New York Times 10/12/2011)

Cleveland

Start up date: October 6, 2011 thru October 17, 2011 (24 / 7)

Participants: 50 – 300, depending on day and time

Colorado Springs

Colorado Springs has had a group for about a week. They are occupying a downtown city park, and have been challenging enforcement of the city's no camping ordinance enacted to deal with homeless encampments. There is increasing pressure from elected officials to apply the ordinance. This week, police department staff met with organizers, who secretly videotaped the meeting and released it to the press, which then reported how reasonable and civil the police behaved in the meeting and how unyielding the self designated leader of the protestors was. The Department's Homeless Outreach Team, our SME's on the ordinance, will begin applying gentle pressure over the weekend, may lead to warnings and even arrests next week, but intending on serve and release with seizing of the tents, etc as evidence.

Denver

Occupy Denver began the last week of September with approximately a dozen protesters. The middle of last week the protesters erected their first shelter in Veterans Park located between the City and County Building and the State Capital. The park is State property. The group has grown to approximately 25 tents/shelters. No enforcement action has been taken to date for violation of park rules. On Saturday, October 8th approximately 300 – 400 protesters marched through the central business district and encircled the Federal Reserve Bank. The protest went peacefully and the event organizers worked with the police. There were a handful of protesters that tried to get the main group to become more adversarial towards the police but the main group rejected them. The protesters are planning weekly Saturday marches indefinitely.

Dozens of police in riot gear have herded Wall Street protesters away from the Colorado state Capitol grounds, arresting about two dozen and dismantling their encampment. Most retreated without resisting. Some chanted “Peaceful!” or “Shameful!” as police moved in early Friday. The protesters have been camped at the Capitol for about three weeks in support of the national Occupy Wall Street movement. Officers dragged some from the camp and led others by the arm. Police carried stragglers to small groundskeeper tractors and drove them away. (Italics Washington Post 10/14/2011)

Ft. Worth

We have a small group in downtown Fort Worth. They started Monday, October 10th with about 50 attendees. They walked peacefully and did not ‘camp’ (prohibited here). I did not see much of a group there this morning... No arrests so far.

Honolulu

The group in Honolulu has been meeting daily since October 7th. Unlike other groups across the nation, the Honolulu group has not camped overnight as part of their protest activity. The number of participants has varied from 25 to 100 on given dates/times. The group has continued to remain peaceful and no arrests have been made.

Houston

We have been dealing with the protesters for about two weeks. Crowds range from about 100 during the night to approximately 1500 during the day. Crowds are increasing each week

Indianapolis

Occupy Indianapolis began last Saturday (October 8) with about 800 people walking around the state capitol building and our main War Memorial in the heart of downtown. It was mostly peaceful and very disorganized. The number dropped on Sunday, with even less on Monday. Now we have about 15 people camping on the grounds of the state capitol. No arrests or citations have been issued. We have been able to keep the visible police presence to a minimum. Intel continues to report that due to the current state of disorganization, few are staying to participate.

Las Vegas

We have had one event so far and it was about 300 people. We had no arrests in the event and it was peaceful. We have been in contact with organizers for a future event but as of this morning no event has been planned

Los Angeles

In Los Angeles, where protesters as recently as last week were dominated by young people in what seemed a tie-dye and guitar-circle subculture, a second wave of older protesters and homeless people has gravitated toward the encampment at City Hall...(Italics - New York Times 10/12/2011)

Long Beach

The Occupy Long Beach protests began on Tuesday, October 4, in front of City Hall. There were approximately 30 people. Approximately 60-80 people attended a march on October 8 with anti-bank, corporate greed signs. The march culminated with an open mike session in a local park. The group has plans to continue demonstrating and begin occupation (camping/tenting) So far the group has been cooperative.

Louisville

Occupy Louisville, is very disorganized. They have no leadership and no finances for the permits. They have put in several permit applications for two different locations under the names of various persons. The size of the group has varied and may have even dwindled as they have gone along. For the most part, they are trying to be orderly and lawful and work in conjunction with the police.

Milwaukee

Milwaukee has one scheduled for Saturday, October 15 as well. Crowd estimates are all over the map as the Milwaukee gathering is particularly leaderless at this time. We are in conversations with members of their "General Assembly (groups of 50-60 who meet in one of our parks)" but things are very much up in the air at this time.

Minneapolis

The numbers vary. Largest about 500 – lowest at night down to about 25 sleeping at the site. The site is the county plaza. Sheriff has security for it. They do march occasionally – and that falls to the PD. So far no arrests

Montreal

A group calling itself "occupons Montreal" (occupy Montreal) was spontaneously created following the protests in New York. Like many other groups they use Facebook to get their message out. Participants for the October 15th occupation are invited to bring warm clothing, food, tents, generators ect. Indicating that they intend to be there for a long time. The group has held two meetings so far. On both occasions, approximately 30 people showed up. According to the info we obtained, organizers seem to have very little or no means and have not clearly indicated the length of their planned occupation.

So far approximately 3000 people have mentioned their intention to participate. This number appears rather "ambitious" given the type of organization we have seen. It should also be noted that the American economic stakes are not exactly the same as the ones in Canada

Nashville

The group(s) have been primarily active in a large open area immediately outside the state legislative plaza area in downtown Nashville. Being state property, this is policed by the Tennessee Highway Patrol. At this moment, there are less than 15-20. The group has ranged in size up to 200+. Smaller groups have walked to or met at other locations close to downtown or in a large park a few miles from downtown. These groups have been monitored by the precinct commanders and other support elements. No significant issues have occurred and no arrests directly related to the protests have been made. The event continues to focus at the legislative plaza area and the MNP is supporting the Highway Patrol as necessary while also closely monitoring other areas and available information.

New York

In New York, a "Millionaire's March" of about 400 people affiliated with Occupy Wall Street wound its way through Upper East Side on Tuesday afternoon, with participants protesting outside the homes of financial titans... The march was peaceful, if noisy, with protesters chanting, trumpeting and drumming their way along Fifth Avenue and Park Avenue under the watchful gaze of dozens of police officers... (New York Times 10/12/2011)

Oakland

Oakland has an encampment established since 1700 hrs on Monday 10/10/2011. The encampment is on the front lawn of City Hall. Yesterday's initial event had a crowd of approximately 1000. However, today's numbers are much smaller, with about 40 tents and occupants. No issues have arisen yet, nonetheless, we anticipate marching this evening and shutting down of ingress and egress routes for a period of time.

Ottawa

Organizers in Ottawa are in the early planning stages. They are primarily using social media such as Facebook to educate, recruit, mobilize and organize supporters. Organizers are using the banner "Occupy Ottawa". At this time, Kevin DONAGHY has been identified as leader of "Occupy Ottawa". DONAGHY is part of the grassroots organization Ecology Ottawa and was recently arrested during the Greenpeace Tar Sands demonstration held on Parliament Hill on September 26, 2011. Open source also revealed that DONAGHY actively participated in the G8-G20 demonstrations.

Occupy Ottawa held its first planning meeting on October 6 where organizers reported that 150 people attended to sort out the logistics of the demonstration. The movement attracted a wide range of activists from students, to the unemployed, to grass-root groups, independent activists and multi-issue advocates.

The demonstration will take place on Saturday October 15, 2011 at 12 pm at Confederation Park in Ottawa. Activists will hold a General Assembly where a list of demands will be put together, set up camp in Confederation Park and organize marches to various sites for protests (locations undetermined at this time).

The group shows a higher level of structure and organization than have noted in the past. Already, the group has formed 20 organizing sub-groups who are working on specific mandates and tasks.

Police Liaison Team has made contact and in ongoing negotiations with organizers. The protestors are voting (October 12, 2011) to decide whether police members will be allowed to attend a training session (October 13, 2011).

Philadelphia

"Occupy Philadelphia" movement. Numbers have fluctuated from a few hundred to approximately 1500. They have established a "Base Camp" on the west side of our City Hall in our downtown area. No arrests as of today (10/11/2011) but more and more marches etc being planned.

The city has spent more than $400,000 in police costs to deal with the Occupy Philadelphia protest. The figure includes $164,000 in police overtime through the first five days of the protest - the bulk of the city's out-of-pocket costs - and an additional $237,000 for the plainclothes and uniformed officers stationed at Dilworth Plaza and other City Hall locations on their regular shifts. (italics from Philly.com 10/12/2011)

Oklahoma City

We had a group, approximately 200, meet in downtown OKC on October 10th. The group, OCCUPYOKC, plans on protesting the next three days. They have promoted it as peaceful and the Police Department has been working with the organizer to reduce potential disruptions to businesses and traffic. At this point we don't know how large the group will be or how long it will last.

Portland

Portland police cleared Occupy Portland protesters from Southwest Third Avenue and Main Street shortly before 6 a.m., making eight, uneventful arrests.

But police and Mayor Sam Adams reassured protesters that the encampments that have taken over a pair of public squares will be allowed to remain indefinitely. ... the police bureau has dedicated "considerable resources" to patrolling the encampment. He said officers have attended general assembly meetings every day to stay in communication with the protesters. (Italics - The Oregonian 10/13/2011)

Raleigh

An event is scheduled in Raleigh, N.C. for October 15th. We expect a large group of people, at least 750-1000, to converge on the State Capitol

Sacramento

After 35 arrests in six days for violating a city camping ordinance, a group of Occupy Sacramento protesters marched to City Hall Tuesday to ask City Council members for an exception to the law so they can have 24-hour access to Cesar Chavez Plaza for peaceable demonstration. According to police spokesman Andrew Pettit, interactions between police officers and the demonstrators over the past week have been "peaceful," and the demonstrators have been "very cooperative." (Italics - Sacramento Press October 11, 2011)

Salt Lake City

On October 6th 2011 “OccupySLC” gathered at the State Capitol (approximately 200 people) and marched throughout the financial district of the city. The march concluded at Pioneer Park where several of their members have established a base camp. As of 10/11/2011, the camp consists of approximately 60 tents and 100-150 people. Daily marches are scheduled throughout the downtown area. All activities have been law abiding with no police action required.

They have scheduled an event on Friday, October 14th and are inviting the Mayor, members of the City Council and all interested citizens to tour their camp. They also have scheduled a live “Blues Band” to perform at the event. Based on Facebook membership, they anticipate upwards of 1500 people in attendance.

In an attempt to provide guidance and standard of conduct, we issue the protestors a 24-hour permit that is reviewed and reissued each day. Although the group wishes to remain leaderless, during their daily meeting they accept the permit by acclamation and agree to abide by the restrictions.

San Diego

In San Diego, the group formed on Friday, 10/7/11, about 1400 demonstrators. They marched to City Hall where they are currently camped out. The group is very cooperative and agreed to limit the number of tents. Only one arrest for drunk in public. The hard core group is about 150 college age demonstrators. We are working with the demonstrators to prevent a major incident that would turn San Diego into ground zero for the national press. The movement is beginning to lose ground without a police involved incident.

San Diego police on Thursday afternoon ordered Occupy San Diego protesters to remove their tents and other property from the plaza behind City Hall by midnight or face arrest.

Two dozen police surrounded the plaza, where several hundred protesters have been camped in tents since the weekend. Small groups of protesters, after listening to Assistant Chief Boyd Long, huddled to discuss their next move. (Italics Los Angeles Times 10/13/2011)

San Francisco

Occupy SF has been active for approximately the past two weeks. They occupy the street in front of the Federal Reserve Building and have turned down offers from the city for assistance. Fire inspectors have ordered them to take down structures that are hazards and Public Works with police support have removed nine truckloads of material – one arrest was made for assault on an officer. Police are the primary facilitators for First Amendment activity – the group has been difficult to negotiate with because they prefer to remain leaderless. Police provided participants a letter that outlined concerns, issues and expectations. Local labor groups have joined the demonstrations. The crowd varies from about 75 to 1000 depending on the designated marches. Twelve arrests were made the morning of 10/12 for blocking access at a Wells Fargo bank. The arrests were coordinated with the bank and cooperating arrestees – no force was used – they were cited later and released.

San Jose

The Occupy San Jose protest began Sunday, October 2nd. The number of protesters has ranged from a few dozen to approximately 100 during the week. The group has established a small base camp in our City Hall Plaza with 5 tents and some chairs. The group has been generally cooperative with law enforcement; however we have issued 5 citations for illegal camping.

Seattle

In Seattle, the protest began last Wednesday October 5th. It has centered at Westlake Park which is adjacent to a large commercial center. The protests have gone from about one hundred to over one thousand participants in a march last Saturday. The group has been relatively peaceful however we have made a total of 27 arrests so far mainly for interfering with park employees as they tried to clean the park up. Our issue has revolved around the camping in the park which is prohibited by ordinance. Our mayor has invited the group that has been camping overnight to move to City Hall Plaza with few takers so far.

St. Louis

We have about 30 core protesters in our downtown area. They have been camped out for 2 weeks now. They have been peaceful. However, on the third day we did enforce the park curfew ordinance with 10 arrests, no problems since then. We have come to an agreement that they will obey the law and we will leave them alone.

Toronto

Toronto has a group, estimated to have about 800 signed up (on Facebook) to begin a demo, entitled Occupy Toronto, on Saturday, October 15. We are seeing some peripheral interest from Organized labour to get involved, but at the present time there is no clear leadership. We had been meeting with some of the groups involved but they have suddenly cut off all communication with the police, on the pretext that they do not wish to assume responsibility for the movement or speak on its behalf.

We have a fairly well organized Anarchist movement here (now there is a contradiction) that is trying to influence the group to more direct action. We are monitoring closely and preparing for whatever comes.

Tucson

There is currently an "Occupation" that is scheduled to start this Saturday, Oct. 15, in Tucson. They are projecting 500 people, but our hope is they are overinflating the numbers. We are meeting with the organizers to try and set some ground rules.

Tulsa

Occupy Tulsa has been involved in two demonstrations in Tulsa, OK. The first demonstration was near the end of Sept and the second was held October 7th. Neither demonstration has resulted in any criminal activity or disturbances. The first demonstration was outside a Tulsa bank and was attended by about 10 people. The October 7th demonstration was attended by about 150 people. Currently officers from my unit have been in contact with event organizers. Organizers have reported they wish to keep demonstrations peaceful. The dialogue indicates they would be willing to work with the Tulsa Police Dept. for any public safety concerns. In addition, organizers report they do not wish to have "trouble causers" as part of their group. In addition to my unit - officers from the Gilcrease Division (one of our patrol divisions) have spoken to Occupy Tulsa organizers for the purposes of gathering information to address any public safety needs regarding the event. To date, organizers have been cooperative with the Tulsa Police Department.

Group organizers have been interviewed by the local TV media regarding their political agenda and beliefs. Organizers have also been interviewed on at least two local morning talk radio shows in Tulsa and their protests have been reported by the single major newspaper in our city. It appears that Occupy Tulsa is coordinating efforts with labor unions such as the AFL-CIO and some postal workers. Another demonstration is planned for this Saturday in downtown Tulsa.

At this time our interest is to address any public safety needs regarding traffic, crowd control, or disturbances that may arise. If information is reported to the Tulsa Police Dept regarding criminal activity or civil disobedience we will accordingly adjust our efforts. TPD's concern is focused on public safety issues, not any political beliefs or affiliations.

Vancouver

The "occupy" movement originated from a Vancouver based magazine called Adbusters. They like to subvert advertising and set up some well known events like "buy nothing day" and "TV Turn off week." They have made some documentary films against consumerism. They have been around since 1989.

We expect a large (1000 is the current estimated number) and fluid group to occupy the Vancouver Art Gallery lawn on Saturday October 15th. The protesters indicate a "diversity of tactics" which is concerning language as it echoes the Winter Olympic Heart Attack March when people were assaulted and local retail stores had their windows smashed.

The art gallery lawn is the property of the City of Vancouver and the City Manager has decided that no tents, cooking equipment or structures will be permitted.

For the most part, the organizers appear non-violent. We have spoken to self-identified leaders and they appreciate that a group this large will attract those who may use the crowd as a shield for criminal acts. They are not supportive of the extremists but when questioned, have little in the way of plans for dealing with them other than perhaps pointing them out to the police.

The planning meeting from a few days ago had 400 people attend and we heard from some union connections that they were unimpressed with some of the attendees as they seemed more interested in confrontations with the police as opposed to getting a message across. Union leaders have announced today that they will be a part of this protest and we hope they will serve as a moderating influence.

Based on what has occurred in other cities, we are expecting daily actions like marches, street occupations, or perhaps even bridge occupations. We have asked organizers what these actions and routes may be. They did not know but said they will try to keep the police informed. Any interaction between the moderate organizers and the VPD generates considerable animosity from the more hardcore protesters.

Virginia Beach

So far we are clear. Our sister city, Norfolk, has had a small protest and we are monitoring the event

Washington D.C.

Our rallies began on Thursday, October 6, 2011, when the coalition of anti-war and anti-corporation groups began holding anti-war and economic rallies opposing the United States military's involvement within Afghanistan and the current financial situation. There were two different locations where the rallies took place; Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square.

The Freedom Plaza group is currently about 100 to 150 participants; the McPherson contingent fluctuates in size from 50 to 60 participants. Since the beginning of the demonstrations, the two groups have converged and marched to different locations daily; such as the IMF Building - 1899 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., and the Martin Luther King, Jr., Memorial on Monday, October 10, 2011.

Demonstration estimated size:

October 6, 2011, 2,500 to 3,000

October 7, 2011, 500 to 600

October 8, 2011, 400 to 500

October 9, 2011, 150 to 200

October 10, 2011, 100 to 150

October 11, 2011, 100 to 150

Currently the crowds are fluctuating between 75 and 150 daily.

Organizers for both groups have been cooperative with police. Most of the demonstrators are from out of town. At this point, organizers plan on staying indefinitely in order to be heard.

Per the U.S. Park Police, the permit was extended for Freedom Plaza until December 30, 2011, with black out dates for times when other parties are holding permits for the parks. These dates are being dealt with on a case by case basis to determine if the permit holder will give up the permit to the Occupy DC movement or share the space with them. Friday, October 14, 2011.

The following participating agencies have played a role in the coordination and response to this event: The demonstrations have been very peaceful and uneventful with the exception of one incident at the Smithsonian. On Saturday, October 8, 2011, during a coordinated march from Freedom Plaza to the U.S. Capitol, the demonstrators were walking on Jefferson Drive, S.W., marched past the Smithsonian Museums. As they were marching by the Air and Space Museum at 1500 hours, several members of the group rushed the Air and Space Museum; trying to gain entry and by-passing security. Smithsonian Police tried to block them, and utilized OC spray to repel them before securing museum doors. No force or munitions were used by MPD. As a result of the incident, the museum was closed for the day. One person was arrested by Smithsonian Police for "Assault on a Police Order", and "Disorderly Conduct". Ten (10) persons were treated and released for exposure to OC spray.

During the last two weeks the Occupy movement has fluctuated between 75 to 100 protestors daily, with at least 75 who have taken residence within the two parks. The protests have been peaceful thus far and have only resulted in a minimal amount of arrest, less than 10. During the demonstrations we have experienced the common tactics utilized by these types of demonstrations:

- Spontaneous marches
- Chanting in front of government/private buildings that specialize in commerce, banking and general government services
- Periodic marching in the streets causing minor delays in traffic

Members of the Occupy DC Movement are keeping a watchful eye on the law enforcement interaction with the "Occupy" movement. The demonstrators who have occupied the two parks seem to have become more determined as time passes. They have recently begun massive cooking operations and you can now see what appears to be laundry hanging throughout the camps as well. On Thursday, October 27, 2011, the United States Park Police will begin a series of inspections of the parks and issue materials advising what actions are illegal. The Metropolitan Police department will support the USPP in their efforts in an ongoing basis. _.

The MPD has actively been monitoring social media, Face Book and Twitter and several blogs. The monitoring of these sites has been beneficial and given the agency a deployment advantage relative to these demonstrations, we will continue this approach.

Occupy Movement MCCA City Status

MCCA President Chuck Ramsey asked to see if we could get a sense of the impact of the “Occupy Movement” in major cities. This topic will be on the “Roundtable Agenda” in Chicago on October 22, 2011 for discussion. We have received a significant number of responses from MCCA members in response to an October 11, 2011 email request – thanks for responding so quickly. Many of the responses to sent with a “reply to all” so you have seen those as they have been sent. We have compiled all the responses in one place for your information.¹ We are sending it to you through email and will have copies at the Chicago meeting. There are a number of cities that have not yet responded to the email that have been included based on news reports of “Occupy” activity – they are all identified in italics along with the source of the information. This is a link to a map on the Wall Street occupy website that <http://occupywallst.org/attendees/> that shows participants around the world.

It seems that for the most part the demonstrators have cooperated with police in an effort to have peaceful events. The numbers involved at any given time vary widely based on the event but just as groups are being formed in some cities others are seeing a decline in participation.

Police in a number of cities have invested considerable resources in managing the protests at a time when budgets have little room to accommodate these demands. There is concern that the movement will continue for some time to come placing additional burden on budgets.

Atlanta

In Atlanta, protesters were warned by the police on Tuesday that if, at 11 p.m., they were still in Woodruff Park, a small oasis in the heart of downtown, they would be arrested. Anyone who does not want to be arrested can simply leave the park, the police said. But protesters said they were told the same thing on Monday. Instead, dozens of police officers showed up but made no arrests. (Italics New York Times 10/12/2011)

¹ The responses have as I received them except for minor editing for clarity on a few. In a couple of cases the responses were too long to include in their entirety so they were edited down somewhat.

Austin

Demonstrations started October 6 on the City Hall Plaza, with crowds ranging from 50 in the middle of the night to 1500 in the afternoon and early evening. We have not had to make any arrests to date related to the protests and attempts to incite aggressive/violent action by the small number of black block anarchists have been soundly rejected by the majority of the protesters. The weather has been good here so we anticipate having to deal with the City Hall site and related marches for the foreseeable future.

Baltimore

The Occupy Baltimore protest started on October 4th 2011 and has continued through this day. The group currently has no timeline for ending the protest. The base of operations is located at McKeldin Square - a park next to Baltimore's Inner Harbor. There were between 150 and 200 protestors during the first night's events - which included a march against the construction of a new youth detention center. The protests now average 15-20 people at a time with some increases during group meetings or special events- all held at McKeldin Square. Most of the activity includes waving signs at passing cars. The protestors have been peaceful and the Baltimore Police Department has been working to ensure minimum confrontation with protesters. There have been no arrests at this time.

Boston

In Boston early Tuesday morning, about 100 protesters were arrested when the group expanded from its previous area in the center of Dewey Square in the financial district to a nearby part of the Rose Kennedy Greenway, part of the necklace of open park space through downtown. (Italics New York Times – 10/12/2011)

Calgary

There have been approximately 30 people involved in Occupy Calgary and they have only been protesting since October 8th. So far no problems and no arrests.

Canada

Canadian organizers are revving up their plans for the Occupy Wall Street-conceived global action day, the most adventurous idea yet for a movement that some experts say has the potential to trigger a major shift in the economic thinking of governments and big corporations.

The number of Occupy Canada cities for Saturday's rallies has grown to at least 15, while the international total is now more than 1,500. At least 20 cities also have Facebook pages dedicated solely to the movement.

As of Thursday noon ET, Occupy Canada's Facebook page garnered more than 12,000 "likes" and more than 17,700 people were "talking about this." Offshoot Occupy@ cities include Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, several other cities in B.C., Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie, Edmonton, Calgary, Saint John, Moncton and St. John's.(CBC 10/13/2011)

Charlotte

A group formed on October 8. Approximately 500 marched and staged a protest in front of Bank of America. We currently have 30 occupying the lawn area in front of Old City Hall. Their intent is to occupy until the end of the year. No arrest or disorderly issues at this point. They continue to meet with us up front to seek approval or guidance on what will and will not be allowed.

Chicago

In Chicago, protesters from Occupy Chicago joined forces on Tuesday with members of Action Now, a group concerned with vacant lots in the city's South and West Side neighborhoods. The combined groups piled at least a dozen garbage bags on the sidewalk in front of the Bank of America building in the Chicago Loop, along with couches and other trash that they said had been pulled from a foreclosed property. Five women, ranging in age from 56 to 80, were arrested there after they went inside the bank lobby and scattered trash. (Italics New York Times 10/12/2011)

Cleveland

Start up date: October 6, 2011 thru October 17, 2011 (24 / 7)

Participants: 50 – 300, depending on day and time

Colorado Springs

Colorado Springs has had a group for about a week. They are occupying a downtown city park, and have been challenging enforcement of the city's no camping ordinance enacted to deal with homeless encampments. There is increasing pressure from elected officials to apply the ordinance. This week, police department staff met with organizers, who secretly videotaped the meeting and released it to the press, which then reported how reasonable and civil the police behaved in the meeting and how unyielding the self designated leader of the protestors was. The Department's Homeless Outreach Team, our SME's on the ordinance, will begin applying gentle pressure over the weekend, may lead to warnings and even arrests next week, but intending on serve and release with seizing of the tents, etc as evidence.

Denver

Occupy Denver began the last week of September with approximately a dozen protesters. The middle of last week the protesters erected their first shelter in Veterans Park located between the City and County Building and the State Capital. The park is State property. The group has grown to approximately 25 tents/shelters. No enforcement action has been taken to date for violation of park rules. On Saturday, October 8th approximately 300 – 400 protesters marched through the central business district and encircled the Federal Reserve Bank. The protest went peacefully and the event organizers worked with the police. There were a handful of protesters that tried to get the main group to become more adversarial towards the police but the main group rejected them. The protesters are planning weekly Saturday marches indefinitely.

Dozens of police in riot gear have herded Wall Street protesters away from the Colorado state Capitol grounds, arresting about two dozen and dismantling their encampment. Most retreated without resisting. Some chanted “Peaceful!” or “Shameful!” as police moved in early Friday. The protesters have been camped at the Capitol for about three weeks in support of the national Occupy Wall Street movement. Officers dragged some from the camp and led others by the arm. Police carried stragglers to small groundskeeper tractors and drove them away. (Italics Washington Post 10/14/2011)

Ft. Worth

We have a small group in downtown Fort Worth. They started Monday, October 10th with about 50 attendees. They walked peacefully and did not ‘camp’ (prohibited here). I did not see much of a group there this morning... No arrests so far.

Honolulu

The group in Honolulu has been meeting daily since October 7th. Unlike other groups across the nation, the Honolulu group has not camped overnight as part of their protest activity. The number of participants has varied from 25 to 100 on given dates/times. The group has continued to remain peaceful and no arrests have been made.

Houston

We have been dealing with the protesters for about two weeks. Crowds range from about 100 during the night to approximately 1500 during the day. Crowds are increasing each week

Indianapolis

Occupy Indianapolis began last Saturday (October 8) with about 800 people walking around the state capitol building and our main War Memorial in the heart of downtown. It was mostly peaceful and very disorganized. The number dropped on Sunday, with even less on Monday. Now we have about 15 people camping on the grounds of the state capitol. No arrests or citations have been issued. We have been able to keep the visible police presence to a minimum. Intel continues to report that due to the current state of disorganization, few are staying to participate.

Las Vegas

We have had one event so far and it was about 300 people. We had no arrests in the event and it was peaceful. We have been in contact with organizers for a future event but as of this morning no event has been planned

Los Angeles

In Los Angeles, where protesters as recently as last week were dominated by young people in what seemed a tie-dye and guitar-circle subculture, a second wave of older protesters and homeless people has gravitated toward the encampment at City Hall...(Italics - New York Times 10/12/2011)

Long Beach

The Occupy Long Beach protests began on Tuesday, October 4, in front of City Hall. There were approximately 30 people. Approximately 60-80 people attended a march on October 8 with anti-bank, corporate greed signs. The march culminated with an open mike session in a local park. The group has plans to continue demonstrating and begin occupation (camping/tenting) So far the group has been cooperative.

Louisville

Occupy Louisville, is very disorganized. They have no leadership and no finances for the permits. They have put in several permit applications for two different locations under the names of various persons. The size of the group has varied and may have even dwindled as they have gone along. For the most part, they are trying to be orderly and lawful and work in conjunction with the police.

Milwaukee

Milwaukee has one scheduled for Saturday, October 15 as well. Crowd estimates are all over the map as the Milwaukee gathering is particularly leaderless at this time. We are in conversations with members of their "General Assembly (groups of 50-60 who meet in one of our parks)" but things are very much up in the air at this time.

Minneapolis

The numbers vary. Largest about 500 – lowest at night down to about 25 sleeping at the site. The site is the county plaza. Sheriff has security for it. They do march occasionally – and that falls to the PD. So far no arrests

Montreal

A group calling itself "occupons Montreal" (occupy Montreal) was spontaneously created following the protests in New York. Like many other groups they use Facebook to get their message out. Participants for the October 15th occupation are invited to bring warm clothing, food, tents, generators ect. Indicating that they intend to be there for a long time. The group has held two meetings so far. On both occasions, approximately 30 people showed up. According to the info we obtained, organizers seem to have very little or no means and have not clearly indicated the length of their planned occupation.

So far approximately 3000 people have mentioned their intention to participate. This number appears rather "ambitious" given the type of organization we have seen. It should also be noted that the American economic stakes are not exactly the same as the ones in Canada

The group(s) have been primarily active in a large open area immediately outside the state legislative plaza area in downtown Nashville. Being state property, this is policed by the Tennessee Highway Patrol. At this moment, there are less than 15-20. The group has ranged in size up to 200+. Smaller groups have walked to or met at other locations close to downtown or in a large park a few miles from downtown. These groups have been monitored by the precinct commanders and other support elements. No significant issues have occurred and no arrests directly related to the protests have been made. The event continues to focus at the legislative plaza area and the MNP is supporting the Highway Patrol as necessary while also closely monitoring other areas and available information.

New York

In New York, a "Millionaire's March" of about 400 people affiliated with Occupy Wall Street wound its way through Upper East Side on Tuesday afternoon, with participants protesting outside the homes of financial titans... The march was peaceful, if noisy, with protesters chanting, trumpeting and drumming their way along Fifth Avenue and Park Avenue under the watchful gaze of dozens of police officers... (New York Times 10/12/2011)

Oakland

Oakland has an encampment established since 1700 hrs on Monday 10/10/2011. The encampment is on the front lawn of City Hall. Yesterday's initial event had a crowd of approximately 1000. However, today's numbers are much smaller, with about 40 tents and occupants. No issues have arisen yet, nonetheless, we anticipate marching this evening and shutting down of ingress and egress routes for a period of time.

Ottawa

Organizers in Ottawa are in the early planning stages. They are primarily using social media such as Facebook to educate, recruit, mobilize and organize supporters. Organizers are using the banner "Occupy Ottawa". At this time, Kevin DONAGHY has been identified as leader of "Occupy Ottawa". DONAGHY is part of the grassroots organization Ecology Ottawa and was recently arrested during the Greenpeace Tar Sands demonstration held on Parliament Hill on September 26, 2011. Open source also revealed that DONAGHY actively participated in the G8-G20 demonstrations.

Occupy Ottawa held its first planning meeting on October 6 where organizers reported that 150 people attended to sort out the logistics of the demonstration. The movement attracted a wide range of activists from students, to the unemployed, to grass-root groups, independent activists and multi-issue advocates.

The demonstration will take place on Saturday October 15, 2011 at 12 pm at Confederation Park in Ottawa. Activists will hold a General Assembly where a list of demands will be put together, set up camp in Confederation Park and organize marches to various sites for protests (locations undetermined at this time).

The group shows a higher level of structure and organization than have noted in the past. Already, the group has formed 20 organizing sub-groups who are working on specific mandates and tasks.

Police Liaison Team has made contact and in ongoing negotiations with organizers. The protestors are voting (October 12, 2011) to decide whether police members will be allowed to attend a training session (October 13, 2011).

Philadelphia

"Occupy Philadelphia" movement. Numbers have fluctuated from a few hundred to approximately 1500. They have established a "Base Camp" on the west side of our City Hall in our downtown area. No arrests as of today (10/11/2011) but more and more marches etc being planned.

The city has spent more than $400,000 in police costs to deal with the Occupy Philadelphia protest. The figure includes $164,000 in police overtime through the first five days of the protest - the bulk of the city's out-of-pocket costs - and an additional $237,000 for the plainclothes and uniformed officers stationed at Dilworth Plaza and other City Hall locations on their regular shifts. (italics from Philly.com 10/12/2011)

Oklahoma City

We had a group, approximately 200, meet in downtown OKC on October 10th. The group, OCCUPYOKC, plans on protesting the next three days. They have promoted it as peaceful and the Police Department has been working with the organizer to reduce potential disruptions to businesses and traffic. At this point we don't know how large the group will be or how long it will last.

Portland

Portland police cleared Occupy Portland protesters from Southwest Third Avenue and Main Street shortly before 6 a.m., making eight, uneventful arrests.

But police and Mayor Sam Adams reassured protesters that the encampments that have taken over a pair of public squares will be allowed to remain indefinitely. ... the police bureau has dedicated "considerable resources" to patrolling the encampment. He said officers have attended general assembly meetings every day to stay in communication with the protesters. (Italics - The Oregonian 10/13/2011)

Raleigh

An event is scheduled in Raleigh, N.C. for October 15th. We expect a large group of people, at least 750-1000, to converge on the State Capitol

Sacramento

After 35 arrests in six days for violating a city camping ordinance, a group of Occupy Sacramento protesters marched to City Hall Tuesday to ask City Council members for an exception to the law so they can have 24-hour access to Cesar Chavez Plaza for peaceable demonstration. According to police spokesman Andrew Pettit, interactions between police officers and the demonstrators over the past week have been "peaceful," and the demonstrators have been "very cooperative." (Italics - Sacramento Press October 11, 2011)

Salt Lake City

On October 6th 2011 “OccupySLC” gathered at the State Capitol (approximately 200 people) and marched throughout the financial district of the city. The march concluded at Pioneer Park where several of their members have established a base camp. As of 10/11/2011, the camp consists of approximately 60 tents and 100-150 people. Daily marches are scheduled throughout the downtown area. All activities have been law abiding with no police action required.

They have scheduled an event on Friday, October 14th and are inviting the Mayor, members of the City Council and all interested citizens to tour their camp. They also have scheduled a live “Blues Band” to perform at the event. Based on Facebook membership, they anticipate upwards of 1500 people in attendance.

In an attempt to provide guidance and standard of conduct, we issue the protestors a 24-hour permit that is reviewed and reissued each day. Although the group wishes to remain leaderless, during their daily meeting they accept the permit by acclamation and agree to abide by the restrictions.

San Diego

In San Diego, the group formed on Friday, 10/7/11, about 1400 demonstrators. They marched to City Hall where they are currently camped out. The group is very cooperative and agreed to limit the number of tents. Only one arrest for drunk in public. The hard core group is about 150 college age demonstrators. We are working with the demonstrators to prevent a major incident that would turn San Diego into ground zero for the national press. The movement is beginning to lose ground without a police involved incident.

San Diego police on Thursday afternoon ordered Occupy San Diego protesters to remove their tents and other property from the plaza behind City Hall by midnight or face arrest.

Two dozen police surrounded the plaza, where several hundred protesters have been camped in tents since the weekend. Small groups of protesters, after listening to Assistant Chief Boyd Long, huddled to discuss their next move. (Italics Los Angeles Times 10/13/2011)

San Francisco

Occupy SF has been active for approximately the past two weeks. They occupy the street in front of the Federal Reserve Building and have turned down offers from the city for assistance. Fire inspectors have ordered them to take down structures that are hazards and Public Works with police support have removed nine truckloads of material – one arrest was made for assault on an officer. Police are the primary facilitators for First Amendment activity – the group has been difficult to negotiate with because they prefer to remain leaderless. Police provided participants a letter that outlined concerns, issues and expectations. Local labor groups have joined the demonstrations. The crowd varies from about 75 to 1000 depending on the designated marches. Twelve arrests were made the morning of 10/12 for blocking access at a Wells Fargo bank. The arrests were coordinated with the bank and cooperating arrestees – no force was used – they were cited later and released.

San Jose

The Occupy San Jose protest began Sunday, October 2nd. The number of protesters has ranged from a few dozen to approximately 100 during the week. The group has established a small base camp in our City Hall Plaza with 5 tents and some chairs. The group has been generally cooperative with law enforcement; however we have issued 5 citations for illegal camping.

Seattle

In Seattle, the protest began last Wednesday October 5th. It has centered at Westlake Park which is adjacent to a large commercial center. The protests have gone from about one hundred to over one thousand participants in a march last Saturday. The group has been relatively peaceful however we have made a total of 27 arrests so far mainly for interfering with park employees as they tried to clean the park up. Our issue has revolved around the camping in the park which is prohibited by ordinance. Our mayor has invited the group that has been camping overnight to move to City Hall Plaza with few takers so far.

St. Louis

We have about 30 core protesters in our downtown area. They have been camped out for 2 weeks now. They have been peaceful. However, on the third day we did enforce the park curfew ordinance with 10 arrests, no problems since then. We have come to an agreement that they will obey the law and we will leave them alone.

Toronto

Toronto has a group, estimated to have about 800 signed up (on Facebook) to begin a demo, entitled Occupy Toronto, on Saturday, October 15. We are seeing some peripheral interest from Organized labour to get involved, but at the present time there is no clear leadership. We had been meeting with some of the groups involved but they have suddenly cut off all communication with the police, on the pretext that they do not wish to assume responsibility for the movement or speak on its behalf.

We have a fairly well organized Anarchist movement here (now there is a contradiction) that is trying to influence the group to more direct action. We are monitoring closely and preparing for whatever comes.

Tucson

There is currently an "Occupation" that is scheduled to start this Saturday, Oct. 15, in Tucson. They are projecting 500 people, but our hope is they are overinflating the numbers. We are meeting with the organizers to try and set some ground rules.

Tulsa

Occupy Tulsa has been involved in two demonstrations in Tulsa, OK. The first demonstration was near the end of Sept and the second was held October 7th. Neither demonstration has resulted in any criminal activity or disturbances. The first demonstration was outside a Tulsa bank and was attended by about 10 people. The October 7th demonstration was attended by about 150 people. Currently officers from my unit have been in contact with event organizers. Organizers have reported they wish to keep demonstrations peaceful. The dialogue indicates they would be willing to work with the Tulsa Police Dept. for any public safety concerns. In addition, organizers report they do not wish to have "trouble causers" as part of their group. In addition to my unit - officers from the Gilcrease Division (one of our patrol divisions) have spoken to Occupy Tulsa organizers for the purposes of gathering information to address any public safety needs regarding the event. To date, organizers have been cooperative with the Tulsa Police Department.

Group organizers have been interviewed by the local TV media regarding their political agenda and beliefs. Organizers have also been interviewed on at least two local morning talk radio shows in Tulsa and their protests have been reported by the single major newspaper in our city. It appears that Occupy Tulsa is coordinating efforts with labor unions such as the AFL-CIO and some postal workers. Another demonstration is planned for this Saturday in downtown Tulsa.

At this time our interest is to address any public safety needs regarding traffic, crowd control, or disturbances that may arise. If information is reported to the Tulsa Police Dept regarding criminal activity or civil disobedience we will accordingly adjust our efforts. TPD's concern is focused on public safety issues, not any political beliefs or affiliations.

Vancouver

The "occupy" movement originated from a Vancouver based magazine called Adbusters. They like to subvert advertising and set up some well known events like "buy nothing day" and "TV Turn off week." They have made some documentary films against consumerism. They have been around since 1989.

We expect a large (1000 is the current estimated number) and fluid group to occupy the Vancouver Art Gallery lawn on Saturday October 15th. The protesters indicate a "diversity of tactics" which is concerning language as it echoes the Winter Olympic Heart Attack March when people were assaulted and local retail stores had their windows smashed.

The art gallery lawn is the property of the City of Vancouver and the City Manager has decided that no tents, cooking equipment or structures will be permitted.

For the most part, the organizers appear non-violent. We have spoken to self-identified leaders and they appreciate that a group this large will attract those who may use the crowd as a shield for criminal acts. They are not supportive of the extremists but when questioned, have little in the way of plans for dealing with them other than perhaps pointing them out to the police.

The planning meeting from a few days ago had 400 people attend and we heard from some union connections that they were unimpressed with some of the attendees as they seemed more interested in confrontations with the police as opposed to getting a message across. Union leaders have announced today that they will be a part of this protest and we hope they will serve as a moderating influence.

Based on what has occurred in other cities, we are expecting daily actions like marches, street occupations, or perhaps even bridge occupations. We have asked organizers what these actions and routes may be. They did not know but said they will try to keep the police informed. Any interaction between the moderate organizers and the VPD generates considerable animosity from the more hardcore protesters.

Virginia Beach

So far we are clear. Our sister city, Norfolk, has had a small protest and we are monitoring the event

Washington D.C.

Our rallies began on Thursday, October 6, 2011, when the coalition of anti-war and anti-corporation groups began holding anti-war and economic rallies opposing the United States military's involvement within Afghanistan and the current financial situation. There were two different locations where the rallies took place; Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square.

The Freedom Plaza group is currently about 100 to 150 participants; the McPherson contingent fluctuates in size from 50 to 60 participants. Since the beginning of the demonstrations, the two groups have converged and marched to different locations daily; such as the IMF Building - 1899 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., and the Martin Luther King, Jr., Memorial on Monday, October 10, 2011.

Demonstration estimated size:

October 6, 2011, 2,500 to 3,000

October 7, 2011, 500 to 600

October 8, 2011, 400 to 500

October 9, 2011, 150 to 200

October 10, 2011, 100 to 150

October 11, 2011, 100 to 150

Currently the crowds are fluctuating between 75 and 150 daily.

Organizers for both groups have been cooperative with police. Most of the demonstrators are from out of town. At this point, organizers plan on staying indefinitely in order to be heard.

Per the U.S. Park Police, the permit was extended for Freedom Plaza until December 30, 2011, with black out dates for times when other parties are holding permits for the parks. These dates are being dealt with on a case by case basis to determine if the permit holder will give up the permit to the Occupy DC movement or share the space with them. Friday, October 14, 2011.

The following participating agencies have played a role in the coordination and response to this event: The demonstrations have been very peaceful and uneventful with the exception of one incident at the Smithsonian. On Saturday, October 8, 2011, during a coordinated march from Freedom Plaza to the U.S. Capitol, the demonstrators were walking on Jefferson Drive, S.W., marched past the Smithsonian Museums. As they were marching by the Air and Space Museum at 1500 hours, several members of the group rushed the Air and Space Museum; trying to gain entry and by-passing security. Smithsonian Police tried to block them, and utilized OC spray to repel them before securing museum doors. No force or munitions were used by MPD. As a result of the incident, the museum was closed for the day. One person was arrested by Smithsonian Police for "Assault on a Police Order", and "Disorderly Conduct". Ten (10) persons were treated and released for exposure to OC spray.

During the last two weeks the Occupy movement has fluctuated between 75 to 100 protestors daily, with at least 75 who have taken residence within the two parks. The protests have been peaceful thus far and have only resulted in a minimal amount of arrest, less than 10. During the demonstrations we have experienced the common tactics utilized by these types of demonstrations:

- Spontaneous marches
- Chanting in front of government/private buildings that specialize in commerce, banking and general government services
- Periodic marching in the streets causing minor delays in traffic

Members of the Occupy DC Movement are keeping a watchful eye on the law enforcement interaction with the "Occupy" movement. The demonstrators who have occupied the two parks seem to have become more determined as time passes. They have recently begun massive cooking operations and you can now see what appears to be laundry hanging throughout the camps as well. On Thursday, October 27, 2011, the United States Park Police will begin a series of inspections of the parks and issue materials advising what actions are illegal. The Metropolitan Police department will support the USPP in their efforts in an ongoing basis. _.

The MPD has actively been monitoring social media, Face Book and Twitter and several blogs. The monitoring of these sites has been beneficial and given the agency a deployment advantage relative to these demonstrations, we will continue this approach.

Hi Warren,

I wanted to drop you a quick note on the "Occupy Wall Street" movement, which appears to be spawning a similar set of initiatives in DC. I noted the following items in particular:

- Recent "Occupy DC" gatherings began on Saturday in McPherson Square and are described here: <http://occupydc.org/>.
- An encampment appears to be planned for Freedom Plaza starting on Thursday and can be found here: <http://www.thenation.com/article/163719/occupy-wall-street-faq>. “Another big occupation has been in the making for months, slated to begin on October 6 at Freedom Plaza in Washington, DC, and the organizers of that have been visiting Liberty Plaza [New York’s Occupy Wall Street location] on and off, learning all they can from its successes and mistakes.”

I’m not sure how much the government can/should do to prepare, and it is extremely difficult to predict the size/duration of any occupations of Freedom Plaza, but it may be worth having a meeting with MPD and PSPD to discuss any proactive measures we can take to ensure a peaceful protest and avoid police behavior that may create a public backlash.

Best wishes,
Kevin

Dear M. Burke,

I'm using this request to introduce myself. I'm Commander Arnaud BALESTE, new replacement of Jean Philippe RITZ. I become the new deputy of M. Romuald MULLER. I'm just arrived in the French Embassy last Monday.

I'm 44 years old, divorced, two kids in France.

My background was made around Investigations Dpt. I start in the Force 21 years ago. First at the Financial Enforcement Unit of Paris and then, in 1994, at the Criminal Investigation Dpt of Paris, Homicide & Counter Terrorism Bureau.

I'm graduated from the FBINA 245 th session. At last, I was leading an investigation team in the Counter Terrorism Unit of Paris.

I hope see you soon and continue the excellent collaboration started with my previous colleagues.

Regarding the events planned for tomorrow October 15th all around the world, our attention is focused on Washington DC protests and demonstrations. We are especially interested to follow several organizations based on "occupy wall street" in NYC. France is also targeted by this kind of demonstration and many Police units are following the evolution of these groups.

I made some Internet searches and my attention was focused on the "stop the machine" movement and "OccupyDC" group who settled in Freedom Plaza and Mc Pherson Square.

It could be very interesting for us to be aware of the evolution of this groups in an other way than the media reports.

I will really appreciate, if you could give me a contact in your Intelligence Division who could explain me their history and claims.

In a other way, and to compare our both Law Enforcement operatives process, I will be very pleased if you allow me to read your arrests statistics and actions linked to these protests.

Thanks in advance for your answer.

Hope see you soon

Subject: First contact & request Arnaud Baleste, new French deputy police attaché

Dear M. Burke,

I'm using this request to introduce myself. I'm Commander Arnaud BALESTE, new replacement of Jean Philippe RITZ. I become the new deputy of M. Romuald MULLER. I'm just arrived in the French Embassy last Monday.

I'm 44 years old, divorced, two kids in France.

My background was made around Investigations Dpt. I start in the Force 21 years ago. First at the Financial Enforcement Unit of Paris and then, in 1994, at the Criminal Investigation Dpt of Paris, Homicide & Counter Terrorism Bureau.

I'm graduated from the FBINA 245 th session. At last, I was leading an investigation team in the Counter Terrorism Unit of Paris.

I hope see you soon and continue the excellent collaboration started with my previous colleagues.

Regarding the events planned for tomorrow October 15th all around the world, our attention is focused on Washington DC protests and demonstrations. We are especially interested to follow several organizations based on "occupy wall street" in NYC. France is also targeted by this kind of demonstration and many Police units are following the evolution of these groups.

I made some Internet searches and my attention was focused on the "stop the machine" movement and "OccupyDC" group who settled in Freedom Plaza and Mc Pherson Square.

It could be very interesting for us to be aware of the evolution of this groups in an other way than the media reports.

I will really appreciate, if you could give me a contact in your Intelligence Division who could explain me their history and claims.

In a other way, and to compare our both Law Enforcement operatives process, I will be very pleased if you allow me to read your arrests statistics and actions linked to these protests.

Thanks in advance for your answer.

Hope see you soon

Best Regards

From: Tom Cochran, CEO and Executive Director

Yesterday Conference leaders held a conference call to share information on the impact the Occupy Movement is having on cities and on how cities are responding to it. The mayors felt that it would be helpful to gather information from a broader group of cities on the city government costs associated with Occupy-related events, issues which are arising, and strategies which are being employed.

We ask that you provide responses to our three brief questions as quickly as possible. Please have the appropriate person on your staff go to <http://www.usmayors.org/occupymovement> and answer these questions. We ask that cities respond as soon as possible and by close of business Tuesday, October 18. At that time we will do our first compilation of the data received.

You will be able to submit additional data after Tuesday, however, and we encourage you to do so that we can maintain and provide timely information on the impact of the Occupy Movement on cities.

As always, thanks for your help. If you have any questions, please contact the Conference's Director of Public Safety, Laura DeKoven Waxman, at lwaxman@usmayors.org or (202) 861-6754.

To remove this e-mail address from this list, please go to <http://usmayors.org/contactme> and change your city's contact information accordingly.

Yesterday Conference leaders held a conference call to share information on the impact the Occupy Movement is having on cities and on how cities are responding to it. The mayors felt that it would be helpful to gather information from a broader group of cities on the city government costs associated with Occupy-related events, issues which are arising, and strategies which are being employed.

We ask that you provide responses to our three brief questions as quickly as possible. Please have the appropriate person on your staff go to <http://www.usmayors.org/occupymovement> and answer these questions. We ask that cities respond as soon as possible and by close of business Tuesday, October 18. At that time we will do our first compilation of the data received.

You will be able to submit additional data after Tuesday, however, and we encourage you to do so that we can maintain and provide timely information on the impact of the Occupy Movement on cities.

As always, thanks for your help. If you have any questions, please contact the Conference's Director of Public Safety, Laura DeKoven Waxman, at lwaxman@usmayors.org or (202) 861-6754.

I know the Freedom Plaza folks worked with Park Service officials to get approval for some enhancements as the cold weather comes upon them. I'm copying D/C MacLean in case this is new information.

Lieutenant Morgan:

A little while ago a fairly large contingent (probably more than 100) demonstrators marched down Eye Street (with police escort), stopped in front of 1620 Eye Street where our offices are located for about 5-10 minutes facing our way, and then moved on. We couldn't hear what they were chanting, but I thought I heard the word mayor. Today a blog misrepresented some remarks made by Oakland Mayor Jean Quan in an interview with the BBC and said mayors were having conference calls to coordinate crackdown on Occupy movement. We've had numerous press calls and gotten lots of tweets as a result. We have responded to the press inquiries explaining what the calls are about. We're not surprised, however, to have become a target.

I'm writing you about this because tomorrow Philadelphia Mayor Michael Nutter will be in our offices from around 1:30 PM until about 2:45 PM to conduct the conference call of mayors and police chiefs. We have alerted his office and also the building management. The demonstrators appeared peaceful tonight. We have no way of knowing if they will return tomorrow, and if they do no reason to expect they will be anything but peaceful, but we are a bit concerned since the Mayor will be in the building. He often travels with a police officer, but we don't know for sure that he will tomorrow. Any intelligence the MPD has on their planned movements tomorrow or help you can provide should we need it would be appreciated.

Thanks,
Laura

As you know there have been several recent incidents of hacking law enforcement organizations databases – the IACP was hit just before the conference began. I have heard that a well know group is claiming they will release 9 police department databases sometime today/tonight, in solidarity with the Occupy movement. Also there has been a call for all hackers related to retaliate for the Oakland PD actions.

I have attached the responses I received last week on occupy – Please send me an update on the current situation in your community. I will update the attached report with that information and send it to everyone. News accounts indicate there have been a number of arrests and confrontations over the past 4 or 5 days in several cities.

police services because of the protests? And if we could get a quote from you on how this has affected your agency and your budget, that would be great.

If HSB can identify the on-duty costs associated YTD, I can assign an estimated cost for the dedicated/on-duty services. We don't have much by way of off duty/overtime other than the initial 17 hours.

Chief Lanier,

I'm with the DOJ's COPS Office and we wanted to follow up on this conference call with a short article in our newsletter about police costs and the Occupy protest. Do you mind sharing (or having your PIO) share the scope of the unanticipated costs required to provide police services because of the protests? And if we could get a quote from you on how this has affected your agency and your budget, that would be great.

The COPS Office wants to do a story on how this is affecting police budgets, especially in a time of reduced resources.

Here is a report on policing and the economic downturn that we just released: <http://cops.usdoj.gov/RIC/ResourceDetail.aspx?RID=619>

Here is a link to our current newsletter:

We are on a tight deadline, unfortunately, and hope to get this article finished by the end of this week, to make it in time for December's issue.

Please let me know if you'd be willing to help with this article.

Thanks so much,

Toronto has a group, estimated to have about 800 signed up (on Facebook) to begin a demo, entitled Occupy Toronto, on Saturday, October 15. We are seeing some peripheral interest from Organized labour to get involved, but at the present time there is no clear leadership. We had been meeting with some of the groups involved but they have suddenly cut off all communication with the police, on the pretext that they do not wish to assume responsibility for the movement or speak on its behalf.

We have a fairly well organized Anarchist movement here (now there is a contradiction) that is trying to influence the group to more direct action. We are monitoring closely and preparing for whatever comes.

Primary difference seems to have been between those cities which have municipal ordinances which prohibit overnight camping in local parks and those which do not. For example, Chicago officials who have been on our calls indicated that they have a curfew (from something like 10 PM to 6 AM) in parks and from the beginning made arrests when people remained in the park after curfew. As of the last call which was last month they have continued to enforce their curfew law and the movement had been relatively small in Chicago. Clearly the experience has been different in some cities which do not have such clear ordinances or didn't enforce them as consistently from the start.

collected to our survey. Many of them relate to the question at hand.
(Please note this is unpublished information and should not be distributed publically.)

I'm copying Chuck Thompson on this. He's General Counsel and Executive Director of the International Municipal Lawyers Association. I believe his organization has been tracking some information relating to municipal ordinances and he may be able to provide additional information.

Hope this is helpful. Please let me know if there is other information we can provide.

Issues

- . Draining public safety resources while officers monitor protests;
- . Wide ranging permitting procedures and approaches. As an example, one city reported: "We essentially have a camp set up on public property without proper permits that is serving as a "volunteer center" for the protestors. That limits equal access to that public space. We are working to get them into compliance temporarily, but we don't have a long-term permit option for an event that has no deadline." Another city explained that its permitting requirements haven't been triggered because they only apply if a group exceeds 25 persons and impedes or interferes with vehicular or pedestrian traffic, neither of which is expected to occur, in part because of the space available to them.
- . Responding to requests for spaces occupiers can use overnight, either by finding site they can use or making establishment of overnight encampments impossible;
- . Arresting or issuing citations to demonstrators who remain in a park after closing time, and changing times at which police entered the park after closing since movement members were leaving at closing time and then coming back later;

- . Arresting demonstrators for blocking traffic or sitting in private property;
 - . Periodically clearing spaces occupied overnight for cleaning, which has led to arrests in some cities;
 - . Incurring costs for ancillary city services (i.e. portable restrooms, debris clean up, shelter services, etc.);
 - . Incurring costs to defend an injunction filed on behalf of demonstrators;
 - . Displacing scheduled public events;
 - . Affecting parking, traffic, and transportation in area around site;
 - . Raising public health concerns, particularly relating to public urination, lack of sanitary facilities if they are not permitted, increased trash, which has led to additional trash pickups in some cities, and illness in the encampment;
 - . Raising safety concerns relating to the use of generators inside and outside of tents;
 - . Generating complaints from area businesses due to noise and impeded access;
 - . Experiencing increasing numbers of homeless persons participating in the demonstrations.
 - . Having issues go viral over the Internet, flooding city phones systems with calls.
 - . Increasing citizen and business complaints regarding trash, public urination, and other health concerns and also regarding what is seen as preferential treatment (waiving fees, for example) of the demonstrations.
- In one city public morale was negatively affected, as people were upset seeing the park dedicated to the memory of veterans in disarray or being used to make a political statement.
- . Increasing criminal activities, including sexual assaults, thefts, vandalism, and drug overdoses in encampments.
 - . Responding to increasingly aggressive behavior, including chanting in front of and surrounding buildings and attempting to block entrances and exits.
 - . Managing and responding to spontaneous demonstrations and marches.
 - . Responding to needs of homeless people and mentally ill persons participating in demonstrations. At least one city reported that those who camp overnight are generally homeless.

also have a group of city attorneys that have been working on occupy am sure camping is one of them. If she can help I am sure she will.

Below is some information from the International Municipal Lawyers Association on how jurisdictions are dealing with overnight camping. Will forward any additional information they find.

In terms of a short summary of the issues, I'm still looking, but I'm also providing some of the recent orders that have been issued in some of occupy cases with some decent analysis.

Boston:

<https://imla.box.com/s/bgfhhfhs1768250cqly8>

San Diego (a discussion of the Clark case with some additional legal authority):

<https://imla.box.com/s/40t2087n4ltl7c4cmmgq>

Sacramento: attached in email

will be Clark v. Community for Creative Nonviolence, 468 U.S. 288 (1984).

Do we have anything on this issue; ie. overnight camping? If not, can you reach out to see if we can get something to pass along to park service and

DC.

Subject: RE: short summary on how other cities/jurisdictions have dealt with the Occupy Wall Street demonstrations as to overnight camping?

Primary difference seems to have been between those cities which have municipal ordinances which prohibit overnight camping in local parks and those which do not. For example, Chicago officials who have been on our calls indicated that they have a curfew (from something like 10 PM to 6 AM) in parks and from the beginning made arrests when people remained in the park after curfew. As of the last call which was last month they have continued to enforce their curfew law and the movement had been relatively small in Chicago. Clearly the experience has been different in some cities which do not have such clear ordinances or didn't enforce them as consistently from the start.

Below is a summary of issues raised by cities in the information we've collected to our survey. Many of them relate to the question at hand. (Please note this is unpublished information and should not be distributed publically.)

I'm copying Chuck Thompson on this. He's General Counsel and Executive Director of the International Municipal Lawyers Association. I believe his organization has been tracking some information relating to municipal ordinances and he may be able to provide additional information.

Hope this is helpful. Please let me know if there is other information we can provide.

Issues

- . Draining public safety resources while officers monitor protests;
- . Wide ranging permitting procedures and approaches. As an example, one city reported: "We essentially have a camp set up on public property without proper permits that is serving as a "volunteer center" for the protestors. That limits equal access to that public space. We are working to get them into compliance temporarily, but we don't have a long-term permit option for an event that has no deadline." Another city explained that its permitting requirements haven't been triggered because they only apply if a group exceeds 25 persons and impedes or interferes with vehicular or pedestrian traffic, neither of which is expected to occur, in part because of the space available to them.

- . Responding to requests for spaces occupiers can use overnight, either by finding site they can use or making establishment of overnight encampments impossible;

- . Arresting or issuing citations to demonstrators who remain in a park after closing time, and changing times at which police entered the park after closing since movement members were leaving at closing time and then coming back later;

- . Arresting demonstrators for blocking traffic or sitting in private property;

- . Periodically clearing spaces occupied overnight for cleaning, which has led to arrests in some cities;

- . Incurring costs for ancillary city services (i.e. portable restrooms, debris clean up, shelter services, etc.);

- . Incurring costs to defend an injunction filed on behalf of demonstrators;

- . Displacing scheduled public events;

- . Affecting parking, traffic, and transportation in area around site;

- . Raising public health concerns, particularly relating to public urination, lack of sanitary facilities if they are not permitted, increased trash, which has led to additional trash pickups in some cities, and illness in the encampment;

- . Raising safety concerns relating to the use of generators inside and outside of tents;

- . Generating complaints from area businesses due to noise and impeded access;

- . Experiencing increasing numbers of homeless persons participating in the demonstrations.

- . Having issues go viral over the Internet, flooding city phones systems with calls.

- . Increasing citizen and business complaints regarding trash, public urination, and other health concerns and also regarding what is seen as preferential treatment (waiving fees, for example) of the demonstrations.

In one city public morale was negatively affected, as people were upset seeing the park dedicated to the memory of veterans in disarray or being used to make a political statement.

- . Increasing criminal activities, including sexual assaults, thefts, vandalism, and drug overdoses in encampments.

- . Responding to increasingly aggressive behavior, including chanting in front of and surrounding buildings and attempting to block entrances and exits.
- . Managing and responding to spontaneous demonstrations and marches.
- . Responding to needs of homeless people and mentally ill persons participating in demonstrations. At least one city reported that those who camp overnight are generally homeless.

Cathy: All we have are the updates. But I have copied Laura Waxman with the US Conference of Mayors. They have surveyed their member cities and also have a group of city attorneys that have been working on occupy issues - I am sure camping is one of them. If she can help I am sure she will.

Occupy Movement MCCA City Status

MCCA President Chuck Ramsey asked to see if we could get a sense of the impact of the “Occupy Movement” in major cities. This topic will be on the “Roundtable Agenda” in Chicago on October 22, 2011 for discussion. We have received a significant number of responses from MCCA members in response to an October 11, 2011 email request – thanks for responding so quickly. Many of the responses to sent with a “reply to all” so you have seen those as they have been sent. We have compiled all the responses in one place for your information.¹ We are sending it to you through email and will have copies at the Chicago meeting. There are a number of cities that have not yet responded to the email that have been included based on news reports of “Occupy” activity – they are all identified in italics along with the source of the information. This is a link to a map on the Wall Street occupy website that <http://occupywallst.org/attendees/> that shows participants around the world.

It seems that for the most part the demonstrators have cooperated with police in an effort to have peaceful events. The numbers involved at any given time vary widely based on the event but just as groups are being formed in some cities others are seeing a decline in participation.

Police in a number of cities have invested considerable resources in managing the protests at a time when budgets have little room to accommodate these demands. There is concern that the movement will continue for some time to come placing additional burden on budgets.

Atlanta

In Atlanta, protesters were warned by the police on Tuesday that if, at 11 p.m., they were still in Woodruff Park, a small oasis in the heart of downtown, they would be arrested. Anyone who does not want to be arrested can simply leave the park, the police said. But protesters said they were told the same thing on Monday. Instead, dozens of police officers showed up but made no arrests. (Italics New York Times 10/12/2011)

¹ The responses have as I received them except for minor editing for clarity on a few. In a couple of cases the responses were too long to include in their entirety so they were edited down somewhat.

Austin

Demonstrations started October 6 on the City Hall Plaza, with crowds ranging from 50 in the middle of the night to 1500 in the afternoon and early evening. We have not had to make any arrests to date related to the protests and attempts to incite aggressive/violent action by the small number of black block anarchists have been soundly rejected by the majority of the protesters. The weather has been good here so we anticipate having to deal with the City Hall site and related marches for the foreseeable future.

Baltimore

The Occupy Baltimore protest started on October 4th 2011 and has continued through this day. The group currently has no timeline for ending the protest. The base of operations is located at McKeldin Square - a park next to Baltimore's Inner Harbor. There were between 150 and 200 protestors during the first night's events - which included a march against the construction of a new youth detention center. The protests now average 15-20 people at a time with some increases during group meetings or special events- all held at McKeldin Square. Most of the activity includes waving signs at passing cars. The protestors have been peaceful and the Baltimore Police Department has been working to ensure minimum confrontation with protesters. There have been no arrests at this time.

Boston

In Boston early Tuesday morning, about 100 protesters were arrested when the group expanded from its previous area in the center of Dewey Square in the financial district to a nearby part of the Rose Kennedy Greenway, part of the necklace of open park space through downtown. (Italics New York Times – 10/12/2011)

Calgary

There have been approximately 30 people involved in Occupy Calgary and they have only been protesting since October 8th. So far no problems and no arrests.

Canada

Canadian organizers are revving up their plans for the Occupy Wall Street-conceived global action day, the most adventurous idea yet for a movement that some experts say has the potential to trigger a major shift in the economic thinking of governments and big corporations.

The number of Occupy Canada cities for Saturday's rallies has grown to at least 15, while the international total is now more than 1,500. At least 20 cities also have Facebook pages dedicated solely to the movement.

As of Thursday noon ET, Occupy Canada's Facebook page garnered more than 12,000 "likes" and more than 17,700 people were "talking about this." Offshoot Occupy@ cities include Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, several other cities in B.C., Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie, Edmonton, Calgary, Saint John, Moncton and St. John's.(CBC 10/13/2011)

Charlotte

A group formed on October 8. Approximately 500 marched and staged a protest in front of Bank of America. We currently have 30 occupying the lawn area in front of Old City Hall. Their intent is to occupy until the end of the year. No arrest or disorderly issues at this point. They continue to meet with us up front to seek approval or guidance on what will and will not be allowed.

Chicago

In Chicago, protesters from Occupy Chicago joined forces on Tuesday with members of Action Now, a group concerned with vacant lots in the city's South and West Side neighborhoods. The combined groups piled at least a dozen garbage bags on the sidewalk in front of the Bank of America building in the Chicago Loop, along with couches and other trash that they said had been pulled from a foreclosed property. Five women, ranging in age from 56 to 80, were arrested there after they went inside the bank lobby and scattered trash. (Italics New York Times 10/12/2011)

Cleveland

Start up date: October 6, 2011 thru October 17, 2011 (24 / 7)

Participants: 50 – 300, depending on day and time

Colorado Springs

Colorado Springs has had a group for about a week. They are occupying a downtown city park, and have been challenging enforcement of the city's no camping ordinance enacted to deal with homeless encampments. There is increasing pressure from elected officials to apply the ordinance. This week, police department staff met with organizers, who secretly videotaped the meeting and released it to the press, which then reported how reasonable and civil the police behaved in the meeting and how unyielding the self designated leader of the protestors was. The Department's Homeless Outreach Team, our SME's on the ordinance, will begin applying gentle pressure over the weekend, may lead to warnings and even arrests next week, but intending on serve and release with seizing of the tents, etc as evidence.

Denver

Occupy Denver began the last week of September with approximately a dozen protesters. The middle of last week the protesters erected their first shelter in Veterans Park located between the City and County Building and the State Capital. The park is State property. The group has grown to approximately 25 tents/shelters. No enforcement action has been taken to date for violation of park rules. On Saturday, October 8th approximately 300 – 400 protesters marched through the central business district and encircled the Federal Reserve Bank. The protest went peacefully and the event organizers worked with the police. There were a handful of protesters that tried to get the main group to become more adversarial towards the police but the main group rejected them. The protesters are planning weekly Saturday marches indefinitely.

Dozens of police in riot gear have herded Wall Street protesters away from the Colorado state Capitol grounds, arresting about two dozen and dismantling their encampment. Most retreated without resisting. Some chanted “Peaceful!” or “Shameful!” as police moved in early Friday. The protesters have been camped at the Capitol for about three weeks in support of the national Occupy Wall Street movement. Officers dragged some from the camp and led others by the arm. Police carried stragglers to small groundskeeper tractors and drove them away. (Italics Washington Post 10/14/2011)

Ft. Worth

We have a small group in downtown Fort Worth. They started Monday, October 10th with about 50 attendees. They walked peacefully and did not ‘camp’ (prohibited here). I did not see much of a group there this morning... No arrests so far.

Honolulu

The group in Honolulu has been meeting daily since October 7th. Unlike other groups across the nation, the Honolulu group has not camped overnight as part of their protest activity. The number of participants has varied from 25 to 100 on given dates/times. The group has continued to remain peaceful and no arrests have been made.

Houston

We have been dealing with the protesters for about two weeks. Crowds range from about 100 during the night to approximately 1500 during the day. Crowds are increasing each week

Indianapolis

Occupy Indianapolis began last Saturday (October 8) with about 800 people walking around the state capitol building and our main War Memorial in the heart of downtown. It was mostly peaceful and very disorganized. The number dropped on Sunday, with even less on Monday. Now we have about 15 people camping on the grounds of the state capitol. No arrests or citations have been issued. We have been able to keep the visible police presence to a minimum. Intel continues to report that due to the current state of disorganization, few are staying to participate.

Las Vegas

We have had one event so far and it was about 300 people. We had no arrests in the event and it was peaceful. We have been in contact with organizers for a future event but as of this morning no event has been planned

Los Angeles

In Los Angeles, where protesters as recently as last week were dominated by young people in what seemed a tie-dye and guitar-circle subculture, a second wave of older protesters and homeless people has gravitated toward the encampment at City Hall...(Italics - New York Times 10/12/2011)

Long Beach

The Occupy Long Beach protests began on Tuesday, October 4, in front of City Hall. There were approximately 30 people. Approximately 60-80 people attended a march on October 8 with anti-bank, corporate greed signs. The march culminated with an open mike session in a local park. The group has plans to continue demonstrating and begin occupation (camping/tenting) So far the group has been cooperative.

Louisville

Occupy Louisville, is very disorganized. They have no leadership and no finances for the permits. They have put in several permit applications for two different locations under the names of various persons. The size of the group has varied and may have even dwindled as they have gone along. For the most part, they are trying to be orderly and lawful and work in conjunction with the police.

Milwaukee

Milwaukee has one scheduled for Saturday, October 15 as well. Crowd estimates are all over the map as the Milwaukee gathering is particularly leaderless at this time. We are in conversations with members of their "General Assembly (groups of 50-60 who meet in one of our parks)" but things are very much up in the air at this time.

Minneapolis

The numbers vary. Largest about 500 – lowest at night down to about 25 sleeping at the site. The site is the county plaza. Sheriff has security for it. They do march occasionally – and that falls to the PD. So far no arrests

Montreal

A group calling itself "occupons Montreal" (occupy Montreal) was spontaneously created following the protests in New York. Like many other groups they use Facebook to get their message out. Participants for the October 15th occupation are invited to bring warm clothing, food, tents, generators ect. Indicating that they intend to be there for a long time. The group has held two meetings so far. On both occasions, approximately 30 people showed up. According to the info we obtained, organizers seem to have very little or no means and have not clearly indicated the length of their planned occupation.

So far approximately 3000 people have mentioned their intention to participate. This number appears rather "ambitious" given the type of organization we have seen. It should also be noted that the American economic stakes are not exactly the same as the ones in Canada

Nashville

The group(s) have been primarily active in a large open area immediately outside the state legislative plaza area in downtown Nashville. Being state property, this is policed by the Tennessee Highway Patrol. At this moment, there are less than 15-20. The group has ranged in size up to 200+. Smaller groups have walked to or met at other locations close to downtown or in a large park a few miles from downtown. These groups have been monitored by the precinct commanders and other support elements. No significant issues have occurred and no arrests directly related to the protests have been made. The event continues to focus at the legislative plaza area and the MNP is supporting the Highway Patrol as necessary while also closely monitoring other areas and available information.

New York

In New York, a "Millionaire's March" of about 400 people affiliated with Occupy Wall Street wound its way through Upper East Side on Tuesday afternoon, with participants protesting outside the homes of financial titans... The march was peaceful, if noisy, with protesters chanting, trumpeting and drumming their way along Fifth Avenue and Park Avenue under the watchful gaze of dozens of police officers... (New York Times 10/12/2011)

Oakland

Oakland has an encampment established since 1700 hrs on Monday 10/10/2011. The encampment is on the front lawn of City Hall. Yesterday's initial event had a crowd of approximately 1000. However, today's numbers are much smaller, with about 40 tents and occupants. No issues have arisen yet, nonetheless, we anticipate marching this evening and shutting down of ingress and egress routes for a period of time.

Ottawa

Organizers in Ottawa are in the early planning stages. They are primarily using social media such as Facebook to educate, recruit, mobilize and organize supporters. Organizers are using the banner "Occupy Ottawa". At this time, Kevin DONAGHY has been identified as leader of "Occupy Ottawa". DONAGHY is part of the grassroots organization Ecology Ottawa and was recently arrested during the Greenpeace Tar Sands demonstration held on Parliament Hill on September 26, 2011. Open source also revealed that DONAGHY actively participated in the G8-G20 demonstrations.

Occupy Ottawa held its first planning meeting on October 6 where organizers reported that 150 people attended to sort out the logistics of the demonstration. The movement attracted a wide range of activists from students, to the unemployed, to grass-root groups, independent activists and multi-issue advocates.

The demonstration will take place on Saturday October 15, 2011 at 12 pm at Confederation Park in Ottawa. Activists will hold a General Assembly where a list of demands will be put together, set up camp in Confederation Park and organize marches to various sites for protests (locations undetermined at this time).

The group shows a higher level of structure and organization than have noted in the past. Already, the group has formed 20 organizing sub-groups who are working on specific mandates and tasks.

Police Liaison Team has made contact and in ongoing negotiations with organizers. The protestors are voting (October 12, 2011) to decide whether police members will be allowed to attend a training session (October 13, 2011).

Philadelphia

"Occupy Philadelphia" movement. Numbers have fluctuated from a few hundred to approximately 1500. They have established a "Base Camp" on the west side of our City Hall in our downtown area. No arrests as of today (10/11/2011) but more and more marches etc being planned.

The city has spent more than $400,000 in police costs to deal with the Occupy Philadelphia protest. The figure includes $164,000 in police overtime through the first five days of the protest - the bulk of the city's out-of-pocket costs - and an additional $237,000 for the plainclothes and uniformed officers stationed at Dilworth Plaza and other City Hall locations on their regular shifts. (italics from Philly.com 10/12/2011)

Oklahoma City

We had a group, approximately 200, meet in downtown OKC on October 10th. The group, OCCUPYOKC, plans on protesting the next three days. They have promoted it as peaceful and the Police Department has been working with the organizer to reduce potential disruptions to businesses and traffic. At this point we don't know how large the group will be or how long it will last.

Portland

Portland police cleared Occupy Portland protesters from Southwest Third Avenue and Main Street shortly before 6 a.m., making eight, uneventful arrests.

But police and Mayor Sam Adams reassured protesters that the encampments that have taken over a pair of public squares will be allowed to remain indefinitely. ... the police bureau has dedicated "considerable resources" to patrolling the encampment. He said officers have attended general assembly meetings every day to stay in communication with the protesters. (Italics - The Oregonian 10/13/2011)

Raleigh

An event is scheduled in Raleigh, N.C. for October 15th. We expect a large group of people, at least 750-1000, to converge on the State Capitol

Sacramento

After 35 arrests in six days for violating a city camping ordinance, a group of Occupy Sacramento protesters marched to City Hall Tuesday to ask City Council members for an exception to the law so they can have 24-hour access to Cesar Chavez Plaza for peaceable demonstration. According to police spokesman Andrew Pettit, interactions between police officers and the demonstrators over the past week have been "peaceful," and the demonstrators have been "very cooperative." (Italics - Sacramento Press October 11, 2011)

Salt Lake City

On October 6th 2011 “OccupySLC” gathered at the State Capitol (approximately 200 people) and marched throughout the financial district of the city. The march concluded at Pioneer Park where several of their members have established a base camp. As of 10/11/2011, the camp consists of approximately 60 tents and 100-150 people. Daily marches are scheduled throughout the downtown area. All activities have been law abiding with no police action required.

They have scheduled an event on Friday, October 14th and are inviting the Mayor, members of the City Council and all interested citizens to tour their camp. They also have scheduled a live “Blues Band” to perform at the event. Based on Facebook membership, they anticipate upwards of 1500 people in attendance.

In an attempt to provide guidance and standard of conduct, we issue the protestors a 24-hour permit that is reviewed and reissued each day. Although the group wishes to remain leaderless, during their daily meeting they accept the permit by acclamation and agree to abide by the restrictions.

San Diego

In San Diego, the group formed on Friday, 10/7/11, about 1400 demonstrators. They marched to City Hall where they are currently camped out. The group is very cooperative and agreed to limit the number of tents. Only one arrest for drunk in public. The hard core group is about 150 college age demonstrators. We are working with the demonstrators to prevent a major incident that would turn San Diego into ground zero for the national press. The movement is beginning to lose ground without a police involved incident.

San Diego police on Thursday afternoon ordered Occupy San Diego protesters to remove their tents and other property from the plaza behind City Hall by midnight or face arrest. Two dozen police surrounded the plaza, where several hundred protesters have been camped in tents since the weekend. Small groups of protesters, after listening to Assistant Chief Boyd Long, huddled to discuss their next move. (Italics Los Angeles Times 10/13/2011)

San Francisco

Occupy SF has been active for approximately the past two weeks. They occupy the street in front of the Federal Reserve Building and have turned down offers from the city for assistance. Fire inspectors have ordered them to take down structures that are hazards and Public Works with police support have removed nine truckloads of material – one arrest was made for assault on an officer. Police are the primary facilitators for First Amendment activity – the group has been difficult to negotiate with because they prefer to remain leaderless. Police provided participants a letter that outlined concerns, issues and expectations. Local labor groups have joined the demonstrations. The crowd varies from about 75 to 1000 depending on the designated marches. Twelve arrests were made the morning of 10/12 for blocking access at a Wells Fargo bank. The arrests were coordinated with the bank and cooperating arrestees – no force was used – they were cited later and released.

San Jose

The Occupy San Jose protest began Sunday, October 2nd. The number of protesters has ranged from a few dozen to approximately 100 during the week. The group has established a small base camp in our City Hall Plaza with 5 tents and some chairs. The group has been generally cooperative with law enforcement; however we have issued 5 citations for illegal camping.

Seattle

In Seattle, the protest began last Wednesday October 5th. It has centered at Westlake Park which is adjacent to a large commercial center. The protests have gone from about one hundred to over one thousand participants in a march last Saturday. The group has been relatively peaceful however we have made a total of 27 arrests so far mainly for interfering with park employees as they tried to clean the park up. Our issue has revolved around the camping in the park which is prohibited by ordinance. Our mayor has invited the group that has been camping overnight to move to City Hall Plaza with few takers so far.

St. Louis

We have about 30 core protesters in our downtown area. They have been camped out for 2 weeks now. They have been peaceful. However, on the third day we did enforce the park curfew ordinance with 10 arrests, no problems since then. We have come to an agreement that they will obey the law and we will leave them alone.

Toronto

Toronto has a group, estimated to have about 800 signed up (on Facebook) to begin a demo, entitled Occupy Toronto, on Saturday, October 15. We are seeing some peripheral interest from Organized labour to get involved, but at the present time there is no clear leadership. We had been meeting with some of the groups involved but they have suddenly cut off all communication with the police, on the pretext that they do not wish to assume responsibility for the movement or speak on its behalf.

We have a fairly well organized Anarchist movement here (now there is a contradiction) that is trying to influence the group to more direct action. We are monitoring closely and preparing for whatever comes.

Tucson

There is currently an "Occupation" that is scheduled to start this Saturday, Oct. 15, in Tucson. They are projecting 500 people, but our hope is they are overinflating the numbers. We are meeting with the organizers to try and set some ground rules.

Tulsa

Occupy Tulsa has been involved in two demonstrations in Tulsa, OK. The first demonstration was near the end of Sept and the second was held October 7th. Neither demonstration has resulted in any criminal activity or disturbances. The first demonstration was outside a Tulsa bank and was attended by about 10 people. The October 7th demonstration was attended by about 150 people. Currently officers from my unit have been in contact with event organizers. Organizers have reported they wish to keep demonstrations peaceful. The dialogue indicates they would be willing to work with the Tulsa Police Dept. for any public safety concerns. In addition, organizers report they do not wish to have "trouble causers" as part of their group. In addition to my unit - officers from the Gilcrease Division (one of our patrol divisions) have spoken to Occupy Tulsa organizers for the purposes of gathering information to address any public safety needs regarding the event. To date, organizers have been cooperative with the Tulsa Police Department.

Group organizers have been interviewed by the local TV media regarding their political agenda and beliefs. Organizers have also been interviewed on at least two local morning talk radio shows in Tulsa and their protests have been reported by the single major newspaper in our city. It appears that Occupy Tulsa is coordinating efforts with labor unions such as the AFL-CIO and some postal workers. Another demonstration is planned for this Saturday in downtown Tulsa.

At this time our interest is to address any public safety needs regarding traffic, crowd control, or disturbances that may arise. If information is reported to the Tulsa Police Dept regarding criminal activity or civil disobedience we will accordingly adjust our efforts. TPD's concern is focused on public safety issues, not any political beliefs or affiliations.

Vancouver

The "occupy" movement originated from a Vancouver based magazine called Adbusters. They like to subvert advertising and set up some well known events like "buy nothing day" and "TV Turn off week." They have made some documentary films against consumerism. They have been around since 1989.

We expect a large (1000 is the current estimated number) and fluid group to occupy the Vancouver Art Gallery lawn on Saturday October 15th. The protesters indicate a "diversity of tactics" which is concerning language as it echoes the Winter Olympic Heart Attack March when people were assaulted and local retail stores had their windows smashed.

The art gallery lawn is the property of the City of Vancouver and the City Manager has decided that no tents, cooking equipment or structures will be permitted.

For the most part, the organizers appear non-violent. We have spoken to self-identified leaders and they appreciate that a group this large will attract those who may use the crowd as a shield for criminal acts. They are not supportive of the extremists but when questioned, have little in the way of plans for dealing with them other than perhaps pointing them out to the police.

The planning meeting from a few days ago had 400 people attend and we heard from some union connections that they were unimpressed with some of the attendees as they seemed more interested in confrontations with the police as opposed to getting a message across. Union leaders have announced today that they will be a part of this protest and we hope they will serve as a moderating influence.

Based on what has occurred in other cities, we are expecting daily actions like marches, street occupations, or perhaps even bridge occupations. We have asked organizers what these actions and routes may be. They did not know but said they will try to keep the police informed. Any interaction between the moderate organizers and the VPD generates considerable animosity from the more hardcore protesters.

Virginia Beach

So far we are clear. Our sister city, Norfolk, has had a small protest and we are monitoring the event

Washington D.C.

Our rallies began on Thursday, October 6, 2011, when the coalition of anti-war and anti-corporation groups began holding anti-war and economic rallies opposing the United States military's involvement within Afghanistan and the current financial situation. There were two different locations where the rallies took place; Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square.

The Freedom Plaza group is currently about 100 to 150 participants; the McPherson contingent fluctuates in size from 150 to 200 participants (doubled recently). Since the beginning of the demonstrations, the two groups have converged and marched to different locations daily; such as the IMF Building - 1899 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., and the Martin Luther King, Jr., Memorial on Monday, October 10, 2011.

In November the groups began to target a broad array of venues to include the Washington Convention Center, closed homeless shelters and even the Newseum. On November 4, 2011, the Convention Center rally was an aggressive demonstration that consisted of demonstrators diving in front of vehicles, blocking traffic, blocking entrances to the building, physically challenging attendees and utilizing children during the demonstrations.

On November 17, 2011, Occupy protestors conducted a demonstration at the Key Bridge, this bridge is a major thoroughfare during rush hour between DC and Va. Protestors had threatened to take control of the bridge and block traffic. An extensive deployment of officers and other city resources were deployed and prevented all illegal activity.

On November 19, 2011, at the corner of 13th and K Street NW, protestors broke into a closed homeless shelter and hung a banner on the building. Thirteen protestors were arrested and charged with unlawful entry by DCPS officers. During this event protestors attempted to block alleys and streets. This was a combined demonstration between Occupy and ACORN.

Demonstration estimated size:

October 6, 2011, 2,500 to 3,000

October 7, 2011, 500 to 600

October 8, 2011, 400 to 500

October 9, 2011, 150 to 200

October 10, 2011, 100 to 150

October 11, 2011, 100 to 150

Currently the crowds are fluctuating between 75 and 200 daily.

As of November 21, 2011, both encampments have grown considerably; we believe this is due to the closure of camps in other jurisdictions. Many camps have begun traveling to DC by foot and are encouraging Occupiers to join the group as they travel toward DC.

Per the U.S. Park Police, the permit was extended for Freedom Plaza until December 30, 2011, with black out dates for times when other parties are holding permits for the parks. These dates are being dealt with on a case by case basis to determine if the permit holder will give up the permit to the Occupy DC movement or share the space with them.

The following participating agencies have played a role in the coordination and response to this event: In October demonstrations were very peaceful and uneventful with the exception of one incident at the Smithsonian. On Saturday, October 8, 2011, during a coordinated march from Freedom Plaza to the U.S. Capitol, the demonstrators were walking on Jefferson Drive, S.W., marched past the Smithsonian Museums. As they were marching by the Air and Space Museum at 1500 hours, several members of the group rushed the Air and Space Museum; trying to gain entry and by-passing security. Smithsonian Police tried to block them, and utilized OC spray to repel them before securing museum doors. No force or munitions were used by MPD. As a result of the incident, the museum was closed for the day. One person was arrested by Smithsonian Police for "Assault on a Police Order", and "Disorderly Conduct". Ten (10) persons were treated and released for exposure to OC spray.

During the last two weeks the Occupy movement has fluctuated between 150 to 250 protestors daily, with at least 150 who have taken residence within the two parks. The protests organizers for both groups have been less cooperative with police, the change in attitude and methodology is clearly related to events occurring nationally in regards to other encampments. A large portion of the demonstrators are now mental health consumers and homeless from the local and surrounding areas. At this point, organizers plan on staying indefinitely in order to be heard.

During the demonstrations we have experienced the common tactics utilized by these types of demonstrations:

- Spontaneous marches
- Chanting in front of government/private buildings that specialize in commerce, banking and general government services
- Periodic marching in the streets causing minor delays in traffic
- Surrounding buildings, attempting to block entrances and exits.

- Aggressively challenging citizens attending political events.
- Challenging police directives and taunting officers

Members of the Occupy DC Movement are keeping a watchful eye on the law enforcement interaction with the "Occupy" movement. The demonstrators who have occupied the two parks seem to have become more determined as time passes. They continue massive cooking operations and you can now see what appears to be laundry hanging throughout the camps as well. During the month of November, the Department of Health began series of inspections of the parks and issued materials advising what actions are unhealthy and may lead to disease. The Metropolitan Police department will support the DOH in their efforts in an ongoing basis. .

The MPD has actively been monitoring social media, Face Book and Twitter and several blogs. The monitoring of these sites has been beneficial and given the agency a deployment advantage relative to these demonstrations.

On December 4, 2011, Occupy DC members in McPherson Square attempted to raise a permanent 20 foot high wooden barn like structure in the park. There was a several hour long tense stand-off with police and protestors. DCRA Inspectors declared the structure unsafe and unpermitted and NPS Maintenance removed the structure. As a result of the incident, USPP had a total of 37 arrests.

December 7, 2011, arrests of SEIU "Take Back the Capitol" Protestors and Occupy DC Protestors on K Street. SEIU "Take Back the Capitol" protests had applied for a permit to hold a march and rally on K Street. MPD had met with the organizers of this event and they were forthcoming with the possibility of peaceful civil disobedience and they may have up to 11 arrests for failing to leave the street after being advised to do so. As a result of the SEIU "Take Back the Capitol" action 11 individuals we arrested.

Following the conclusion of the SEIU "Take Back the Capitol" action, Occupy DC came out and started blocking K Street at 15th and 14th Street, using human chains, tents, chairs. The protestors were very combative and non-compliant. As a result of their actions, MPD arrested a number of the protestors. THE FINAL ARREST TOTAL IS 63. 62 were charged with "Obstruction of Public Highway, DC Code 22-3321. 1 person was charged with APO Misdemeanor. The vast majority of the arrestee's were from outside of the DC Area, from as far away as Sacramento California, Washington State, Kansas, Wisconsin, NY, Hawaii, Anchorage Alaska, etc.

Occupy Movement MCCA City Status

MCCA President Chuck Ramsey asked to see if we could get a sense of the impact of the “Occupy Movement” in major cities. This topic will be on the “Roundtable Agenda” in Chicago on October 22, 2011 for discussion. We have received a significant number of responses from MCCA members in response to an October 11, 2011 email request – thanks for responding so quickly. Many of the responses to sent with a “reply to all” so you have seen those as they have been sent. We have compiled all the responses in one place for your information.¹ We are sending it to you through email and will have copies at the Chicago meeting. There are a number of cities that have not yet responded to the email that have been included based on news reports of “Occupy” activity – they are all identified in italics along with the source of the information. This is a link to a map on the Wall Street occupy website that <http://occupywallst.org/attendees/> that shows participants around the world.

It seems that for the most part the demonstrators have cooperated with police in an effort to have peaceful events. The numbers involved at any given time vary widely based on the event but just as groups are being formed in some cities others are seeing a decline in participation.

Police in a number of cities have invested considerable resources in managing the protests at a time when budgets have little room to accommodate these demands. There is concern that the movement will continue for some time to come placing additional burden on budgets.

Atlanta

In Atlanta, protesters were warned by the police on Tuesday that if, at 11 p.m., they were still in Woodruff Park, a small oasis in the heart of downtown, they would be arrested. Anyone who does not want to be arrested can simply leave the park, the police said. But protesters said they were told the same thing on Monday. Instead, dozens of police officers showed up but made no arrests. (Italics New York Times 10/12/2011)

¹ The responses have as I received them except for minor editing for clarity on a few. In a couple of cases the responses were too long to include in their entirety so they were edited down somewhat.

Austin

Demonstrations started October 6 on the City Hall Plaza, with crowds ranging from 50 in the middle of the night to 1500 in the afternoon and early evening. We have not had to make any arrests to date related to the protests and attempts to incite aggressive/violent action by the small number of black block anarchists have been soundly rejected by the majority of the protesters. The weather has been good here so we anticipate having to deal with the City Hall site and related marches for the foreseeable future.

Baltimore

The Occupy Baltimore protest started on October 4th 2011 and has continued through this day. The group currently has no timeline for ending the protest. The base of operations is located at McKeldin Square - a park next to Baltimore's Inner Harbor. There were between 150 and 200 protestors during the first night's events - which included a march against the construction of a new youth detention center. The protests now average 15-20 people at a time with some increases during group meetings or special events- all held at McKeldin Square. Most of the activity includes waving signs at passing cars. The protestors have been peaceful and the Baltimore Police Department has been working to ensure minimum confrontation with protesters. There have been no arrests at this time.

Boston

In Boston early Tuesday morning, about 100 protesters were arrested when the group expanded from its previous area in the center of Dewey Square in the financial district to a nearby part of the Rose Kennedy Greenway, part of the necklace of open park space through downtown. (Italics New York Times – 10/12/2011)

Calgary

There have been approximately 30 people involved in Occupy Calgary and they have only been protesting since October 8th. So far no problems and no arrests.

Canada

Canadian organizers are revving up their plans for the Occupy Wall Street-conceived global action day, the most adventurous idea yet for a movement that some experts say has the potential to trigger a major shift in the economic thinking of governments and big corporations.

The number of Occupy Canada cities for Saturday's rallies has grown to at least 15, while the international total is now more than 1,500. At least 20 cities also have Facebook pages dedicated solely to the movement.

As of Thursday noon ET, Occupy Canada's Facebook page garnered more than 12,000 "likes" and more than 17,700 people were "talking about this." Offshoot Occupy@ cities include Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, several other cities in B.C., Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie, Edmonton, Calgary, Saint John, Moncton and St. John's.(CBC 10/13/2011)

Charlotte

A group formed on October 8. Approximately 500 marched and staged a protest in front of Bank of America. We currently have 30 occupying the lawn area in front of Old City Hall. Their intent is to occupy until the end of the year. No arrest or disorderly issues at this point. They continue to meet with us up front to seek approval or guidance on what will and will not be allowed.

Chicago

In Chicago, protesters from Occupy Chicago joined forces on Tuesday with members of Action Now, a group concerned with vacant lots in the city's South and West Side neighborhoods. The combined groups piled at least a dozen garbage bags on the sidewalk in front of the Bank of America building in the Chicago Loop, along with couches and other trash that they said had been pulled from a foreclosed property. Five women, ranging in age from 56 to 80, were arrested there after they went inside the bank lobby and scattered trash. (Italics New York Times 10/12/2011)

Cleveland

Start up date: October 6, 2011 thru October 17, 2011 (24 / 7)

Participants: 50 – 300, depending on day and time

There have been no problems or arrests at the current time.

Colorado Springs

Colorado Springs has had a group for about a week. They are occupying a downtown city park, and have been challenging enforcement of the city's no camping ordinance enacted to deal with homeless encampments. There is increasing pressure from elected officials to apply the ordinance. This week, police department staff met with organizers, who secretly videotaped the meeting and released it to the press, which then reported how reasonable and civil the police behaved in the meeting and how unyielding the self designated leader of the protestors was. The Department's Homeless Outreach Team, our SME's on the ordinance, will begin applying gentle pressure over the weekend, may lead to warnings and even arrests next week, but intending on serve and release with seizing of the tents, etc as evidence.

Denver

Occupy Denver began the last week of September with approximately a dozen protesters. The middle of last week the protesters erected their first shelter in Veterans Park located between the City and County Building and the State Capital. The park is State property. The group has grown to approximately 25 tents/shelters. No enforcement action has been taken to date for violation of park rules. On Saturday, October 8th approximately 300 – 400 protesters marched through the central business district and encircled the Federal Reserve Bank. The protest went peacefully and the event organizers worked with the police. There were a handful of protesters that tried to get the main group to become more adversarial towards the police but the main group rejected them. The protesters are planning weekly Saturday marches indefinitely.

Dozens of police in riot gear have herded Wall Street protesters away from the Colorado state Capitol grounds, arresting about two dozen and dismantling their encampment. Most retreated without resisting. Some chanted “Peaceful!” or “Shameful!” as police moved in early Friday. The protesters have been camped at the Capitol for about three weeks in support of the national Occupy Wall Street movement. Officers dragged some from the camp and led others by the arm. Police carried stragglers to small groundskeeper tractors and drove them away. (Italics Washington Post 10/14/2011)

Ft. Worth

We have a small group in downtown Fort Worth. They started Monday, October 10th with about 50 attendees. They walked peacefully and did not ‘camp’ (prohibited here). I did not see much of a group there this morning... No arrests so far.

Honolulu

The group in Honolulu has been meeting daily since October 7th. Unlike other groups across the nation, the Honolulu group has not camped overnight as part of their protest activity. The number of participants has varied from 25 to 100 on given dates/times. The group has continued to remain peaceful and no arrests have been made.

Houston

We have been dealing with the protesters for about two weeks. Crowds range from about 100 during the night to approximately 1500 during the day. Crowds are increasing each week

Indianapolis

Occupy Indianapolis began last Saturday (October 8) with about 800 people walking around the state capitol building and our main War Memorial in the heart of downtown. It was mostly peaceful and very disorganized. The number dropped on Sunday, with even less on Monday. Now we have about 15 people camping on the grounds of the state capitol. No arrests or citations have been issued. We have been able to keep the visible police presence to a minimum. Intel continues to report that due to the current state of disorganization, few are staying to participate.

Las Vegas

We have had one event so far and it was about 300 people. We had no arrests in the event and it was peaceful. We have been in contact with organizers for a future event but as of this morning no event has been planned

Los Angeles

In Los Angeles, where protesters as recently as last week were dominated by young people in what seemed a tie-dye and guitar-circle subculture, a second wave of older protesters and homeless people has gravitated toward the encampment at City Hall...(Italics - New York Times 10/12/2011)

Long Beach

The Occupy Long Beach protests began on Tuesday, October 4, in front of City Hall. There were approximately 30 people. Approximately 60-80 people attended a march on October 8 with anti-bank, corporate greed signs. The march culminated with an open mike session in a local park. The group has plans to continue demonstrating and begin occupation (camping/tenting) So far the group has been cooperative.

Louisville

Occupy Louisville, is very disorganized. They have no leadership and no finances for the permits. They have put in several permit applications for two different locations under the names of various persons. The size of the group has varied and may have even dwindled as they have gone along. For the most part, they are trying to be orderly and lawful and work in conjunction with the police.

Milwaukee

Milwaukee has one scheduled for Saturday, October 15 as well. Crowd estimates are all over the map as the Milwaukee gathering is particularly leaderless at this time. We are in conversations with members of their "General Assembly (groups of 50-60 who meet in one of our parks)" but things are very much up in the air at this time.

Minneapolis

The numbers vary. Largest about 500 – lowest at night down to about 25 sleeping at the site. The site is the county plaza. Sheriff has security for it. They do march occasionally – and that falls to the PD. So far no arrests

Montreal

A group calling itself "occupons Montreal" (occupy Montreal) was spontaneously created following the protests in New York. Like many other groups they use Facebook to get their message out. Participants for the October 15th occupation are invited to bring warm clothing, food, tents, generators ect. Indicating that they intend to be there for a long time. The group has held two meetings so far. On both occasions, approximately 30 people showed up. According to the info we obtained, organizers seem to have very little or no means and have not clearly indicated the length of their planned occupation.

So far approximately 3000 people have mentioned their intention to participate. This number appears rather "ambitious" given the type of organization we have seen. It should also be noted that the American economic stakes are not exactly the same as the ones in Canada

Nashville

The group(s) have been primarily active in a large open area immediately outside the state legislative plaza area in downtown Nashville. Being state property, this is policed by the Tennessee Highway Patrol. At this moment, there are less than 15-20. The group has ranged in size up to 200+. Smaller groups have walked to or met at other locations close to downtown or in a large park a few miles from downtown. These groups have been monitored by the precinct commanders and other support elements. No significant issues have occurred and no arrests directly related to the protests have been made. The event continues to focus at the legislative plaza area and the MNP is supporting the Highway Patrol as necessary while also closely monitoring other areas and available information.

New York

In New York, a "Millionaire's March" of about 400 people affiliated with Occupy Wall Street wound its way through Upper East Side on Tuesday afternoon, with participants protesting outside the homes of financial titans... The march was peaceful, if noisy, with protesters chanting, trumpeting and drumming their way along Fifth Avenue and Park Avenue under the watchful gaze of dozens of police officers... (New York Times 10/12/2011)

Oakland

Oakland has an encampment established since 1700 hrs on Monday 10/10/2011. The encampment is on the front lawn of City Hall. Yesterday's initial event had a crowd of approximately 1000. However, today's numbers are much smaller, with about 40 tents and occupants. No issues have arisen yet, nonetheless, we anticipate marching this evening and shutting down of ingress and egress routes for a period of time.

Ottawa

Organizers in Ottawa are in the early planning stages. They are primarily using social media such as Facebook to educate, recruit, mobilize and organize supporters. Organizers are using the banner "Occupy Ottawa". At this time, Kevin DONAGHY has been identified as leader of "Occupy Ottawa". DONAGHY is part of the grassroots organization Ecology Ottawa and was recently arrested during the Greenpeace Tar Sands demonstration held on Parliament Hill on September 26, 2011. Open source also revealed that DONAGHY actively participated in the G8-G20 demonstrations.

Occupy Ottawa held its first planning meeting on October 6 where organizers reported that 150 people attended to sort out the logistics of the demonstration. The movement attracted a wide range of activists from students, to the unemployed, to grass-root groups, independent activists and multi-issue advocates.

The demonstration will take place on Saturday October 15, 2011 at 12 pm at Confederation Park in Ottawa. Activists will hold a General Assembly where a list of demands will be put together, set up camp in Confederation Park and organize marches to various sites for protests (locations undetermined at this time).

The group shows a higher level of structure and organization than have noted in the past. Already, the group has formed 20 organizing sub-groups who are working on specific mandates and tasks.

Police Liaison Team has made contact and in ongoing negotiations with organizers. The protestors are voting (October 12, 2011) to decide whether police members will be allowed to attend a training session (October 13, 2011).

Philadelphia

"Occupy Philadelphia" movement. Numbers have fluctuated from a few hundred to approximately 1500. They have established a "Base Camp" on the west side of our City Hall in our downtown area. No arrests as of today (10/11/2011) but more and more marches etc being planned.

The city has spent more than $400,000 in police costs to deal with the Occupy Philadelphia protest. The figure includes $164,000 in police overtime through the first five days of the protest - the bulk of the city's out-of-pocket costs - and an additional $237,000 for the plainclothes and uniformed officers stationed at Dilworth Plaza and other City Hall locations on their regular shifts. (italics from Philly.com 10/12/2011)

Oklahoma City

We had a group, approximately 200, meet in downtown OKC on October 10th. The group, OCCUPYOKC, plans on protesting the next three days. They have promoted it as peaceful and the Police Department has been working with the organizer to reduce potential disruptions to businesses and traffic. At this point we don't know how large the group will be or how long it will last.

Portland

Portland police cleared Occupy Portland protesters from Southwest Third Avenue and Main Street shortly before 6 a.m., making eight, uneventful arrests.

But police and Mayor Sam Adams reassured protesters that the encampments that have taken over a pair of public squares will be allowed to remain indefinitely. ... the police bureau has dedicated "considerable resources" to patrolling the encampment. He said officers have attended general assembly meetings every day to stay in communication with the protesters. (Italics - The Oregonian 10/13/2011)

Raleigh

An event is scheduled in Raleigh, N.C. for October 15th. We expect a large group of people, at least 750-1000, to converge on the State Capitol

Sacramento

After 35 arrests in six days for violating a city camping ordinance, a group of Occupy Sacramento protesters marched to City Hall Tuesday to ask City Council members for an exception to the law so they can have 24-hour access to Cesar Chavez Plaza for peaceable demonstration. According to police spokesman Andrew Pettit, interactions between police officers and the demonstrators over the past week have been "peaceful," and the demonstrators have been "very cooperative." Salt Lake City

On October 6th 2011 “OccupySLC” gathered at the State Capitol (approximately 200 people) and marched throughout the financial district of the city. The march concluded at Pioneer Park where several of their members have established a base camp. As of 10/11/2011, the camp consists of approximately 60 tents and 100-150 people. Daily marches are scheduled throughout the downtown area. All activities have been law abiding with no police action required.

They have scheduled an event on Friday, October 14th and are inviting the Mayor, members of the City Council and all interested citizens to tour their camp. They also have scheduled a live “Blues Band” to perform at the event. Based on Facebook membership, they anticipate upwards of 1500 people in attendance.

In an attempt to provide guidance and standard of conduct, we issue the protestors a 24-hour permit that is reviewed and reissued each day. Although the group wishes to remain leaderless, during their daily meeting they accept the permit by acclamation and agree to abide by the restrictions.

San Diego

In San Diego, the group formed on Friday, 10/7/11, about 1400 demonstrators. They marched to City Hall where they are currently camped out. The group is very cooperative and agreed to limit the number of tents. Only one arrest for drunk in public. The hard core group is about 150 college age demonstrators. We are working with the demonstrators to prevent a major incident that would turn San Diego into ground zero for the national press. The movement is beginning to lose ground without a police involved incident.

San Diego police on Thursday afternoon ordered Occupy San Diego protesters to remove their tents and other property from the plaza behind City Hall by midnight or face arrest. Two dozen police surrounded the plaza, where several hundred protesters have been camped in tents since the weekend. Small groups of protesters, after listening to Assistant Chief Boyd Long, huddled to discuss their next move. (Italics Los Angeles Times 10/13/2011)

San Francisco

Occupy SF has been active for approximately the past two weeks. They occupy the street in front of the Federal Reserve Building and have turned down offers from the city for assistance. Fire inspectors have ordered them to take down structures that are hazards and Public Works with police support have removed nine truckloads of material – one arrest was made for assault on an officer. Police are the primary facilitators for First Amendment activity – the group has been difficult to negotiate with because they prefer to remain leaderless. Police provided participants a letter that outlined concerns, issues and expectations. Local labor groups have joined the demonstrations. The crowd varies from about 75 to 1000 depending on the designated marches. Twelve arrests were made the morning of 10/12 for blocking access at a Wells Fargo bank. The arrests were coordinated with the bank and cooperating arrestees – no force was used – they were cited later and released.

San Jose

The Occupy San Jose protest began Sunday, October 2nd. The number of protesters has ranged from a few dozen to approximately 100 during the week. The group has established a small base camp in our City Hall Plaza with 5 tents and some chairs. The group has been generally cooperative with law enforcement; however we have issued 5 citations for illegal camping.

Seattle

In Seattle, the protest began last Wednesday October 5th. It has centered at Westlake Park which is adjacent to a large commercial center. The protests have gone from about one hundred to over one thousand participants in a march last Saturday. The group has been relatively peaceful however we have made a total of 27 arrests so far mainly for interfering with park employees as they tried to clean the park up. Our issue has revolved around the camping in the park which is prohibited by ordinance. Our mayor has invited the group that has been camping overnight to move to City Hall Plaza with few takers so far.

St. Louis

We have about 30 core protesters in our downtown area. They have been camped out for 2 weeks now. They have been peaceful. However, on the third day we did enforce the park curfew ordinance with 10 arrests, no problems since then. We have come to an agreement that they will obey the law and we will leave them alone.

Toronto

Toronto has a group, estimated to have about 800 signed up (on Facebook) to begin a demo, entitled Occupy Toronto, on Saturday, October 15. We are seeing some peripheral interest from Organized labour to get involved, but at the present time there is no clear leadership. We had been meeting with some of the groups involved but they have suddenly cut off all communication with the police, on the pretext that they do not wish to assume responsibility for the movement or speak on its behalf.

We have a fairly well organized Anarchist movement here (now there is a contradiction) that is trying to influence the group to more direct action. We are monitoring closely and preparing for whatever comes.

Tucson

There is currently an "Occupation" that is scheduled to start this Saturday, Oct. 15, in Tucson. They are projecting 500 people, but our hope is they are overinflating the numbers. We are meeting with the organizers to try and set some ground rules.

Tulsa

Occupy Tulsa has been involved in two demonstrations in Tulsa, OK. The first demonstration was near the end of Sept and the second was held October 7th. Neither demonstration has resulted in any criminal activity or disturbances. The first demonstration was outside a Tulsa bank and was attended by about 10 people. The October 7th demonstration was attended by about 150 people. Currently officers from my unit have been in contact with event organizers. Organizers have reported they wish to keep demonstrations peaceful. The dialogue indicates they would be willing to work with the Tulsa Police Dept. for any public safety concerns. In addition, organizers report they do not wish to have "trouble causers" as part of their group. In addition to my unit - officers from the Gilcrease Division (one of our patrol divisions) have spoken to Occupy Tulsa organizers for the purposes of gathering information to address any public safety needs regarding the event. To date, organizers have been cooperative with the Tulsa Police Department.

Group organizers have been interviewed by the local TV media regarding their political agenda and beliefs. Organizers have also been interviewed on at least two local morning talk radio shows in Tulsa and their protests have been reported by the single major newspaper in our city. It appears that Occupy Tulsa is coordinating efforts with labor unions such as the AFL-CIO and some postal workers. Another demonstration is planned for this Saturday in downtown Tulsa.

At this time our interest is to address any public safety needs regarding traffic, crowd control, or disturbances that may arise. If information is reported to the Tulsa Police Dept regarding criminal activity or civil disobedience we will accordingly adjust our efforts. TPD's concern is focused on public safety issues, not any political beliefs or affiliations.

Vancouver

The "occupy" movement originated from a Vancouver based magazine called Adbusters. They like to subvert advertising and set up some well known events like "buy nothing day" and "TV Turn off week." They have made some documentary films against consumerism. They have been around since 1989.

We expect a large (1000 is the current estimated number) and fluid group to occupy the Vancouver Art Gallery lawn on Saturday October 15th. The protesters indicate a "diversity of tactics" which is concerning language as it echoes the Winter Olympic Heart Attack March when people were assaulted and local retail stores had their windows smashed.

The art gallery lawn is the property of the City of Vancouver and the City Manager has decided that no tents, cooking equipment or structures will be permitted.

For the most part, the organizers appear non-violent. We have spoken to self-identified leaders and they appreciate that a group this large will attract those who may use the crowd as a shield for criminal acts. They are not supportive of the extremists but when questioned, have little in the way of plans for dealing with them other than perhaps pointing them out to the police.

The planning meeting from a few days ago had 400 people attend and we heard from some union connections that they were unimpressed with some of the attendees as they seemed more interested in confrontations with the police as opposed to getting a message across. Union leaders have announced today that they will be a part of this protest and we hope they will serve as a moderating influence.

Based on what has occurred in other cities, we are expecting daily actions like marches, street occupations, or perhaps even bridge occupations. We have asked organizers what these actions and routes may be. They did not know but said they will try to keep the police informed. Any interaction between the moderate organizers and the VPD generates considerable animosity from the more hardcore protesters.

Virginia Beach

So far we are clear. Our sister city, Norfolk, has had a small protest and we are monitoring the event

Washington D.C.

Our rallies began on Thursday, October 6, 2011, when the coalition of anti-war and anti-corporation groups began holding anti-war and economic rallies opposing the United States military's involvement within Afghanistan and the current financial situation. There were two different locations where the rallies took place; Freedom Plaza and McPherson Square.

The Freedom Plaza group is currently about 100 to 150 participants; the McPherson contingent fluctuates in size from 150 to 200 participants (doubled recently). Since the beginning of the demonstrations, the two groups have converged and marched to different locations daily; such as the IMF Building - 1899 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., and the Martin Luther King, Jr., Memorial on Monday, October 10, 2011.

In November the groups began to target a broad array of venues to include the Washington Convention Center, closed homeless shelters and even the Newseum. On November 4, 2011, the Convention Center rally was an aggressive demonstration that consisted of demonstrators diving in front of vehicles, blocking traffic, blocking entrances to the building, physically challenging attendees and utilizing children during the demonstrations.

On November 17, 2011, Occupy protestors conducted a demonstration at the Key Bridge, this bridge is a major thoroughfare during rush hour between DC and Va. Protestors had threatened to take control of the bridge and block traffic. An extensive deployment of officers and other city resources were deployed and prevented all illegal activity.

On November 19, 2011, at the corner of 13th and K Street NW, protestors broke into a closed homeless shelter and hung a banner on the building. Thirteen protestors were arrested and charged with unlawful entry by DCPS officers. During this event protestors attempted to block alleys and streets. This was a combined demonstration between Occupy and ACORN.

Demonstration estimated size:

October 6, 2011, 2,500 to 3,000

October 7, 2011, 500 to 600

October 8, 2011, 400 to 500

October 9, 2011, 150 to 200

October 10, 2011, 100 to 150

October 11, 2011, 100 to 150

Currently the crowds are fluctuating between 75 and 200 daily.

As of November 21, 2011, both encampments have grown considerably; we believe this is due to the closure of camps in other jurisdictions. Many camps have begun traveling to DC by foot and are encouraging Occupiers to join the group as they travel toward DC.

Per the U.S. Park Police, the permit was extended for Freedom Plaza until December 30, 2011, with black out dates for times when other parties are holding permits for the parks. These dates are being dealt with on a case by case basis to determine if the permit holder will give up the permit to the Occupy DC movement or share the space with them.

The following participating agencies have played a role in the coordination and response to this event: In October demonstrations were very peaceful and uneventful with the exception of one incident at the Smithsonian. On Saturday, October 8, 2011, during a coordinated march from Freedom Plaza to the U.S. Capitol, the demonstrators were walking on Jefferson Drive, S.W., marched past the Smithsonian Museums. As they were marching by the Air and Space Museum at 1500 hours, several members of the group rushed the Air and Space Museum; trying to gain entry and by-passing security. Smithsonian Police tried to block them, and utilized OC spray to repel them before securing museum doors. No force or munitions were used by MPD. As a result of the incident, the museum was closed for the day. One person was arrested by Smithsonian Police for "Assault on a Police Order", and "Disorderly Conduct". Ten (10) persons were treated and released for exposure to OC spray.

During the last two weeks the Occupy movement has fluctuated between 150 to 250 protestors daily, with at least 150 who have taken residence within the two parks. The protests organizers for both groups have been less cooperative with police, the change in attitude and methodology is clearly related to events occurring nationally in regards to other encampments. A large portion of the demonstrators are now mental health consumers and homeless from the local and surrounding areas. At this point, organizers plan on staying indefinitely in order to be heard.

During the demonstrations we have experienced the common tactics utilized by these types of demonstrations:

- Spontaneous marches
- Chanting in front of government/private buildings that specialize in commerce, banking and general government services
- Periodic marching in the streets causing minor delays in traffic
- Surrounding buildings, attempting to block entrances and exits.

- Aggressively challenging citizens attending political events.
- Challenging police directives and taunting officers

Members of the Occupy DC Movement are keeping a watchful eye on the law enforcement interaction with the "Occupy" movement. The demonstrators who have occupied the two parks seem to have become more determined as time passes. They continue massive cooking operations and you can now see what appears to be laundry hanging throughout the camps as well. During the month of November, the Department of Health began series of inspections of the parks and issued materials advising what actions are unhealthy and may lead to disease. The Metropolitan Police department will support the DOH in their efforts in an ongoing basis. .

The MPD has actively been monitoring social media, Face Book and Twitter and several blogs. The monitoring of these sites has been beneficial and given the agency a deployment advantage relative to these demonstrations.

On December 4, 2011, Occupy DC members in McPherson Square attempted to raise a permanent 20 foot high wooden barn like structure in the park. There was a several hour long tense stand-off with police and protestors. DCRA Inspectors declared the structure unsafe and unpermitted and NPS Maintenance removed the structure. As a result of the incident, USPP had a total of 37 arrests.

December 7, 2011, arrests of SEIU "Take Back the Capitol" Protestors and Occupy DC Protestors on K Street. SEIU "Take Back the Capitol" protests had applied for a permit to hold a march and rally on K Street. MPD had met with the organizers of this event and they were forthcoming with the possibility of peaceful civil disobedience and they may have up to 11 arrests for failing to leave the street after being advised to do so. As a result of the SEIU "Take Back the Capitol" action 11 individuals we arrested.

Following the conclusion of the SEIU "Take Back the Capitol" action, Occupy DC came out and started blocking K Street at 15th and 14th Street, using human chains, tents, chairs. The protestors were very combative and non-compliant. As a result of their actions, MPD arrested a number of the protestors. THE FINAL ARREST TOTAL IS 63. 62 were charged with "Obstruction of Public Highway, DC Code 22-3321. 1 person was charged with APO Misdemeanor. The vast majority of the arrestee's were from outside of the DC Area, from as far away as Sacramento California, Washington State, Kansas, Wisconsin, NY, Hawaii, Anchorage Alaska, etc.
